ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

My editor, Kathleen Warnock, with her guidance and support, helped make working on this book a pleasure rather than a chore and for that I am very thankful. I'd also like to thank Michelle Krumland for her tireless fact checking of this very fact-filled book.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Brian Silverman is a freelance writer whose work has been published in Saveur, The New Yorker, Caribbean Travel & Life, Islands, Four Seasons. Among the many topics he writes about are food, travel, sports, and music. He is the author of numerous books including Going, Going, Gone: The History, Lore, and Mystique of the Home Run, and the Twentieth Century Treasury of Sports. For Frommer's, he has written Complete, Portable, and Budget guides to New York City, as well as New York City For Dummies. He lives in Manhattan with his wife and children.

AN INVITATION TO THE READER

In researching this book, we discovered many wonderful places—hotels, restaurants, shops, and more. We're sure you'll find others. Please tell us about them, so we can share the information with your fellow travelers in upcoming editions. If you were disappointed with a recommendation, we'd love to know that, too. Please write to:

AN ADDITIONAL NOTE

Please be advised that travel information is subject to change at any time—and this is especially true of prices. We therefore suggest that you write or call ahead for confirmation when making your travel plans. The authors, editors, and publisher cannot be held responsible for the experiences of readers while traveling. Your safety is important to us, however, so we encourage you to stay alert and be aware of your surroundings. Keep a close eye on cameras, purses, and wallets, all favorite targets of thieves and pickpockets.

FROMMER'S STAR RATINGS, ICONS & ABBREVIATIONS

Every hotel, restaurant, and attraction listing in this guide has been ranked for quality, value, service, amenities, and special features using a star-rating system. In country, state, and regional guides, we also rate towns and regions to help you narrow down your choices and budget your time accordingly. Hotels and restaurants are rated on a scale of zero (recommended) to three stars (exceptional). Attractions, shopping, nightlife, towns, and regions are rated according to the following scale: zero stars (recommended), one star (highly recommended), two stars (very highly recommended), and three stars (must-see).

In addition to the star-rating system, we also use seven feature icons that point you to the great deals, in-the-know advice, and unique experiences that separate travelers from tourists. Throughout the book, look for:

-  Finds Special finds—those places only insiders know about
-  Fun Fact Fun facts—details that make travelers more informed and their trips more fun
-  Kids Best bets for kids and advice for the whole family
-  Moments Special moments—those experiences that memories are made of
-  Overrated Places or experiences not worth your time or money
-  Tips Insider tips—great ways to save time and money
-  Value Great values—where to get the best deals

The following abbreviations are used for credit cards:

AE	American Express	DISC	Discover	V	Visa
DC	Diners Club	MC	MasterCard

Planning Your Trip to New York City

In the pages that follow, you'll find everything you need to know to handle the practical details of planning your trip in advance: airlines and area airports, a calendar of events, resources for those of you with special needs, and much more.

1 Visitor Information

For information before you leave home, your best source (besides this book!) is NYC & Company, the organization that fronts the New York Convention & Visitors Bureau (NYCVB), 810 Seventh Ave., New York, NY 10019. You can call ☎ 800/NYC-VISIT to order the Official NYC Visitor Kit, which contains the Official NYC Guide detailing hotels, restaurants, theaters, attractions, events, and more; a foldout map; a newsletter on the latest goings-on; and brochures on attractions and services. The guide is free and will arrive in 7 to 10 days. (Note: I've received complaints that the packets sometimes take longer to arrive.)

You can also find a wealth of free information on the bureau's website, www.nycvisit.com. To speak with a live person who can answer specific questions, call ☎ 212/484-1222, staffed weekdays from 8:30am to 6pm EST, weekends from 9am to 5pm EST.

For visitor-center and information-desk locations once you arrive, see "Visitor Information" in chapter 2.

FOR U.K. VISITORS The NYCVB Visitor Information Center is at 36 Southwark Bridge Rd., London, SE1 9EU (☎ 020/7202 6367). You can order the Official NYC Visitor Kit by sending an A5-size self-addressed envelope and 72p postage to the above address. For New York-bound travelers in London, the center also offers free one-on-one travel-planning assistance.

2 When to Go

Summer or winter, rain or shine, there's always great stuff going on in New York City, so there's no real "best" time to go.

Culture hounds might come in fall, winter, and early spring, when the theater and performing-arts seasons reach their heights. During summer, many cultural institutions, especially Lincoln Center, offer free, alfresco entertainment. Those who want to see the biggest Broadway hits usually have the best luck getting tickets in the slower months of January and February.

Gourmands might find it easiest to land the best tables during July and August, when New Yorkers escape the city on weekends. If you prefer to walk every city block to take in the sights, spring and fall usually offer the mildest and most pleasant weather.

New York is a nonstop holiday party from early December through the start of the New Year. However, keep in mind that hotel prices go sky high during the winter holidays, and the crowds are almost intolerable. If you'd rather have more of the city to yourself—better chances at restaurant reservations and shows, easier access to museums and other attractions—choose another time of year to visit.

Bargain hunters might want to visit in winter, between the first of the year and early April. Sure, you might have to bear some cold weather, but that's when hotels are suffering from the post-holiday blues, and rooms often go for a relative song—a song in this case meaning a room with a private bathroom for as little as $150. AAA cardholders can even do better in many cases (generally a 5%–10% savings if the hotel offers a AAA discount). However, be aware that the occasional convention or event, such as February's annual Fashion Week, can sometimes throw a wrench in your winter savings plans. Spring and fall are traditionally the busiest and most expensive seasons after holiday time. Don't expect hotels to be handing you deals, but you still might be able to negotiate a decent rate.

The city is drawing more families, and they usually visit in the summer. Still, the prospect of heat and humidity keeps some away, making July and the first half of August a significantly cheaper time to visit than later in the year; good hotel deals are often available.

At Christmas, expect to pay top dollar for everything. The first 2 weeks of December—the shopping weeks—are the worst when it comes to scoring an affordable hotel room; that's when shoppers from around the world converge on the town to catch the holiday spirit and spend, spend, spend. But Thanksgiving can be a great time to come: Business travelers have gone home for the holiday, and the holiday shoppers haven't arrived. It's a little-known secret that most hotels away from the Thanksgiving Day Parade route have empty rooms, and are usually willing to make deals to fill them.

If you want to know how to pack just before you go, check the Weather Channel's online 10-day forecast at www.weather.com; I like to balance it against CNN's online 5-day forecast at www.cnn.com/weather. You can also get the local weather by calling ☎ 212/976-1212.

NEW YORK CITY CALENDAR OF EVENTS

The following information is always subject to change. Always confirm information before you make plans around a specific event. Call the venue or the NYCVB at ☎ 212/484-1222, go to www.nycvisit.com, or pick up a copy of Time Out New York once you arrive in the city for the latest details.

January

Restaurant Week. Twice a year some of the best restaurants in New York offer three-course prix-fixe meals at almost affordable prices. At lunch, the deal is $24.07 (as in 24/7), while dinner is $35. Some restaurants participating in 2007 included stalwarts such as Esca, LeCirque, and Union Square Café. Call ☎ 212/484-1222 for info or visit www.nycvisit.com. Late January.

February

Chinese New Year. Chinatown rings in its own New Year (based on a lunar calendar) with 2 weeks of celebrations, including parades with dragon and lion dancers, plus vivid costumes of all kinds. The parade usually winds throughout Chinatown along Mott, Canal, and Bayard streets, and along East Broadway. Call the NYCVB hot line at ☎ 212/484-1222 or the Asian American Business Development Center at ☎ 212/966-0100. Chinese New Year falls on February 7 in 2008, and it's the Year of the Rat.

Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show. The ultimate purebred pooch fest. Some 30,000 dog fanciers congregate at Madison Square Garden for the 130th "World Series of Dogdom." All 2,500 dogs are American Kennel Club Champions of Record, competing for the "Best in Show" trophy. Check the website www.westminsterkennelclub.org for information. Tickets are available after January 1 through Ticketmaster (☎ 212/307-7171; www.ticketmaster.com). February 11 and 12, 2008.

March

St. Patrick's Day Parade. More than 150,000 marchers join in the world's largest civilian parade, as Fifth Avenue from 44th to 86th streets rings with the sounds of bands and bagpipes. The parade usually starts at 11am, but go early if you want a good spot. Call ☎ 212/484-1222. March 17.

Easter Parade. This isn't a traditional parade, per se: There are no marching bands, no baton twirlers, no protesters. Once upon a time, New York's gentry came out to show off their tasteful but discreet toppers. Today, if you were planning to slip on a tasteful little number—say something delicately woven in straw with a simple flower or two that matches your gloves—you will not be the grandest lady in this springtime hike along Fifth Avenue from 48th to 57th streets. It's more about flamboyant exhibitionism, with hats and costumes that get more outrageous every year—and anybody can join in for free. The parade runs Easter Sunday from about 10am to 3 or 4pm. Call ☎ 212/484-1222. March 23, 2008.

April

New York International Auto Show. Here's the irony: You don't need a car in New York, yet this is the largest car show in the United States. Held at the Javits Center, you'll see many concept cars that will never roll off the assembly line, but they're fun to dream about nonetheless. Call ☎ 718/746-5300 or visit www.autoshowny.com or www.javitscenter.com. Early April.

Tribeca Film Festival. Conceived in 2002 by the unofficial mayor of TriBeCa, Robert De Niro, the festival has grown in popularity and prestige every year. In 2007, the 12-day festival featured over 250 films and included special events like a Family Festival Street Fair. Call ☎ 212/941-2400 or visit www.tribecafilmfestival.org. Last week in April.

May

Fleet Week. About 10,000 Navy and Coast Guard personnel are "at liberty" in New York for the annual Fleet Week at the end of May. Usually from 1 to 4pm daily, you can watch the ships and aircraft carriers as they dock at the piers on the west side of Manhattan, tour them with on-duty personnel, and watch some dramatic exhibitions by the U.S. Marines. Even if you don't take in any of the events, you'll know it's Fleet Week because those 10,000 sailors invade Midtown in their starched white uniforms. It's wonderful—just like On the Town come to life. Call ☎ 212/245-0072 or visit www.fleetweek.com (your best source for a full list of events) or www.intrepidmuseum.org. Late May.

June

Museum Mile Festival. Fifth Avenue from 82nd to 104th streets is closed to cars from 6 to 9pm as 20,000-plus strollers enjoy live music, from Broadway tunes to string quartets; street entertainers; and free admission to nine Museum Mile institutions, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Guggenheim. Call ☎ 212/606-2296 or any of the participating institutions for details. Usually the second Tuesday in June.

Lots of Parades. During the summer there is a parade for almost every nationality or ethnicity. June is the month for (among others) the sometimes raucous but usually very colorful Puerto Rican Day Parade and the Lesbian and Gay Pride Week and March, where Fifth Avenue goes wild as the GLBT community celebrates with bands, marching groups, floats, and plenty of panache. The parade starts on upper Fifth Avenue around 52nd Street and continues into the Village. Call ☎ 212/807-7433 or check www.hopinc.org. Mid- to late June.

Shakespeare in the Park. The Delacorte Theater in Central Park is the setting for first-rate free performances under the stars. For details, see “A Midsummer’s Night in Central park,” in chapter 6. Call ☎ 212/539-8500 or visit www.publictheater.org. June through August.

July

Independence Day Harbor Festival and Fourth of July Fireworks Spectacular. Start the day amid the patriotic crowds at the Great July Fourth Festival in lower Manhattan, and then catch Macy’s great fireworks extravaganza (one of the country’s most fantastic) over the East River (the best vantage point is from FDR Dr., which closes to traffic several hours before sunset). Call ☎ 212/484-1222 or Macy’s Visitor Center at 212/494-2922. July 4th.

Lincoln Center Festival 2008. This festival celebrates the best of the performing arts from all over—theater, ballet, contemporary dance, opera, nouveau circus performances, even puppet and media-based art. Recent editions have featured performances by Ornette Coleman, the Royal Opera, the Royal Ballet, and the New York Philharmonic. Schedules are available in mid-March, and tickets go on sale in May or early June. Call ☎ 212/546-2656 or visit www.lincolncenter.org. Throughout July.

Midsummer Night’s Swing. Dancing duos head to the Lincoln Center’s Josie Robertson Plaza for evenings of big-band swing, salsa, and tango under the stars to the sounds of live bands. Dance lessons are offered with purchase of a ticket. Call ☎ 212/875-5766 or visit www.lincolncenter.org. July and August.

August

Lincoln Center Out of Doors. This series of free music and dance performances is held outdoors on the plazas of Lincoln Center. Call ☎ 212/LINCOLN (212/546-2656) or visit www.lincolncenter.org for this year's schedule (usually available in mid-July). Throughout August.

Harlem Week. The world's largest black and Hispanic cultural festival spans the whole month to include the Black Film Festival, the Harlem Jazz and Music Festival, and the Taste of Harlem Food Festival. Expect a full slate of music, from gospel to hip-hop, and other festivities. Call ☎ 212/484-1222. Through August.

U.S. Open Tennis Championships. The final Grand Slam event of the tennis season is held at the Arthur Ashe Stadium at the USTA National Tennis Center, the largest public tennis center in the world, at Flushing Meadows Park in Queens. Tickets go on sale in May or early June. Call ☎ 866/OPEN-TIX or 718/760-6200 well in advance; visit www.usopen.org or www.usta.com for additional information. Two weeks around Labor Day.

September

West Indian–American Day Parade. This annual Brooklyn event is New York's largest and best street celebration. Come for the costumes, rhythms (soca, calypso, reggae), colors, folklore, food (jerk chicken, oxtail soup, Caribbean soul food), and 2 million hip-shaking revelers. The route usually runs along Eastern Parkway from Utica Avenue to Grand Army Plaza. Call ☎ 718/467-1797; www.wiadca.org. Labor Day.

New York Film Festival. Legendary hits Pulp Fiction and Mean Streets had their U.S. premieres at the Film Society of Lincoln Center's 2-week festival, a major stop on the film-fest circuit. Screenings are held in Lincoln Center venues; advance tickets are a good bet always, and a necessity for certain events (especially evening and weekend screenings). Call ☎ 212/875-5166 (for recorded information), 212/875-5050 for the box office, or check out www.filmlinc.com. Late September to early October.

October

Ice-Skating. Show off your skating style in the limelight at the diminutive Rockefeller Center rink (☎ 212/332-7654; www.rockefellercenter.com), open from mid-October to mid-March or early April (you'll skate under the Christmas tree for the month of Dec). In Central Park, try Wollman Rink on the east side of the park between 62nd and 63rd streets (☎ 212/439-6900; www.wollmanskatingrink.com), and Lasker Rink, midpark between 106th and 108th streets (☎ 917/492-3857). Both Central Park skating rinks usually close in early April.

Greenwich Village Halloween Parade. This is Halloween at its most outrageous. Call the Village Voice Parade hot line at ☎ 212/475-3333, ext. 14044, visit www.halloween-nyc.com, or check the papers for the route so you can watch—or participate, if you have the threads and the imagination. October 31.

Big Apple Circus. New York's homegrown circus is a favorite with children and anyone who's young at heart. Big Apple is committed to maintaining the classical circus tradition with sensitivity and only features animals that have a traditional working relationship with humans. A tent is pitched in Damrosch Park at Lincoln Center. Call ☎ 800/922-3772 or visit www.bigapplecircus.org. Late October through January.

November

New York City Marathon. Some 30,000 hopefuls from around the world participate in the largest U.S. marathon, and more than a million fans cheer them on as they follow a route that passes through all five boroughs and finishes at Central Park. Call ☎ 212/423-2249 or 212/860-4455, or visit www.nyrrc.org, where you can find applications to run. First Sunday in November. November 4, 2007.

Radio City Music Hall Christmas Spectacular. It's an over-the-top extravaganza that's lots of fun. Starring the Radio City Rockettes and a cast that includes live animals (just try to picture the camels sauntering into the Sixth Ave. entrance!). And the spectacular Art Deco Radio City itself is a sight worth seeing. For information, call ☎ 212/247-4777 or visit www.radiocity.com; buy tickets at the box office or via Ticketmaster's Radio City Hot Line (☎ 212/307-1000), or visit www.ticketmaster.com. Throughout November and December.

Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade. The procession from Central Park West and 77th Street and down Broadway to Herald Square at 34th Street continues to be a national tradition. Huge hot-air balloons in the forms of Snoopy, Bart Simpson, and other favorites are the best part of the fun. The night before, you can usually see the big blow-up on Central Park West at 79th Street; call to see if it will be open to the public again this year. Call ☎ 212/484-1222 or Macy's Visitor Center at 212/494-2922. November 22, 2007.

Lighting of the Rockefeller Center Christmas Tree. The ceremony is accompanied by ice-skating, singing, entertainment, and a huge crowd. The tree stays lit 24/7 until after the New Year. Call ☎ 212/332-6868 or visit www.rockefellercenter.com for this year's date. Late November or early December.

December

Holiday Trimmings. Stroll down Fifth Avenue and you'll see a 27-foot sparkling snowflake floating over the intersection outside Tiffany's, the Cartier building ribboned and bowed in red, wreaths around the necks of the New York Public Library's lions, and fanciful figurines in the windows of Saks Fifth Avenue and Lord & Taylor. Madison Avenue between 55th and 60th streets is also a good bet; Sony Plaza usually displays something fabulous, as does Barney's New York. Throughout December.

Christmas Traditions. In addition to the Radio City Music Hall Christmas Spectacular (see listing above) and the New York City Ballet's Nutcracker Ballet, holiday events include A Christmas Carol at The Theater at Madison Square Garden (☎ 212/465-6741 or www.thegarden.com, or ☎ 212/307-7171 or www.ticketmaster.com for tickets), usually featuring a big name or two. At Avery Fisher Hall is the National Chorale's sing-along performances of Handel's Messiah (☎ 212/875-5030; www.lincolncenter.org) for a week before Christmas. Don't worry if the only words you know are "Alleluia, Alleluia!"—a lyrics sheet is given to ticket holders. Throughout December.

Lighting of the Hanukkah Menorah. Everything is done on a grand scale in New York, so it's no surprise that the world's largest menorah (32 ft. high) is at Manhattan's Grand Army Plaza, Fifth Avenue and 59th Street. Hanukkah celebrations begin at sunset, with the lighting of the first of the giant electric candles. December 4, 2007.

New Year's Eve. The biggest party of them all happens in Times Square, where hundreds of thousands of raucous revelers count down in unison the year's final seconds until the new lighted ball drops at midnight at 1 Times Sq. Call ☎ 212/768-1560 or 212/484-1222 or visit www.timessquarenyc.org. December 31.

3 Tips for Travelers with Special Needs

FOR FAMILIES

Good bets for the most timely information include the "Weekend" section of Friday's New York Times, which has a section dedicated to the week's best kid-friendly activities; the weekly New York magazine, which has a full calendar of children's events in its listings section; and Time Out New York, which also has a great weekly kids section with a bit of an alternative bent. The Big Apple Parents' Paper is usually available, for free, at children's stores and other locations in Manhattan; you can also find good information from the folks behind the paper at www.parentsknow.com.

The first place to look for babysitting is in your hotel (better yet, ask about babysitting when you reserve). Many hotels have babysitting services or will provide you with lists of reliable sitters. If this doesn't pan out, call the Baby Sitters' Guild (☎ 212/682-0227; www.babysittersguild.com). The sitters are licensed, insured, and bonded, and can even take your child on outings.

TRAVELERS WITH DISABILITIES

New York is more accessible to travelers with disabilities than ever before. The city's bus system is wheelchair friendly (the subways vary from station to station), and most of the major attractions are easily accessible. Even so, always call first to be sure that the places you want to go to are fully accessible.

Hospital Audiences, Inc. (☎ 212/575-7676; www.hospitalaudiences.org) arranges attendance and provides details about accessibility at cultural institutions as well as cultural events adapted for people with disabilities. Services include "Describe!" which allows visually impaired theatergoers to enjoy theater events; and HAI Hot Line (☎ 212/575-7676), which offers accessibility information for hotels, restaurants, attractions, cultural venues, and more. They also publish Access for All, a guidebook on accessibility, available free on the website, www.hospitalaudiences.org.

Another terrific source for travelers with disabilities who are coming to New York City is Big Apple Greeter (☎ 212/669-8159; www.bigapplegreeter.org). All of its employees are extremely well versed in accessibility issues. They can provide a resource list of city agencies that serve those with disabilities, and sometimes have special discounts available to theater and music performances. Big Apple Greeter even offers one-to-one tours that pair volunteers with visitors with disabilities; they can even introduce you to the public transportation system if you like. Reserve at least 1 week ahead.

FOR SENIOR TRAVELERS

New York subway and bus fares are half-price ($1) for people 65 and older. Many museums and sights (and some theaters and performance halls) offer discounted admittance and tickets to seniors, so don't be shy about asking. Always bring an ID card, especially if you've kept (or paid for) your youthful glow.

Many hotels offer senior discounts; Choice Hotels (which include Comfort Inns, some of my favorite affordable Midtown hotels). For a complete list of Choice Hotels, visit www.hotelchoice.com.

Members of AARP (formerly the American Association of Retired Persons), 601 E St. NW, Washington, DC 20049 (☎ 888/687-2277; www.aarp.org), get discounts on hotels, airfares, and car rentals. AARP offers members a range of benefits, including AARP: The Magazine and a newsletter. Anyone over 50 can join.

Many reliable agencies and organizations target the 50-plus market. Elderhostel (☎ 800/454-5768; www.elderhostel.org) arranges worldwide study programs for those aged 55 and over. They regularly offer programs in New York City.

FOR GAY & LESBIAN TRAVELERS

The International Gay and Lesbian Travel Association (IGLTA; ☎ 800/448-8550 or 954/776-2626; www.iglta.org) is the trade association for the gay and lesbian travel industry, and offers an online directory of GLBT travel businesses and tour operators.

All over Manhattan, but especially in neighborhoods like the West Village (particularly Christopher St., famous the world over as the main drag of New York gay male life) and Chelsea (especially Eighth Ave. from 16th to 23rd sts., and W. 17th to 19th sts. from Fifth to Eighth aves.), shops, services, and restaurants have a lesbian and gay flavor. The Oscar Wilde Bookshop, 15 Christopher St. (☎ 212/255-8097; www.oscarwildebooks.com), is the city's best GLBT bookstore and a good source for community.

The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual & Transgender Community Center is at 208 W. 13th St., between Seventh and Eighth avenues (☎ 212/620-7310; www.gaycenter.org). The center is the meeting place for more than 400 GLBT organizations. You can check the online events calendar, which lists hundreds of happenings—lectures, dances, concerts, readings, drag bingo, films—or call for the latest. Their site offers links to gay-friendly hotels and guesthouses in and around New York, plus tons of other information; the staff is also exceedingly friendly and helpful in person or over the phone.

4 Getting There

BY PLANE

Three major airports serve New York City: John F. Kennedy International Airport (☎ 718/244-4444) in Queens, about 15 miles (1 hr. driving time) from midtown Manhattan; LaGuardia Airport (☎ 718/533-3400), also in Queens, about 8 miles (30 min.) from Midtown; and Newark International Airport (☎ 973/961-6000) in nearby New Jersey, about 16 miles (45 min.) from Midtown. Information about all three airports is available online at www.panynj.gov; click on the “All Airports” tab on the left.

Even though LaGuardia is the closest airport to Manhattan, it has a hideous reputation for flight delays and on-the-ground chaos, in both ticket-desk lines and baggage claim. You may want to use JFK or Newark instead. (JFK has the best record for timeliness among New York–area airports.)

Almost every major domestic carrier serves at least one of the New York–area airports; most serve two or all three. Among them are America West (☎ 800/327-7810; www.americawest.com), American (☎ 800/433-7300; www.aa.com), Continental (☎ 800/525-3273; www.continental.com), Delta (☎ 800/221-1212; www.delta.com), Northwest (☎ 800/225-2525; www.nwa.com), US Airways (☎ 800/428-4322; www.usairways.com), and United (☎ 800/864-8331; www.united.com).

In recent years, there has been rapid growth in the number of newer, budget airlines serving the city. You can check out Atlanta-based AirTran (☎ 800/AIRTRAN; www.airtran.com), Indiana-based ATA (☎ 800/225-2995; www.ata.com), Denver-based Frontier (☎ 800/432-1359; www.flyfrontier.com), Milwaukee- and Omaha-based Midwest Airlines (☎ 800/452-2022; www.midwestairlines.com), or Detroit-based Spirit Airlines (☎ 800/772-7117; www.spiritair.com). The JFK-based airline jetBlue ✨ (☎ 800/JETBLUE; www.jetblue.com) has taken New York by storm with its low fares to and from cities throughout the nation. The nation’s leading discount airline, Southwest (☎ 800/435-9792; www.iflyswa.com), flies into MacArthur (Islip) Airport on Long Island, 50 miles east of Manhattan, and has recently become even more convenient by adding flights into LaGuardia.

TRANSPORTATION TO & FROM THE NEW YORK AREA AIRPORTS

For transportation information for all three airports (JFK, LaGuardia, and Newark Liberty), call Air-Ride (☎ 800/247-7433), which offers 24-hour recorded details on bus and shuttle companies and car services registered with the New York and New Jersey Port Authority. Similar info is available at www.panynj.gov/airports; click on the airport at which you'll be arriving.

The Port Authority also runs staffed Ground Transportation Information counters on the baggage-claim level in each terminal at each airport, where you can get information and book all manner of transport once you land. Most transportation companies also have courtesy phones near the baggage-claim area.

Generally, travel time between the airports and midtown Manhattan by taxi or car is 45 to 60 minutes for JFK, 20 to 35 minutes for LaGuardia, and 35 to 50 minutes for Newark Liberty. Always allow extra time, though, especially during rush hour, peak holiday travel times, and if you're taking a bus.

TAXIS Taxis are a quick and convenient way to travel to and from the airports. They're available at designated taxi stands outside the terminals, with uniformed dispatchers on hand during peak hours at JFK and LaGuardia, around the clock at Newark Liberty. Follow the GROUND TRANSPORTATION or TAXI signs. There may be a line, but it generally moves pretty quickly. Fares, whether fixed or metered, do not include bridge and tunnel tolls ($3.50–$4) or a tip for the cabbie (15%–20% is customary). They do include all passengers in the cab and luggage—never pay more than the metered or flat rate, except for tolls and a tip (8pm–6am a $1 surcharge also applies on New York yellow cabs). Taxis have a limit of four passengers, so if there are more in your group, you'll have to take more than one cab.

- From JFK: A flat rate of $45 to Manhattan (plus tolls and tip) is charged. The meter will not be turned on and the surcharge will not be added. The flat rate does not apply on trips from Manhattan to the airport.
- From LaGuardia: $17 to $27, metered, plus tolls and tip.
- From Newark Liberty: The dispatcher for New Jersey taxis gives you a slip of paper with a flat rate ranging from $30 to $38 (toll and tip extra), depending on where you're going, so you'll have to be precise about your destination. New York yellow cabs aren't permitted to pick up passengers at Newark. The yellow-cab fare from Manhattan to Newark is the meter amount plus $15 and tolls (about $45–$55, a few dollars more with tip). New Jersey taxis can't take passengers from Manhattan to Newark.

PRIVATE CAR & LIMOUSINE SERVICES Private car and limousine companies provide 24-hour door-to-door airport transfers for roughly the same cost of a taxi. The advantage they offer over taking a taxi is that you can arrange your pickup in advance and avoid the hassles of the taxi line. Call at least 24 hours in advance (even earlier on holidays), and a driver will meet you near baggage claim (or at your hotel for a return trip). You'll probably be asked to leave a credit card number to guarantee your ride. You'll likely be offered the choice of indoor or curbside pickup; indoor pickup is more expensive but makes it easier to hook up with your driver (who usually waits in baggage claim bearing a sign with your name on it). You can save a few dollars if you arrange for an outside pickup; call the dispatcher as soon as you clear baggage claim and then take your luggage out to the designated waiting area, where you'll wait for the driver to come around, which can take anywhere from 10 minutes to a half-hour. Besides the wait, the other disadvantage of this option is that curbside can be chaos during prime deplaning hours.

Vehicles range from sedans to vans to limousines and tend to be clean and comfortable. Prices vary slightly by company and the size of car reserved, but expect a rate roughly equivalent to taxi fare if you request a basic sedan and have only one stop; toll and tip policies are the same. (Note: Car services are not subject to the flat-rate rule that taxis have for rides to and from JFK.) Ask when booking what the fare will be and if you can use your credit card to pay for the ride so there are no surprises at drop-off. There may be waiting charges tacked on if the driver has to wait an excessive amount of time for your plane to land when picking you up, but the car companies will usually check on your flight to get an accurate landing time.

I've had the best luck with Carmel (☎ 800/922-7635 or 212/666-6666) and Legends (☎ 888/LEGENDS or 888/534-3637; www.legendslimousine.com). (Keep in mind, though, that these services are only as good as the individual drivers—and sometimes there's a lemon in the bunch. If you have a problem, report it immediately to the main office.)

Car services are good for rush hour (no ticking meters in rush-hour traffic), but if you're arriving at a quieter time of day, taxis work fine.

PRIVATE BUSES & SHUTTLES Buses and shuttle services provide a comfortable and less expensive (but usually more time-consuming) option for airport transfers than do taxis and car services.

AirTrains: Newark & JFK—The Very Good & the Pretty Good

First the very good: A few years back, a new rail link revolutionized the process getting to Newark Liberty Airport with the introduction of AirTrain Newark, which connects Newark Liberty with Manhattan via a monorail/rail link.

Even though you have to make a connection, the system is fast, pleasant, affordable, and easy to use. Each arrivals terminal at Newark Liberty has a station for the AirTrain, so just follow the signs once you collect your bags. All AirTrains from the airport go to Newark Liberty International Airport Station, where you transfer to a NJ Transit train. NJ Transit will deliver you to New York Penn Station at 33rd Street and Seventh Avenue, where you can pick up a cab or New York City public transit to your hotel.

The trip from my apartment on Manhattan's Upper West Side to the Newark Alitalia terminal, for example, was under a half-hour and only cost me $14 ($12 for the AirTrain link via Penn Station plus $2 for the subway to get to Penn Station). That's a savings of at least $35 if I took a cab, not to mention the time I saved. NJ Transit trains run two to three times an hour during peak travel times (once an hour during early and late hours); you can check the schedules on monitors before you leave the terminal, and again at the train station. Tickets can be purchased from machines at both the air terminal and the train station (no ticket is required to board the AirTrain). The one-way fare is $11 (children under 5 ride free). On your return trip to the airport, the AirTrain is far more predictable, time-wise, than subjecting yourself to the whims of traffic.

Note that travelers arriving at Newark who are heading to points beyond the city can also pick up Amtrak and other NJ Transit trains at Newark International Airport Station to their final destinations.

Super Shuttle serves all three airports; New York Airport Service serves JFK and LaGuardia; Olympia Trails and Express Shuttle USA serves Newark Liberty. These services are my favorite option for getting to and from Newark during peak travel times because the drivers usually take lesser-known surface streets that

Now the not-so-very good: Some four years after opening in 2003, after years of anticipation and $1.9 billion, AirTrain JFK is beginning to operate more efficiently. Though you can't beat the price—$7 if you take a subway to the AirTrain, $12 if you take the Long Island Rail Road—you won't save much on time getting to the airport. From midtown Manhattan on the LIRR, the ride can take from 40 minutes to an hour, depending on your connections. On the subway, the ride takes approximately 90 minutes and the connections are murky. Only a few subway lines connect with the AirTrain: the A, E, J, and Z; the E, J, Z to Jamaica Station and the Sutphin Boulevard–Archer Avenue Station; and the A to Howard Beach/JFK Airport Station. The MTA is contemplating adding connections to the AirTrain in lower Manhattan sometime in the next decade, there's not much they can do now to speed up the trip.

A word of warning for both AirTrains: If you have mobility issues, mountains of luggage, or a bevy of small children to keep track of, skip the AirTrain. You'll find it easier to rely on a taxi, car service, or shuttle service that can offer you door-to-door transfers.

For more info on AirTrain Newark, call ☎ 888/EWR-INFO or visit www.airtrainnewark.com. For connection details, click on the links on the AirTrain website or contact NJ Transit (☎ 800/626-RIDE; www.njtransit.com) or Amtrak (☎ 800/USA-RAIL; www.amtrak.com).

For more information on AirTrain JFK, go online to www.airtrainjfk.com. For connection details, click on the links on the AirTrain website or the MTA site, www.mta.nyc.ny.us/mta/airtrain.htm.

make the ride much quicker than if you go with a taxi or car, which will virtually always stick to the traffic-clogged main route.

The familiar blue vans of Super Shuttle (☎ 212/258-3826; www.supershuttle.com) provide door-to-door service to Manhattan and points on Long Island every 15 to 30 minutes around the clock. As with Express Shuttle, you don't need to reserve your airport-to-Manhattan ride; just go to the ground-transportation desk or use the courtesy phone in baggage claim and ask for Super Shuttle. Hotel pickups for your return trip require 24 to 48 hours' notice; you can make your reservations online. Fares run $13 to $22 per person, depending on the airport, with discounts available for additional persons in the same party.

New York Airport Service (☎ 718/875-8200; www.nyairport-service.com) buses travel from JFK and LaGuardia to the Port Authority Bus Terminal (42nd St. and Eighth Ave.), Grand Central Terminal (Park Ave. between 41st and 42nd sts.), and to some hotels between 27th and 59th streets, plus the Jamaica LIRR Station in Queens, where you can pick up a train for Long Island. Follow the GROUND TRANSPORTATION signs to the curbside pickup or look for the uniformed agent. Buses depart the airport every 20 to 70 minutes (depending on your departure point and destination) between 6am and midnight. Buses to JFK and LaGuardia depart the Port Authority and Grand Central on the Park Avenue side every 15 to 30 minutes, depending on the time of day and the day of the week. To request direct shuttle service from your hotel, call the above number at least 24 hours in advance. One-way fare for JFK is $15, $27 round-trip; to LaGuardia it's $12 one-way and $21 round-trip.

Olympia Airport Express (☎ 212/964-6233; www.olympiabus.com) provides service every 15 to 30 minutes (depending on the time of day) from Newark Airport to Penn Station (the pickup point is the northwest corner of 34th St. and Eighth Ave., and the drop-off point is the southwest corner), the Port Authority (on 42nd St. between Eighth and Ninth aves.), and Grand Central (on 41st St. between Park and Lexington aves.). Passengers to and from Grand Central can connect to Olympia's Midtown shuttle vans, which service some Midtown hotels. Call for the schedule for your return trip to the airport. The one-way fare runs $13, $22 round-trip; seniors and passengers with disabilities ride for $6.

BY CAR

From the New Jersey Turnpike (I-95) and points west, there are three Hudson River crossings to the city's West Side: the Holland Tunnel (lower Manhattan), the Lincoln Tunnel (Midtown), and the George Washington Bridge (Upper Manhattan). From upstate New York, take the New York State Thruway (I-87), which crosses the Hudson River on the Tappan Zee Bridge and becomes the Major Deegan Expressway (I-87) through the Bronx. For the East Side, continue to the Triborough Bridge and then down the FDR Drive. For the West Side, take the Cross Bronx Expressway (I-95) to the Henry Hudson Parkway or the Taconic State Parkway to the Saw Mill River Parkway to the Henry Hudson Parkway south.

From New England, the New England Thruway (I-95) connects with the Bruckner Expressway (I-278), which leads to the Triborough Bridge and the FDR Drive on the East Side. For the West Side, take the Bruckner to the Cross Bronx Expressway (I-95) to the Henry Hudson Parkway south.

You'll pay tolls along some of these roads and at most crossings.

Once you arrive in Manhattan, park your car in a garage (expect to pay $20–$45 per day) and leave it there. Don't use your car for traveling within the city. Public transportation, taxis, and walking will easily get you where you want to go without the headaches of parking, gridlock, and dodging crazy cabbies.

BY TRAIN

Amtrak (© 800/USA-RAIL; www.amtrak.com) runs frequent service to New York City's Penn Station, on Seventh Avenue between 31st and 33rd streets, where you can easily pick up a taxi, subway, or bus to your hotel. To get the best rates, book early (as much as 6 months in advance) and travel on weekends.

If you're traveling to New York from a city along Amtrak's Northeast Corridor—such as Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, or Washington, D.C.—Amtrak may be your best travel bet now that they've rolled out the high-speed Acela trains. The Acela Express trains cut travel time from D.C. down to 2½ hours, and travel time from Boston to a lightning-quick 3 hours. (If you book a seat on a Metro-liner or regular unreserved service, the fares are cheaper, but expect to spend longer on the train).

5 For International Travelers

VISAS

The U.S. State Department has a Visa Waiver Program (VWP) allowing citizens of the following countries to enter the U.S. without a visa for up to 90 days: Andorra, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Brunei, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Monaco, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, San Marino, Singapore, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom.

Canadian citizens may enter the United States without visas; they will need to show passports and proof of residence, however. Note:

Any passport issued on or after October 26, 2006, by a VWP country must be an e-Passport for VWP travelers to be eligible to enter the U.S. without a visa. Citizens of these nations also need to present a round-trip air or cruise ticket upon arrival. E-Passports contain computer chips capable of storing biometric information, such as the required digital photograph of the holder. (You can identify an e-Passport by the symbol on the bottom center cover of your passport.) If your passport doesn't have this feature, you can still travel without a visa if it is a valid passport issued before October 26, 2005, and includes a machine-readable zone, or between October 26, 2005, and October 25, 2006, and includes a digital photograph. For more information, go to www.travel.state.gov/visa.

Citizens of all other countries must have (1) a valid passport that expires at least 6 months later than the scheduled end of their visit to the United States, and (2) a tourist visa, which may be obtained without charge from any U.S. consulate.

MEDICAL REQUIREMENTS

Unless you're arriving from an area known to be suffering from an epidemic (particularly cholera or yellow fever), inoculations or vaccinations are not required for entry into the United States.

If you have a medical condition that requires syringe-administered medications, carry a valid signed prescription from your physician—the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) no longer allows airline passengers to pack syringes in their carry-on baggage without documented proof of medical need. If you have a disease that requires treatment with narcotics, you should also carry documented proof with you—smuggling narcotics aboard a plane is a serious offense that carries severe penalties in the U.S.

For HIV-positive visitors, requirements for entering the United States are somewhat vague and change frequently. For up-to-the-minute information, contact AIDSinfo (☎ 800/448-0440 or 301/519-6616 outside the U.S.; www.aidsinfo.nih.gov) or the Gay Men's Health Crisis (☎ 212/367-1000; www.gmhc.org).

CUSTOMS

WHAT YOU CAN BRING INTO THE U.S.

Every visitor more than 21 years of age may bring in, free of duty, the following: (1) 1 liter of wine or hard liquor; (2) 200 cigarettes, 100 cigars (but not from Cuba), or 3 pounds of smoking tobacco; and (3) $100 worth of gifts. These exemptions are offered to travelers who spend at least 72 hours in the United States and who have not claimed them in the preceding 6 months. It is forbidden to bring foodstuffs (particularly fruit, cooked meats, and canned goods) and plants (vegetables, seeds, tropical plants). Foreign tourists may carry in or out up to $10,000 in U.S. or foreign currency with no formalities; larger sums must be declared to U.S. Customs on entering or leaving. For details regarding U.S. Customs and Border Protection, consult your nearest U.S. embassy or consulate, or U.S. Customs (☎ 202/927-1770; www.customs.ustreas.gov).

WHAT YOU CAN TAKE HOME FROM THE U.S.

Canadian Citizens

For a clear summary of Canadian rules, write for the booklet I Declare, issued by the Canada Border Services Agency (☎ 800/461-9999 in Canada, or 204/983-3500; www.cbsa-asfc.gc.ca).

U.K. Citizens

For information, contact HM Customs & Excise at ☎ 0845/010-9000 (from outside the U.K., 020/8929-0152), or consult their website at www.hmce.gov.uk.

Australian Citizens

A helpful brochure available from Australian consulates or Customs offices is Know Before You Go. For more information, call the Australian Customs Service at ☎ 1300/363-263 or log on to www.customs.gov.au.

6 Money

You never have to carry too much cash in New York, and while the city's pretty safe, it's best not to overstuff your wallet (although always make sure you have at least $20 for a taxi on hand).

In most Manhattan neighborhoods, you can find a bank with ATMs (automated teller machines) every couple of blocks. Even in neighborhoods that aren't well served by banks, most delis and bodegas have ATMs (which usually tack on a service charge in addition to any fees your own bank charges).

ATMs

The easiest and best way to get cash away from home is from an ATM. The Cirrus (☎ 800/424-7787; www.mastercard.com) and PLUS (☎ 800/843-7587; www.visa.com) networks span the country. Look at the back of your bank card to see which network you're on, then call or check online for ATM locations. Be sure you know your personal identification number (PIN) and daily withdrawal limit. Note: Remember that many banks impose a fee every time you use a card at another bank's ATM. In addition, the bank from which you withdraw cash may charge its own fee. To compare banks' ATM fees within the U.S., use www.bankrate.com. For international withdrawal fees, ask your bank.

CREDIT CARDS & DEBIT CARDS

Credit cards are the most widely used form of payment in the United States: Visa (Barclaycard in Britain), MasterCard (Eurocard in Europe, Access in Britain, Chargex in Canada), American Express, Diners Club, and Discover. They also provide a convenient record of all your expenses, and they generally offer relatively good exchange rates. You can withdraw cash advances from your credit cards at banks or ATMs, provided you know your PIN.

Visitors from outside the U.S. should inquire whether their bank assesses a 1% to 3% fee on charges incurred abroad.

It's highly recommended that you travel with at least one major credit card. You must have one to rent a car, and hotels and airlines usually require a credit card imprint as a deposit against expenses.

ATM cards with major credit-card backing, known as "debit cards," are now a commonly acceptable form of payment in most stores and restaurants. Some stores enable you to receive "cash back" on your debit card purchases, allowing you to get extra cash when you make a purchase. The same is true at most U.S. post offices.

TRAVELER'S CHECKS

Traveler's checks are widely accepted in the U.S., but international visitors should make sure that they're denominated in U.S. dollars; foreign-currency checks are often difficult to exchange.

You can buy traveler's checks at most banks. Most are offered in denominations of $20, $50, $100, $500, and sometimes $1,000. Generally, you'll pay a service charge ranging from 1% to 4%.

The most popular traveler's checks are offered by American Express (☎ 800/807-6233; ☎ 800/221-7282 for card holders—this number accepts collect calls, offers service in several foreign languages, and exempts Amex gold and platinum cardholders from the 1% fee.); Visa (☎ 800/732-1322)—AAA members can obtain Visa checks for a $9.95 fee (for checks up to $1,500) at most AAA offices or by calling ☎ 866/339-3378; and MasterCard (☎ 800/223-9920). If you choose to carry traveler's checks, keep a record of their serial numbers separate from your checks. If they are lost or stolen, you'll get a refund faster if you know the numbers.

Getting to Know New York City

This chapter gives you an insider's take on Manhattan's most distinctive neighborhoods and streets, tells you how to get around town, and serves as a handy reference to everything from personal safety to libraries and liquor.

1 Orientation

VISITOR INFORMATION INFORMATION OFFICES

- Once you're here, the Times Square Information Center, 1560 Broadway, between 46th and 47th streets (where Broadway meets Seventh Ave.), on the east side of the street (☎ 212/869-1890; www.timessquarenyc.org), is the city's top info stop. This pleasant, attractive center features a helpful info desk offering loads of citywide information. There's also a tour desk selling tickets for Gray Line bus tours and Circle Line boat tours; you can also get public transit maps, and staff is there to answer all of your questions on the transit system; and there's a Broadway Ticket Center providing show information and selling full-price show tickets; there are also ATMs and currency exchange machines; and computer terminals with free Internet access courtesy of Yahoo! It's open daily from 8am to 8pm.
- The New York Convention and Visitors Bureau runs the NYCVB Visitor Information Center at 810 Seventh Ave., between 52nd and 53rd streets. In addition to information on citywide attractions and a multilingual counselor on hand to answer questions, the center has interactive terminals that provide free touch-screen access to visitor information via Citysearch (www.citysearch.com), a guide to events, dining, and nightlife, and you can also buy advance tickets to major attractions, which can save you from standing in long ticket lines

(you can also buy a CityPass; see the box on p. 129). There's also an ATM, a gift shop, and a bank of phones that connect you directly with American Express card member services. The center is open Monday through Friday from 8:30am to 6pm, Saturday and Sunday from 9am to 5pm. For over-the-phone assistance, call ☎ 212/484-1222, or check online at www.nycvisit.com.

PUBLICATIONS

For comprehensive listings of films, concerts, performances, sporting events, museum and gallery exhibits, street fairs, and special events, the following are your best bets:

- The New York Times (www.nytimes.com or www.nytoday.com) features terrific arts and entertainment coverage, particularly in the two-part Friday “Weekend” section and the Sunday “Arts & Leisure” section. Both days boast full guides to the latest happenings in Broadway and Off-Broadway theater, classical music, dance, pop and jazz, film, and the art world. Friday is particularly good for cabaret, family fun, and general-interest recreational and sightseeing events.
- Time Out New York (www.timeoutny.com) is my favorite weekly magazine. Dedicated to weekly goings-on, it's attractive, well organized, and easy to use. TONY features excellent coverage in categories from live music, theater, and clubs to museum shows, dance events, readings, and kids' stuff. The regular “Check Out” section, unequaled in any other listings magazine, will fill you in on upcoming sample and closeout sales, crafts and antiques shows, and other shopping-related scoops. A new issue hits newsstands every Thursday.

Other useful weeklies include New York magazine (www.nymag.com), which offers restaurant reviews and whose listings section is a selective guide to city arts and entertainment; and the New Yorker (www.newyorker.com), which features an artsy “Goings On About Town” section at the front of the magazine. The monthly Paper (www.papermag.com) is a glossy alterna-mag that serves as good prep for those of you who want to experience the hipper side of the city.

CITY LAYOUT

The city is comprised of five boroughs: Manhattan, where most of the visitor action is; the Bronx, the only borough connected to the mainland U.S.; Queens, where JFK and LaGuardia airports are, and which borders the Atlantic Ocean and occupies part of Long Island; Brooklyn, south of Queens, which is also on Long Island and is famed for its attitude, accent, and Atlantic-front Coney Island; and Staten Island, the least populous borough, bordering Upper New York Bay on one side and the Atlantic Ocean on the other.

When most visitors envision New York, they think of Manhattan, the finger-shaped island pointing southwest off the mainland—surrounded by the Harlem River to the north, the Hudson River to the west, the East River (really an estuary) to the east, and the expanse of Upper New York Bay to the south. Despite the fact that it's the city's smallest borough (14 miles long, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles wide, 22 sq. miles), Manhattan contains the city's most famous attractions, buildings, and cultural institutions.

In most of Manhattan, finding your way around is a snap because of the grid system by which the streets are numbered. If you can discern uptown and downtown, and East Side and West Side, you can find your way around pretty easily. In real terms, uptown means north of where you happen to be, and downtown means south, although sometimes these labels have vague psychographic meanings ("uptown" chic vs. "downtown" bohemianism).

Avenues run north-south (uptown to downtown). Most are numbered. Fifth Avenue divides the East Side from the West Side of town and serves as the eastern border of Central Park north of 59th Street. First Avenue is all the way east and Twelfth Avenue is all the way west. The three most important unnumbered avenues on the East Side are between Third and Fifth avenues: Madison (east of Fifth), Park (east of Madison), and Lexington (east of Park, just west of Third). Unnumbered avenues on the West Side are Avenue of the Americas, which New Yorkers call Sixth Avenue; Central Park West, what Eighth Avenue north of 59th Street is called as it borders Central Park on the west (hence the name); Columbus Avenue, which is what Ninth Avenue is called north of 59th Street; and Amsterdam Avenue, or Tenth Avenue north of 59th.

Broadway is the exception to the rule—it's the only major avenue that doesn't run uptown-downtown. It cuts a diagonal path across the island, from the northwest tip down to the southeast corner. As it crosses most major avenues, it creates squares (Times Sq., Herald Sq., Madison Sq., and Union Sq., for example).

Streets run east-west (crosstown) and are numbered consecutively as they proceed uptown from Houston (pronounced House-ton) Street. So to go uptown, simply walk north of, or to a higher-numbered street than, where you are. Downtown is south of (or a lower-numbered street than) your current location.

If you're looking for a particular address, remember even-numbered street addresses are on the south side of street and odd-numbered addresses are on the north. Street addresses increase by about 50 per block starting at Fifth Avenue. For example, nos. 1 to 50 East are just about between Fifth and Madison avenues, while nos. 1 to 50 West are usually between Fifth and Sixth avenues. Traffic generally runs east on even-numbered streets and west on odd-numbered streets, with a few exceptions, such as the major east-west thoroughfares—14th, 23rd, 34th, 42nd, 57th, 72nd, 79th, 86th, and so on—which have two-way traffic. Therefore, 28 W. 23rd St. is a short walk west of Fifth Avenue; 325 E. 35th St. would be several blocks east of Fifth.

Avenue addresses are irregular. For example, 994 Second Ave. is at East 51st Street, but so is 320 Park Ave. Thus, it's important to know a building's cross street to find it easily. (Rather than 994 Second Avenue, tell your cab driver "51st Street and Second Avenue). Unfortunately, the grid system doesn't apply to neighborhoods in lower Manhattan, south of 14th Street—such as Wall Street, Chinatown, SoHo, TriBeCa, and the Village—since they sprang up before engineers devised plan. A good map is essential when exploring these areas.

MANHATTAN'S NEIGHBORHOODS IN BRIEF

Downtown

Lower Manhattan: South Street Seaport & the Financial District At one time, this was New York—period. Established by the Dutch in 1625, New York's first settlements sprang up here, on the southern tip of Manhattan island; everything uptown was farm country and wilderness. While all that's changed, this is still the best place in the city to search for the past.

Lower Manhattan constitutes everything south of Chambers Street. Battery Park, the point of departure for the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, and Staten Island, is on the far southern tip of the island. The South Street Seaport, now touristy but still a reminder of times when shipping was the lifeblood of the city, lies a bit north on the east side; it's just south of the Brooklyn Bridge.

The rest of the area is considered the Financial District, which contains Ground Zero. Until September 11, 2001, the Financial District was anchored by the World Trade Center, with the World Financial Center and Battery Park City to the west, and Wall Street running crosstown a little south and to the east.

Manhattan's Neighborhoods

Just about all of the major subway lines congregate here before they either end or head to Brooklyn.

TriBeCa Bordered by the Hudson River to the west, the area north of Chambers Street, west of Broadway, and south of Canal Street is the Triangle Below Canal Street, or TriBeCa. Since the 1980s, as SoHo became saturated with chic, the spillover has been transforming TriBeCa into one of the city's hippest residential neighborhoods, where celebrities and families coexist in cast-iron warehouses converted into expensive apartments. Artists' lofts and galleries as well as hip antiques and design shops pepper the area, as do some of the city's best restaurants.

Chinatown New York City's most famous ethnic enclave is bursting past its traditional boundaries and has encroached on Little Italy. The former marshlands northeast of City Hall and below Canal Street, from Broadway to the Bowery, are where Chinese immigrants were forced to live in the 1870s. This booming neighborhood is now a conglomeration of Asian populations. It offers tasty cheap eats in cuisines from Szechuan to Hunan to Cantonese to Vietnamese to Thai. Exotic shops offer strange foods, herbs, and souvenirs; bargains on clothing and leather are plentiful. It's a blast to walk down Canal Street, peering into the myriad electronics and luggage stores and watching crabs cut loose from their handlers at the exotic fish markets.

The Canal Street (J, M, Z, N, R, 6, Q, W) station will get you to the heart of the action. The streets are crowded during the day and empty out after around 9pm; they remain quite safe, but the neighborhood is more enjoyable during the bustle.

Little Italy Little Italy, traditionally the area east of Broadway between Houston and north of Canal streets, is a shrinking community, due to the encroachment of thriving Chinatown. It's now limited mainly to Mulberry Street, where you'll find most restaurants and just a few offshoots. With rents going up in the increasingly trendy Lower East Side, a few chic spots are moving in, further intruding upon the old-world landscape. The best way to reach Little Italy is to walk east from the Spring Street station (on the no. 6 line) to Mulberry Street; turn south for Little Italy (you can't miss the year-round red, green, and white street decorations).

The Lower East Side The Lower East Side boasts the best of both old and new New York: Witness the stretch of Houston between Forsyth and Allen streets, where Yonah Shimmel's Knish

Shop sits shoulder-to-shoulder with the Sunshine Theater, an art-house cinema—and both are thriving.

There are some remnants of what was once the largest Jewish population in America along Orchard Street, where you'll find great bargain-hunting in its many old-world fabric and clothing stores still thriving between the boutiques and lounges. Keep in mind that the old-world shops close early on Friday and all day on Saturday (the Jewish Sabbath). The expanding trendy set can be found in the blocks between Allen and Clinton streets south of Houston and north of Delancey, with more new shops, bars, and restaurants popping up in the blocks to the east every day.

This area is not well served by the subway system (one cause for its years of decline), so your best bet is to take the F train to Second Avenue (you can get off closer to First) and walk east on Houston; when you see Katz's Deli, you'll know you've arrived. You can also reach the LES from the Delancey Street station on the F line, and the Essex Street station on the J, M, or Z lines.

SoHo & Nolita No relation to the London neighborhood of the same name, SoHo got its moniker as an abbreviation of "South of Houston Street." This fashionable neighborhood extends down to Canal Street, between Sixth Avenue to the west and Lafayette Street (1 block east of Broadway) to the east. It's easily accessible by subway: Take the N or R to the Prince Street station; the C, E, or 6 to Spring Street; or the F, B, D or V train to the Broadway-Lafayette stop (the Q train is not stopping at Broadway-Lafayette due to construction on the Manhattan Bridge).

An industrial zone during the 19th century, SoHo retains the impressive cast-iron architecture of the era, and in many places, cobblestone peeks out from beneath the street's asphalt. In the early 1960s, cutting-edge artists began occupying the drab and deteriorating buildings, soon turning it into the trendiest neighborhood in the city. SoHo is now a prime example of urban gentrification and a major New York attraction thanks to its impeccably restored buildings, fashionable restaurants, and stylish boutiques. On weekends the cobbled streets and narrow sidewalks are packed with shoppers, with the prime action between Broadway and Sullivan Street north of Grand Street.

In recent years SoHo has been crawling its way east, taking over Mott and Mulberry streets—and Elizabeth Street in particular—north of Kenmare Street, an area now known as Nolita for its North of Little Italy location. Nolita is becoming increasingly well known for its hot shopping prospects, which include a number of pricey antiques and home-design stores. Taking the no. 6 train to Spring Street will get you closest by subway, but it's just a short walk east from SoHo proper.

The East Village & NoHo The East Village, which extends between 14th Street and Houston Street, from Broadway east to First Avenue and beyond to Alphabet City—Avenues A, B, C, and D—is where what's left of Manhattan's bohemia is. The East Village is a fascinating mix of affordable ethnic and trendy restaurants, upstart clothing designers and kitschy boutiques, punk-rock clubs and cafes. Several Off- and Off-Off-Broadway theaters also call this place home.

The East Village isn't very accessible by subway; unless you're traveling along 14th Street (the L line will drop you off at Third and First aves.), your best bet is to take the 4, 5, 6, N, Q, R, or W to 14th Street/Union Square; the N or R to 8th Street; or the 6 to Astor Place and walk east.

The area around Broadway and Lafayette between Bleeker and 4th streets, is called NoHo (for *N*orth of *H*ouston), and has a completely different character. As you might have guessed, this area has developed much more like its neighbor to the south, SoHo. Here you'll find a crop of trendy lounges, stylish restaurants, cutting-edge designers, and upscale antiques shops. NoHo is fun to browse; the Bleeker Street stop on the no. 6 line will land you in the heart of it, and the Broadway-Lafayette stop on the B, D, F, or V lines will drop you at its southern edge.

Greenwich Village Tree-lined streets crisscross and wind, following ancient streams and cow paths. Each block reveals yet another row of Greek Revival town houses, a well-preserved Federal-style house, or a peaceful courtyard or square. This is "the Village," from Broadway west to the Hudson River, bordered by Houston Street to the south and 14th Street to the north. It defies Manhattan's orderly grid system with streets that predate it, virtually every one chockablock with activity, and unless you live here, it may be impossible to master the lay of the land—so be sure to take a map along as you explore.

The Seventh Avenue line (1, 2, 3) is the area's main subway artery, while the West 4th Street station (where the A, C, or E lines meet the B, D, F or V lines) serves as its central hub.

The Village is probably the most chameleon-like of Manhattan's neighborhoods. Some of the highest-priced real estate in the city runs along lower Fifth Avenue, which dead-ends at Washington Square Park. Serpentine Bleecker Street stretches through most of the neighborhood and is emblematic of the area's historical bent.

The anything-goes attitude in the Village has fostered a large gay community, which is still in evidence around Christopher Street and Sheridan Square (including the landmarked Stonewall Bar). The streets west of Seventh Avenue, known as the West Village, boast a more relaxed vibe and some charming historic brownstones. Three colleges—New York University, Parsons School of Design, and the New School for Social Research—keep the area thinking young.

Streets are often crowded with weekend warriors and teenagers, especially on Bleecker, West 4th, 8th, and surrounding streets, and have been known to become sketchy west of Seventh Avenue in the very late hours, especially on weekends.

Midtown

Chelsea & the Meat-Packing District Chelsea has come on strong in recent years as a hip address, especially for the gay community. A low-rise composite of town houses, tenements, lofts, and factories (with new high-rises popping up on seemingly every block), the neighborhood comprises roughly the area west of Sixth Avenue from 14th to 30th streets. (Sixth Ave. itself below 23rd St. is actually considered part of the Flatiron District; see below.) Its main arteries are Seventh and Eighth avenues, and it's primarily served by the C or E and 1 subway lines.

The Chelsea Piers sports complex to the far west and a host of shops (both unique boutiques and big names such as Williams-Sonoma), well-priced bistros, and thriving bars along the main drags have contributed to the area's rebirth. One of the most influential trends in Chelsea has been the establishment of far West Chelsea (from Ninth Ave. west) and the adjacent Meat-Packing District (south of West Chelsea, roughly from 17th St. to Little W. 12th St.) as the style-setting neighborhoods for the 21st century. What SoHo was in the 1960s, this industrial west world (dubbed "the Lower West Side" by New York magazine) is today. New restaurants, cutting-edge shopping, and super-hot restaurants pop up daily in the Meat-Packing District, while the area from West 22nd to West 29th streets between Tenth and Eleventh avenues is home to the cutting edge of today's New York art scene. It's also the location for some of the city's hottest dance clubs. With galleries and bars in converted warehouses and former meat lockers, browsing can be frustrating, and the sometimes-desolate streets a tad intimidating. Your best bet is to have a specific destination (and an exact address) in mind, be it a restaurant, gallery, boutique, or nightclub, before you come.

The Flatiron District, Union Square & Gramercy Park These adjoining and, at places, overlapping neighborhoods are some of the city's most appealing. Their streets have been rediscovered by New Yorkers and visitors alike, largely thanks to the boom-to-bust dot.com revolution of the late 1990s; the Flatiron District served as its geographical heart and earned the nickname "Silicon Alley" in the process. These neighborhoods boast great shopping and dining and a central-to-everything location. A number of impressive new hotels have been added to the mix over the last few years. The commercial spaces are often large, loftlike expanses with witty designs and graceful columns.

The Flatiron District lies south of 23rd Street to 14th Street, between Broadway and Sixth Avenue, and centers on the historic Flatiron Building on 23rd (so named for its triangular shape) and Park Avenue South, which has become a sophisticated, new Restaurant Row. Below 23rd Street along Sixth Avenue (once known as the Ladies' Mile shopping district), mass-market discounters such as Filene's Basement, Bed Bath & Beyond, and others have moved in. The shopping gets classier on Fifth Avenue, where you'll find a mix of national names and hip boutiques.

Union Square is the hub of the entire area; the N, Q, R, 4, 5, 6, or L trains stop here, making it easy to reach from most other city neighborhoods. Long in the shadows of the more bustling (Times and Herald) and high-toned (Washington) city squares, Union Square has experienced a major renaissance. Local businesses joined forces with the city to rid the park of drug dealers a few years back, and now it's a delightful place to spend an afternoon. Union Square is best known as the setting for New York's premier greenmarket every Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday.

From about 16th to 23rd streets, east from Park Avenue South to about Second Avenue, is the leafy, largely residential district known as Gramercy Park.

Times Square & Midtown West Midtown West, the vast area from 34th to 59th streets west of Fifth Avenue to the Hudson River, encompasses several famous names: Madison Square Garden, the Garment District, Rockefeller Center, the Theater District, and Times Square. This is New York's tourism central, where you'll find the bright lights and bustle that draw people from all over. As such, this is the city's biggest hotel neighborhood, with options running the gamut from cheap to chic.

The 1, 2, 3 subway line serves the massive neon-lit station at the heart of Times Square, at 42nd Street between Broadway and Seventh Avenue, while the F, V, B, D line runs up Sixth Avenue to Rockefeller Center. The N, R, W line cuts diagonally across the neighborhood, following the path of Broadway before heading up Seventh Avenue at 42nd Street. The A, C, E line serves the West Side, running along Eighth Avenue.

If you know New York but haven't been here in a few years, you'll be surprised by the "new" Times Square. New Yorkers like to kvetch nostalgic about the glory days of the old peep-show-and-porn-shop Times Square that this cleaned-up, Disneyfied version supplanted. And there really is not much here for the native. The revival, however, has been nothing short of an outstanding success for tourism. Expect dense crowds, though; it's often tough to make your way along the sidewalks.

To the west of the Theater District, in the 40s and 50s between Eighth and Tenth avenues, is Hell's Kitchen, also known as Clinton, an area that is much nicer than its ghoulish name and one of my favorites in the city. The neighborhood resisted gentrification until the mid-1990s but has grown into a charming, less touristy adjunct to the neighboring Theater District. Ninth Avenue, in particular, has blossomed into one of the city's finest dining avenues; just stroll along and you'll have a world of dining to choose from, ranging from American diner to sexy Mediterranean to traditional Thai.

Unlike Times Square, Rockefeller Center has needed no renovation. Situated between 46th and 50th streets from Sixth Avenue east to Fifth, this Art Deco complex contains some of the city's great architectural gems. If you can negotiate the crowds, holiday time is a great time to be here, as ice-skaters take over the central plaza and the Christmas tree twinkles against the night sky.

Between Seventh and Eighth avenues and 31st and 33rd streets, Penn Station sits beneath unsightly behemoth Madison Square Garden, where the Rangers, Liberty, and the Knicks play. Taking up all of 34th Street between Sixth and Seventh avenues is Macy's, the world's largest department store; exit Macy's at the southeast corner and you'll find more famous-label shopping around Herald Square. The blocks around 32nd Street just west of Fifth Avenue have developed into a thriving Koreatown, with mid-priced hotels and bright, bustling Asian restaurants offering some of the best-value stays and eats in Midtown.

Midtown East & Murray Hill Midtown East, the area including Fifth Avenue and everything east from 34th to 59th streets, is the more upscale side of the Midtown map. This side of town is short of subway trains, served primarily by the Lexington Avenue 4, 5, 6 line.

Midtown East is where you'll find the city's finest collection of grand hotels, mostly along Lexington Avenue and near the park at the top of Fifth. The stretch of Fifth Avenue from Saks at 49th Street extending to the 24-hour Apple Store and F.A.O. Schwarz at 59th St. is home to the city's most high-profile haute shopping, including Tiffany & Co. Magnificent architectural highlights include the recently repolished Chrysler Building, with its stylized gargoyles glaring down on passersby; the Beaux Arts tour de force that is Grand Central Terminal; St. Patrick's Cathedral; and the glorious Empire State Building.

Far east, swank Sutton and Beekman places are enclaves of beautiful town houses, luxury living, and pocket parks that look out over the East River. Along this river is the United Nations, which isn't officially in New York City, or even the United States, but on a parcel of international land belonging to member nations.

Claiming the territory east from Madison Avenue, Murray Hill begins somewhere north of 23rd Street (the line between it and Gramercy Park is fuzzy), and is most clearly recognizable north of 30th Street to 42nd Street. This brownstone-lined quarter is largely a quiet residential neighborhood, most notable for its handful of good budget and mid-priced hotels.

Uptown

Upper West Side North of 59th Street and encompassing everything west of Central Park, the Upper West Side contains Lincoln Center, one of the world's premier performing-arts venues; the Time Warner Center with its upscale shops; Jazz at Lincoln Center; the Mandarin Oriental Hotel; the gargantuan Whole Foods Market, and possibly the most expensive food court in the world, with restaurants such as Per Se and Masa. You'll also find the American Museum of Natural History here.

Two major subway lines service the area: the 1, 2, 3 line runs up Broadway, while the B and C trains run up Central Park West, stopping at the historic Dakota apartments (where John Lennon was shot and Yoko Ono still lives) at 72nd Street, and at the Museum of Natural History at 81st Street.

Upper East Side North of 59th Street and east of Central Park is some of the city's most expensive residential real estate. This is New York at its most gentrified: Walk along Fifth and Park avenues, especially between 60th and 80th streets, and you're sure to encounter some of the wizened WASPs and Chanel-suited socialites that make up the most rarefied of the city's population.

Madison Avenue from 60th Street well into the 80s is the moneyed crowd's main shopping strip, recently vaunting ahead of Hong Kong's Causeway Bay to become the most expensive retail real estate in the world—so bring your platinum card.

The main attraction of this neighborhood is Museum Mile, the stretch of Fifth Avenue fronting Central Park that's home to no fewer than 10 terrific cultural institutions, including Frank Lloyd Wright's Guggenheim, and anchored by the mind-boggling Metropolitan Museum of Art. But the elegant rows of landmark town houses are worth a look alone: East 70th Street, from Madison east to Lexington, is one of the world's most charming residential streets. If you want to see where real people live, move east to Third Avenue and beyond; that's where affordable restaurants and active street life start popping up.

The Upper East Side is served by the crowded Lexington Avenue line (4, 5, 6 trains), so wear your walking shoes (or bring taxi fare) if you're heading up here to explore.

Harlem Harlem has benefited from a dramatic image makeover in the last few years, and with new restaurants, clubs, and stores, is slowly becoming a neighborhood in demand. Harlem is actually several areas. Harlem proper stretches from river to river, beginning at 125th Street on the West Side, 96th Street on the East Side, and 110th Street north of Central Park. East of Fifth Avenue, Spanish Harlem (El Barrio) runs between East 100th and East 125th streets. The neighborhood is benefiting greatly from the revitalization that has swept so much of the city, with national-brand retailers moving in, restaurants and hip nightspots opening everywhere, and visitors arriving to tour historic sites related to the golden age of African-American culture.

Washington Heights & Inwood At the northern tip of Manhattan, Washington Heights (the area from 155th St. to Dyckman St., with adjacent Inwood running to the tip) is home to a large segment of Manhattan's Latino community, plus an increasing number of yuppies who don't mind trading a half-hour subway commute to Midtown for lower rents. Fort Tryon Park and the Cloisters are the two big reasons for visitors to come up this way. The Cloisters houses the Metropolitan Museum of Art's stunning medieval collection, in a building perched atop a hill, with excellent views across the Hudson to the Palisades. Committed off-the-beaten-path sightseers might also want to visit the Dyckman Farmhouse, a historic jewel built in 1783 and the only remaining Dutch Colonial structure in Manhattan.

2 Getting Around

Manhattan's transportation systems are a marvel. It's simply miraculous that so many people can gather on this little island and move around it. For the most part, you can get where you're going pretty quickly and easily using some combination of subways, buses, and cabs; this section will tell you how to do just that.

But between traffic gridlock and subway delays, sometimes you just can't get there from here—unless you walk. Walking can sometimes be the fastest way to navigate the island. During rush hours, you'll easily beat car traffic while on foot, as taxis and buses stop and groan at gridlocked corners. (Don't even try going crosstown in a cab or bus in Midtown at midday.)

BY SUBWAY

Run by the Metropolitan Transit Authority (MTA), the much-maligned subway system is actually the fastest way to travel around New York, especially during rush hours. Some 3.5 million people a day seem to agree with me, as it's their primary mode of transportation. The subway is quick, inexpensive, relatively safe, and pretty efficient, as well as being a genuine New York experience.

The subway runs 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The rush-hour crushes are roughly from 8 to 9:30am and from 5 to 6:30pm on weekdays; the rest of the time the trains are much more manageable.

PAYING YOUR WAY

The subway fare is $2 (half-price for seniors and those with disabilities), and children under 44 inches tall ride free (up to three per adult).

Tokens are no longer available. People pay fares with the MetroCard, a magnetically encoded card that debits the fare when swiped through the turnstile (or the fare box on a city bus). Once you're in the system, you can transfer to any subway line that you can reach without exiting your station. MetroCards also allow you free transfers between the bus and subway within a 2-hour period.

MetroCards can be purchased from staffed booths, where cash only is accepted; at the ATM-style vending machines located in just about every subway station, which accept cash, credit cards, and debit cards; from a MetroCard merchant, such as most Rite Aid drugstores or Hudson News at Penn Station and Grand Central Terminal; or at the MTA information desk at the Times Square Information Center, 1560 Broadway, between 46th and 47th streets.

MetroCards come in a few different configurations:

Pay-Per-Ride MetroCards can be used for up to four people by swiping up to four times (bring the whole family). You can put any amount from $4 (two rides) to $80 on your card. Every time you put $10 or $20 on your Pay-Per-Ride MetroCard, it's automatically credited 20%—that's one free ride for every $10, or five trips. You can buy Pay-Per-Ride MetroCards at any subway station. MetroCards are also available from shops and newsstands around town in $10 and $20 values. You can refill your card at any time until the expiration date on the card, usually about a year from the date of purchase, at any subway station.

Unlimited-Ride MetroCards, which can't be used for more than one person at a time or more frequently than 18-minute intervals, are available in four values: the daily Fun Pass, which allows you a day's worth of unlimited subway and bus rides for $7; the 7-Day MetroCard, for $24; and the 30-Day MetroCard, for $76. Seven- and 30-day Unlimited-Ride MetroCards can be purchased at any subway station or from a MetroCard merchant. Fun Passes, however, cannot be purchased at token booths—you can only buy them at a MetroCard vending machine; from a MetroCard merchant; or at the MTA information desk at the Times Square Information Center. Unlimited-Ride MetroCards go into effect the first time you use them—so if you buy a card on Monday and don't begin to use it until Wednesday, Wednesday is when the clock starts ticking on your MetroCard. A Fun Pass is good from the first time you use it until 3am the next day, while 7- and 30-day MetroCards run out at midnight on the last day. These MetroCards cannot be refilled; throw them out once they've been used up and buy a new one.

Tips for using your MetroCard: The MetroCard swiping mechanisms at turnstiles are the source of much grouching. If you swipe too fast or too slow, the turnstile will ask you to swipe again. If this happens, do not move to a different turnstile, or you may end up paying twice. If you've tried repeatedly and really can't make your MetroCard work, tell the token booth clerk; chances are good, though, that you'll get the movement down after a couple of uses.

If you're not sure how much money you have left on your MetroCard, or what day it expires, use the station's MetroCard Reader, usually located near the station entrance or the token booth (on buses, the fare box will also provide you with this information).

To locate the nearest MetroCard merchant, or for any other MetroCard questions, call ☎ 800/METROCARD or 212/METROCARD

(212/638-7622) Monday through Friday between 7am and 11pm, Saturday and Sunday from 9am to 5pm. Or go online to www.mta.nyc.ny.us/metrocard, which can give you a full rundown of MetroCard merchants in the tri-state area.

USING THE SYSTEM

The subway system basically mimics the lay of the land above-ground, with most lines in Manhattan running north and south, like the avenues, and a few lines east and west, like the streets.

To go up and down the east side of Manhattan (and to the Bronx and Brooklyn), take the 4, 5, or 6 train.

Directions are almost always indicated using “Uptown” (northbound) and “Downtown” (southbound), so be sure to know what direction you want to head in. The outsides of some subway entrances are marked UPTOWN ONLY or DOWNTOWN ONLY; read carefully, as it’s easy to head in the wrong direction. Once you’re on the platform, check the signs overhead to make sure that the train you’re waiting for will be traveling in the right direction. If you do make a mistake, it’s a good idea to get off at a station where you can cross to the other side without leaving the station, such as 14th Street or 42nd Street, so you can switch without having to pay another fare.

The days of graffiti-covered cars are gone, but the stations—and an increasing number of trains—are not as clean as they could be. Trains are air-conditioned (move to the next car if yours isn’t), though during the dog days of summer the platforms can be sweltering. In theory, all subway cars have PA systems to allow you to hear the conductor’s announcements, but they don’t always work. It’s a good idea to move to a car with a working PA system in case service changes are announced that you’ll want to know about.

For subway safety tips, see “Playing It Safe,” p. 40.

BY BUS

Less expensive than taxis and more pleasant than subways (they provide a mobile sightseeing window on Manhattan), MTA buses are a good transportation option. Their big drawback: They can get stuck in traffic, sometimes making it quicker to walk. They also stop every couple of blocks, rather than the 8 or 9 blocks that local subways traverse between stops. So for long distances, the subway is your best bet; but for short distances or traveling crosstown, try the bus.

PAYING YOUR WAY

Like the subway fare, bus fare is $2, half-price for seniors and riders with disabilities, and free for children under 44 inches (up to three per adult). The fare is payable with a MetroCard or exact change. Bus drivers don't make change, and fare boxes don't accept dollar bills or pennies. You can't purchase MetroCards on the bus, so you'll have to have them before you board; for details on where to get them, see "Paying Your Way" under "By Subway," above.

If you pay with a MetroCard, you can transfer to another bus or to the subway for free within 2 hours. If you pay cash, you must request a free transfer slip that allows you to change to an intersecting bus route only (transfer points are listed on the transfer paper) within 1 hour of issue. Transfer slips cannot be used to enter the subway.

USING THE SYSTEM

You can't flag a city bus down—you have to meet it at a bus stop. Bus stops are located every 2 or 3 blocks on the right-side corner of the street (facing the direction of traffic flow). They're marked by a curb painted yellow and a blue-and-white sign with a bus emblem and the route number or numbers. Guide-a-Ride boxes at most stops display a route map and a hysterically optimistic schedule.

Almost every major avenue has its own bus route. They run either north or south: downtown on Fifth, uptown on Madison, downtown on Lexington, uptown on Third, and so on. There are crosstown buses at strategic locations all around town: 8th Street (eastbound); 9th (westbound); 14th, 23rd, 34th, or 42nd (east- and westbound); 49th (eastbound); 50th (westbound); 57th (east- and westbound); 65th (eastbound across the West Side, through the park, and then north on Madison, continuing east on 68th to York Ave.); 67th (westbound on the East Side to Fifth Ave. and then south on Fifth, continuing west on 66th St. through the park and across the West Side to West End Ave.); and 79th, 86th, 96th, 116th, or 125th (east- and westbound). Some bus routes, however, are erratic: The M104, for example, starts at the East River, then turns at Eighth Avenue and goes up Broadway. The buses of the Fifth Avenue line go up Madison or Sixth and follow various routes around the city.

Most routes operate 24 hours a day, but service is infrequent at night. During rush hour, main routes have "limited" buses, identifiable by the red card in the front window; they stop only at major cross streets.

To make sure that the bus you're boarding goes where you're going, check the map on the sign that's at every bus stop, get your hands on a route map or just ask.

While traveling, look out the window not only to take in the sights but also to keep track of cross streets so you know when to get off. About 2 blocks before you want to stop, signal the driver by pressing the tape strip above and beside the windows and along the metal straps. Exit through the pneumatic back doors (not the front door) by pushing on the yellow tape strip; the doors open automatically. (Pushing on the handles is useless unless you're as buff as Hercules.)

BY TAXI

If you don't want to deal with public transportation, finding an address that might be a few blocks from the subway station, or sharing your ride with 3.5 million other people, then take a taxi. The biggest advantages are, of course, that cabs can be hailed on any street (provided you find an empty one—often simple, yet at other times, nearly impossible) and will take you right to your destination. I find they're best used at night when there's little traffic to keep them from speeding you to your destination and when the subway may seem a little daunting. In Midtown at midday, you can usually walk to where you're going more quickly.

Official New York City taxis, licensed by the Taxi and Limousine Commission (TLC), are yellow, with the rates printed on the door and a light with a medallion number on the roof. You can hail a taxi on any street. Never accept a ride from any other car except an official city yellow cab. (Private livery cars are not allowed to pick up fares on the street.)

The base fare on entering the cab is \$2.50. The cost is 40¢ for every $\frac{1}{5}$ mile or 40¢ per 2 minutes in stopped or slow-moving traffic (or for waiting time). There's no extra charge for each passenger or for luggage. However, you must pay bridge or tunnel tolls (sometimes the driver will front the toll and add it to your bill at the end; most times, however, you pay the driver before the toll). You'll also

Tips Taxi-Hailing Tips

When you're waiting on the street for an available taxi, look at the medallion light on the top of the coming cabs. If the light is out, the taxi is in use. When the center part (the number) is lit, the taxi is available—you can flag the cab. If all the lights are on, the driver is off-duty. A sedan-style taxi can't take more than four people; the minivan cabs can take more. So expect to split up if your group is larger than that.

pay a $1 surcharge between 4 and 8pm and a 50¢ surcharge after 8pm and before 6am. A 15% to 20% tip is customary. (At press time the cab drivers were lobbying the city for a fare hike due to increased fuel costs.)

The TLC has posted a Taxi Rider's Bill of Rights sticker in every cab. Drivers are required to take you anywhere in the five boroughs, to Nassau or Westchester counties, or to Newark Airport. They are supposed to know how to get you to any address in Manhattan and all major points in the outer boroughs. They are also required to provide air-conditioning and turn off the radio on demand, and they cannot smoke while you're in the cab. They are required to be polite.

You are allowed to dictate the route that is taken. It's a good idea to look at a map before you get in a taxi. Taxi drivers have been known to jack up the fare on visitors who don't know better by taking a circuitous route between points A and B.

But do listen to your driver if he proposes an alternate route. These guys spend hours a day on these streets, and they know where the worst traffic is or where Con Ed has dug up an intersection. A knowledgeable driver will know how to get you to your destination quickly and efficiently.

Always make sure the meter is turned on at the start of the ride. You'll see the red LED readout register the initial $2.50 and start calculating the fare as you go. I've witnessed unscrupulous drivers buzzing unsuspecting visitors around the city with the meter off, and then overcharging them at drop-off time.

Always ask for the receipt—it comes in handy if you need to make a complaint or have left something in a cab. In fact, it's a good idea to make a mental note of the driver's four-digit medallion number (usually posted on the divider between the front and back seats) just in case you need it later. You probably won't, but it's a good idea to play it safe.

A taxi driver is obligated to take you to your desired destination. If a taxi driver is on duty but refuses to take you to your destination, write down the driver's name and medallion number and file a complaint with the Taxi and Limousine Commission.

For all driver complaints, including the one above, and to report lost property, call ☎ 311 or 212-NEWYORK (outside the metro area). For details on getting to and from the local airports by taxi, see "By Plane" under "Getting There," in chapter 1. For further taxi information—including a complete rundown of your rights as a taxi rider—point your Web browser to www.ci.nyc.ny.us/taxi.

3 Playing It Safe

Sure, there's crime in New York City, but millions of people spend their lives here without being robbed or assaulted. In fact, New York is safer than any other big American city and is listed by the FBI as somewhere around 150th in the nation for total crimes. While that's encouraging for all of us, it's still important to take precautions.

Men should carry their wallets in their front pockets and women should keep hold of their purse straps. Cross camera and purse straps over one shoulder, across your front, and under the other arm. Never hang a purse on the back of a chair or on a hook in a bathroom stall; keep it in your lap or between your feet, with one foot through a strap and up against the purse itself. Avoid carrying large amounts of cash. You might carry your money in several pockets so that if one is picked, you won't be without cash. Skip the flashy jewelry and keep valuables out of sight when you're on the street.

Panhandlers are seldom dangerous and can be ignored. If a stranger walks up to you on the street with a sob story ("I live in the suburbs and was just attacked and don't have the money to get home" or whatever), it's likely a scam. You have every right to walk away and not feel bad. Be wary of an individual who "accidentally" falls in front of you or causes some other commotion, because he or she may be working with someone else who will take your wallet when you try to help. And remember: You will lose if you place a bet on a sidewalk game of chance.

SUBWAY SAFETY TIPS In general, the subways are safe, especially in Manhattan. There are panhandlers and questionable characters like anywhere else in the city, but subway crime has gone down to 1960s levels. Still, stay alert and trust your instincts. Always keep a hand on your personal belongings.

When using the subway, don't wait for trains near the edge of the platform or on extreme ends of a station. During non-rush hours, wait for the train in view of the token-booth clerk or under the yellow DURING OFF HOURS TRAINS STOP HERE signs, and ride in the operator's or conductor's car (usually in the center of the train; you'll see his or her head stick out of the window when the doors open). Choose crowded cars over empty ones—there's safety in numbers.

Avoid subways late at night, and splurge on a cab or take the bus after about 10 or 11pm.

FAST FACTS: New York City

American Express Travel-service offices are at many Manhattan locations, including 295 Park Avenue South at 23rd Street (☎ 212/691-9797); 1535 Broadway, in the eighth-floor lobby (☎ 212/575-6580); on the mezzanine level at Macy's, 34th Street and Broadway (☎ 212/695-8075); and 374 Park Ave., at 53rd Street (☎ 212/421-8240). Call ☎ 800/AXP-TRIP or visit www.americanexpress.com for other locations or info.

Area Codes There are four area codes in the city: two in Manhattan, the original 212 and 646, and two in the outer boroughs, the original 718 and 347. Also common is the 917 area code, assigned to cellphones. For all calls between these area codes dial 1 + the area code + the seven digits.

Business Hours In general, retail stores are open Monday through Saturday from 10am to 6 or 7pm, Thursday from 10am to 8:30 or 9pm, and Sunday from noon to 5pm (see chapter 5). Banks tend to be open Monday through Friday from 9am to 3pm and sometimes Saturday mornings.

Doctors For medical emergencies, head to the nearest emergency room (see "Hospitals," below). For less urgent health problems, New York has several walk-in medical centers, such as DOCS at New York Healthcare, 55 E. 34th St., between Park and Madison avenues (☎ 212/252-6001), for non-emergency illnesses. The clinic, affiliated with Beth Israel Medical Center, is open Monday through Friday from 8am to 7pm, Saturday from 9am to 1pm, and Sunday from 9am to 1pm. The NYU Downtown Hospital offers physician referrals at ☎ 212/312-5000.

Emergencies Dial ☎ 911 for fire, police, and ambulance.

Hospitals The following hospitals have 24-hour emergency rooms. Don't forget your insurance card.

Downtown: New York University Downtown Hospital, 170 William St., between Beekman and Spruce streets (☎ 212/312-5063 or 212/312-5000); St. Vincent's Hospital and Medical Center, 153 W. 11th St., at Seventh Avenue (☎ 212/604-7000); and Beth Israel Medical Center, First Avenue and 16th Street (☎ 212/420-2000).

Midtown: Bellevue Hospital, 462 First Ave., at 27th Street (☎ 212/252-94571); New York University Medical Center, 550 First Ave., at 33rd Street (☎ 212/263-7300); and St. Luke's/Roosevelt Hospital, 425 W. 59th St., between Ninth and Tenth avenues (☎ 212/523-4000).

Upper West Side: St. Luke's Hospital, 1111 Amsterdam Ave. at 114th Street (☎ 212/523-4000); and Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, 622 W. 168th St., between Broadway and Ft. Washington Avenue (☎ 212/305-2500).

Hot Lines Department of Consumer Affairs ☎ 212/487-4444; and taxi complaints at ☎ 212/NYC-TAXI. If you suspect your car may have been towed, call the Department of Transportation TOW-AWAY Help Line at ☎ 212/869-2929. Call ☎ 311 for general information.

Libraries The New York Public Library is on Fifth Avenue at 42nd Street (☎ 212/930-0830). This Beaux Arts beauty houses more than 38 million volumes, and the beautiful reading rooms have been restored to their former glory. There are other branches in almost every neighborhood; you can find a list online at www.nypl.org.

Liquor Laws The minimum legal age to purchase and consume alcoholic beverages in New York is 21. Liquor and wine are sold only in licensed stores, which are open 6 days a week, with most choosing to close on Sunday. Liquor stores are closed on holidays and election days while the polls are open. Beer can be purchased in grocery stores and delis 24 hours a day, except Sunday before noon.

Newspapers & Magazines There are three major daily newspapers: the New York Times, the Daily News, and the New York Post. For details on where to find arts and entertainment listings, see "Publications" under "Visitor Information" in "Orientation," earlier in this chapter.

Pharmacies Duane Reade (www.duanereade.com) has 24-hour pharmacies in Midtown at 224 W. 57th St., at Broadway (☎ 212/541-9708); on the Upper West Side at 2465 Broadway, at 91st Street (☎ 212/663-1580); and on the Upper East Side at 1279 Third Ave., at 74th Street (☎ 212/744-2668).

Police Dial ☎ 911 in an emergency; otherwise, call ☎ 646/610-5000 or 718/610-5000 (NYPD headquarters) for the number of the nearest precinct.

Restrooms Public restrooms are available at the visitor centers in Midtown (1560 Broadway, between 46th and 47th sts.; and 810 Seventh Ave., between 52nd and 53rd sts.). Grand Central Terminal, at 42nd Street between Park and Lexington avenues, also has clean restrooms. You can also find public rest rooms in Starbucks, chain bookstores, hotel lobbies, or department stores. On the Lower East Side, stop into the Lower East Side BID Visitor Center, 261 Broome St., between Orchard and Allen streets (daily 10am–4pm).

Smoking Smoking is prohibited on all public transportation, in the lobbies of hotels and office buildings, in taxis, bars, restaurants, and in most shops.

Taxes Sales tax is 8.625% on meals, most goods, and some services, but is not charged on clothing and footwear under $110. Hotel tax is 13.25% plus $2 per room per night (including sales tax). Parking-garage tax is 18.25%.

Transit Information For information on getting to and from the airport, see “Getting There” in chapter 1, or call Air-Ride at ☎ 800/247-7433. For information on subways and buses, call the MTA at ☎ 718/330-1234, or see “Getting Around,” earlier in this chapter.

Traveler's Assistance Travelers Aid (www.travelersaid.org) helps distressed travelers with all kinds of problems, including accidents, sickness, and lost or stolen luggage. There is an office on the first floor of Terminal 6 (Jet Blue terminal) at JFK Airport (☎ 718/656-4870), and one in Newark Airport's Terminal B (☎ 973/623-5052).

Weather For the current temperature and next day's forecast, look in the upper-right corner of the front page of the New York Times or call ☎ 212/976-1212. If you want to know how to pack before you arrive, point your browser to www.cnn.com/weather or www.weather.com.

Where to Stay

It's official: Hotel rates in New York are the most expensive in the U.S. That said, there are bargains out there at every price level; but a bargain in New York might be a king's ransom in St. Louis.

PRICE CATEGORIES & RACK RATES The hotels listed below have provided us with their best rate estimates for 2008, and all quoted rates were correct at press time. Be aware, however, that rates can change at any time. Rates are always subject to availability, seasonal fluctuations, and plain-old rate hikes. It's smart to expect price shifts in both directions in late 2007 and 2008 as hoteliers adjust to new demand patterns.

1 Financial District

VERY EXPENSIVE

Ritz-Carlton New York, Battery Park ★★☆☆ Perfect on almost every level, the only drawback to this Ritz-Carlton is its remote downtown location. But that location, on the extreme southern tip of Manhattan, is also one of its strengths. Where else can you get, in most rooms anyway, magnificent views of New York Harbor from your bedroom—complete with telescope for close-ups of Lady Liberty? Where else can you have a cocktail in your hotel bar and watch the sun set over the harbor? And where else can you go for a morning jog around the Manhattan waterfront? This modern, Art Deco-influenced high-rise differs from the English-countryside look of most Ritz-Carlton properties, including its sister hotel on Central Park (p. 56), but that's where the differences end. You'll find the full slate of comforts and services typical of Ritz-Carlton here, from Frette-dressed feather beds to the chain's signature Bath Butler, who will draw a scented bath for you in your own deep soaking tub. If you don't mind the location and the commute to Midtown and beyond, you won't find a more luxurious choice.

weekend packages. AE, DC, DISC, MC, V. Valet parking $60. Subway: 4, 5 to Bowling Green. Amenities: Restaurant; lobby lounge (w/outdoor seating) for afternoon tea and cocktails; 14th-floor cocktail bar w/light dining and outdoor seating; state-of-the-art health club w/views; spa treatments; 24-hr. concierge; well-equipped business center w/24-hr. secretarial services; 24-hr. room service; laundry service; dry cleaning; Ritz-Carlton Club Level w/5 food presentations daily; technology butler and bath butler services. In room: A/C, TV w/pay movies and video games, dataport, minibar, fridge, hair dryer, safe, CD player, DVD w/surround sound in suites and Club rooms, wireless and high-speed Internet connectivity.

EXPENSIVE/MODERATE

Exchange Hotel ★ (Finds) This cozy hotel is a solid, mid-priced choice if you are looking for a downtown location. A short walk from Wall Street, the South Street Seaport, Brooklyn Bridge, and Chinatown, the Exchange Hotel features personalized service and a few perks like free Wi-Fi and a complimentary continental breakfast. Recently renovated in a sleek, contemporary style, standard and deluxe guest rooms are on the small side, but are nicely outfitted with plasma televisions, mini-refrigerators and microwaves. The suites are roomy with a separate living room, black leather furniture and a full-sized kitchen. Bathrooms are tight in both the guest rooms and suites and include those marble bowl sinks that look good, but don't leave much space for your toiletries. The Exchange is a welcome addition to an area much too lacking in lodging.

The Wall Street Inn ★ (Finds) This intimate hotel is the preferred choice for those working on the Street. But it's also a good choice for visitors who don't want to work. This intimate, seven-story hotel is ideal for those who want a lower Manhattan location without corporate blandness. The hotel is warm, comforting, and serene, and the friendly, professional staff offers the kind of personalized service you won't get from a chain. Rooms aren't huge, but the bedding is top-quality and all the conveniences are at hand. Rooms ending in "01" are smallest; seventh-floor rooms are best, as the bathrooms have extra counter space and whirlpool tubs.

2 Lower East Side

EXPENSIVE

The Hotel on Rivington ★★ The contrast of a gleaming 21-story, glass-tower luxury hotel in the midst of 19th- and early-20th-century Lower East Side tenement buildings is striking, but an accurate representation of what that neighborhood has become. From the floor-to-ceiling windows of your room, surrounded by amenities such as flat-panel televisions, Japanese soaking tubs in the bathrooms, and Tempur-Pedic mattresses, not only do you have incredible, unobstructed city views, but you can look down and spot ancient Lower East Side landmarks such as the sign for the Schapiro Kosher wine factory, the Economy Candy store (est. 1937). You may not be close to the center of Manhattan, but you will be in a location that's both historic and trendy, where old-world customs and institutions coexist with the new and the supercool. Along with the views, three-quarters of the rooms have private terraces, the option of in-room spa services, and heated, tiled floors in the large bathrooms where you can enjoy your view of the city as you bathe—which also means someone with binoculars might just have a view of you, too.

Cosmopolitan Hotel-Tribeca ★ Value Behind a plain-vanilla TriBeCa awning is one of the best hotel deals in Manhattan for budget travelers who prefer a private bathroom. Everything is strictly budget but nice: The modern IKEA-ish furniture includes a work desk and an armoire (a few rooms have a dresser and hanging rack instead); for a few extra bucks, you can have a love seat, too. Beds are comfy, and sheets and towels are of good quality. Rooms are small but make the most of the limited space, and the whole place is pristine. The two-level minilofts have lots of character, but expect to duck on the second level. Management does a great job of keeping everything fresh. The TriBeCa location is safe, hip, and subway-convenient. Services are kept at a minimum to keep costs down.

3 SoHo

VERY EXPENSIVE

The Mercer ★★ The best of the downtown, celebrity-crawling, hip and trendy hotels, the Mercer is a place where even those who represent the antithesis of hip (and I'm speaking personally) can feel at home. Though SoHo can be a bit over the top with its high-end boutiques, cutting-edge restaurants, and a constant parade of too-serious fashionistas on the streets, it is still an exciting place to be. And the corner of Mercer and Prince streets, the location of the hotel, is probably the epicenter of SoHo. Still, once inside, there is a pronounced calm—from the postmodern library lounge and the relaxed Mizrahi-clad staff to the huge, soundproof loftlike guest rooms; the hotel is a perfect complement to the scene outside. The Mercer is one of the few New York hotels with ceiling fans. The tile-and-marble bathrooms have a steel cart for storage and an oversize shower stall or oversize two-person tub (state your preference when booking). Just off the lobby is the Kitchen restaurant, one of Jean-Georges Vongerichten's earlier endeavors that is still going strong.

EXPENSIVE

Hotel Gansevoort ★★ Built from the ground up by hotelier Henry Kallan (of New York's Hotel Giraffe and The Library), the Gansevoort was the first major hotel in the trendy Meat-Packing District. And now, this sleek, 14-floor zinc-colored tower, with its open, sprawling lobby, the popular restaurant Ono, and the indoor/outdoor rooftop bar and pool is the symbolic anchor of the district. The Gansevoort offers, as do all of Henry Kallan's hotels, excellent, personable service. As well, rooms are a good size with comfortable furnishings in soft tones and high-tech amenities such as plasma televisions and Wi-Fi. Suites have a living room and separate bedroom and some have small balconies and bay windows. Corner suites offer adjoining guest rooms. The generous-size bathrooms are done up in ceramic, stainless steel, and marble and are impeccably appointed. In all the guest rooms and throughout the hotel, original art by New York artists is on display.

Larchmont Hotel ★★ Value Well located on a beautiful tree-lined block in a residential part of Greenwich Village, this is a wonderful European-style hotel. If you're willing to share a bathroom, it's hard to do better for the money. The entire place has an air of warmth and sophistication; the butter-yellow lobby even smells good. Each bright guest room is tastefully done in rattan and outfitted with a writing desk, a mini-library of books, an alarm clock, a wash basin, and a few extras that you normally have to pay a lot more for, such as cotton bathrobes, slippers, and ceiling fans. Every floor has two shared bathrooms (with hair dryers) and a small, simple kitchen. The management is constantly renovating, so everything feels clean and fresh. Some of the city's best shopping, dining, and sightseeing—plus your choice of subway lines—are just a walk away. This hotel has a devoted following that recommends it to all their friends, so book well in advance (the management suggests 6–7 weeks' lead time).

Inn on 23rd Street ★★ ★ Finds Behind an unassuming entrance in the middle of bustling 23rd Street is one of New York's lodging

Plenty of Room at the Inn

When you think of accommodations in New York, you usually think big—tall, sturdy, monoliths with hundreds of rooms. You don't think of quaint guesthouses or inns where a home-cooked breakfast is served. But New York is a diverse city and that diversity can be found in its accommodations, too. So if you want an alternative to the quintessential New York hotel and prefer a taste of urban hominess, here are a few options.

On the high end, but worth it if you love authentic 19th-century Victorian romance, is the Inn at Irving Place ★★. Housed in a 170-year-old town house, their rates range from $325 to $495. The rooms are furnished in the style of Edith Wharton's Golden Age New York.

Complimentary breakfast is served each morning in Lady Mendl's parlor, where, if the weather is nippy, you'll find a comforting fire roaring. See p. 55 for a detailed review.

Breakfast prepared by culinary students of the New School is one of the highlights of the Inn on 23rd Street ★★. Each of the inn's 14 rooms, which range in price from $219 to $359 per night, were decorated by the owners, Annette and Barry Fisherman, with items they've collected from their travels. See p. 49 for a detailed review.

treasures: a real urban bed-and-breakfast with as personal a touch as you will find anywhere. All 14 guest rooms are spacious. Each has a king or queen bed outfitted with a comfy pillow-top mattress and top-quality linens, satellite TV, a large private bathroom with Turkish towels, and a roomy closet. Rooms have themes based on how they are designed; there's the Rosewood Room, with '60s built-ins; the elegant Asian Bamboo Room; and Ken's Cabin, a large lodgelike room with cushy, well-worn leather furnishings and wonderful Americana relics. I stayed in the Victorian suite where the decor included framed Victorian-era dental tools. The inn features a lovely library where the complimentary breakfast is served and where there is also an honor bar. Other perks include free high-speed Internet access in the rooms, Wi-Fi in the library, and wine and cheese served on Friday and Saturday.

The first home of the Gay Men's Health Crisis, an 1850 brownstone in Chelsea, is the Colonial House Inn, 318 W. 22nd St., between Eighth and Ninth avenues (☎ 800/689-3779 or 212/243-9669; www.colonialhouseinn.com). This 20-room four-story walk-up caters to a mostly GLBT clientele, but everybody is welcome. Some rooms have shared bathrooms; deluxe rooms have private bathrooms and some have working fireplaces. There's a roof deck with a clothing-optional area. Breakfast is included and rates range from $85 to $150 for a shared bathroom or $135 to $150 for a deluxe room with a private bathroom.

On the popular yet still residential Upper West Side is the aptly-named Country Inn the City ★, 270 W. 77th St., between Broadway and West End Avenue (☎ 212/580-4183; www.countryinnthecity.com). This 1891 town house has only four rooms, but all are spacious, quaintly decorated, and equipped with full kitchens. Rates range from $150 to $300 and include breakfast items in your refrigerator. But there is no resident innkeeper and a maid services your room only every few days.

Gramercy Park Hotel ★★☆☆ Shuttered for two years, this 1925-built legend bordering charming Gramercy Park has been redone stunningly by famed hotelier Ian Schrager. Start with the lobby, with its eclectic mix of art: Julian Schnabel-designed lamps, two 10-foot Italian fireplaces, red velvet curtains, Moroccan tiles, bronze tables, and a magnificent Venetian glass chandelier. What once was a 500-plus room hotel now features only 185 rooms so, where the former version had tiny rooms, now there is space. More than half of the rooms are suites, some with views overlooking Gramercy Park, and all have mahogany English drinking cabinets where the mini-bar and DVD player is hidden, some variation of the overstuffed lounge chair, and a portrait of Schnabel's friend, the late Andy Warhol. Beds are velvet-upholstered, tables feature leather tops, and photos by world famous photo-journalists adorn the walls. Bathrooms are large and feature wood-paneled walls. If you choose to leave your room, the hotel's magnificent Rose Bar is where you should venture first (p. 190), but make sure you are on the "list."

Carlton Hotel on Madison Avenue ★★ This 1904 Beaux Arts hotel, formerly known as the Seville, was getting worn around the edges when it was rescued by architect David Rockwell and refurbished in 2005. The highlight of that $60-million renovation is the grand, sweeping lobby complete with a marble curving staircase and a cathedral-like high ceiling. The Carlton has tried to recapture the glory of the past blended with New Age nods like contemporary furnishings in the lobby along with a bubbling, two-story waterfall. Rooms are a generous size and retain that Beaux Arts motif with the addition of modern amenities such as Wi-Fi and iPod clock radios. The marble bathrooms offer plenty of counter space; some rooms have bathtubs while others just have showers. Off the lobby is the acclaimed bi-level restaurant Country (p. 108) where above the upstairs dining room, a stained-glass skylight dome that had been boarded up since World War II has been meticulously restored.

Hotel Giraffe ★★ In the increasingly fashionable Madison Park area, this hotel is a charmer with a calm, intimate feel. Guest rooms are stylish, evoking an urban European character, with high ceilings, velveteen upholstered chairs, and original black-and-white photographs from the 1920s and 1930s. All the rooms are a good size with high ceilings, while deluxe rooms and suites feature French doors that lead to small balconies with large windows and remote-controlled blackout shades. Bathrooms are spacious with plenty of counter space and glass-paneled doors, and all rooms have marble-topped desks with free high-speed Internet access. But what separates this hotel from so many others are its services: A continental breakfast is included and served in the hotel's lobby, where coffee, cookies, and tea are available all afternoon, and wine, cheese, and piano music are offered each evening. There is also a rooftop garden—perfect for a glass of wine or coffee during warm weather.

Inn at Irving Place ★★ If it weren't for the street noise outside—or the Wi-Fi provided in your room—upon entering the inn, you would think you were transported to the 19th-century New York of The Age of Innocence. This 170-year-old town house offers antique charm in the big city. All rooms are spacious, with period furniture and art, nonworking fireplaces, and big bathrooms with pedestal sinks and brass fixtures, while the junior suites feature small but luxurious sitting areas. The rooms are named for famous 19th-century New Yorkers such as Edith Wharton, O. Henry, and Washington Irving. The Madame Olenska (bonus points if you know who she was) junior suite features a king-sized bed and a window nook overlooking Irving Place. Breakfast in bed, tea served in your rooms, or in-room massages can all be arranged by the inn's helpful staff. And if the sweetness of a bygone era begins to wear on you, venture downstairs for a blast of reality at Cibar, a popular martini bar that features a DJ nightly.

Gershwin Hotel ★ Kids Nestled between Le Trapeze (a swingers club) and the Museum of Sex, and with its own glowing protruding horns as your landmark, the proximity to erotica is really just a coincidence. This creative-minded, Warholesque hotel caters to up-and-coming artistic types—and well-established names with an eye for good value. The lobby was recently renovated, and along with a new bar, Gallery at the Gershwin, much of the original art remains. The standard rooms are clean and bright, with Picasso-style wall murals and Philippe Starck-ish takes on motel furnishings. Superior rooms are best, as they're newly renovated, and worth the extra $10; all have either a queen-sized bed, two twins, or two doubles, plus a newish private bathroom with cute, colorful tile. If you're bringing the brood, two-room suites, or Family Rooms, are a good option. For those on the tightest of budgets, there are also hostel-style rooms available in the $40–$45 range.

Ritz-Carlton New York, Central Park ★★ ★ Kids There's a lot to like about this hotel—from its enviable location overlooking Central Park to the impeccable and personable service—but what I like best is that this undoubtedly luxurious hotel manages to maintain a homey elegance and does not intimidate you with an overabundance of style. Rooms are spacious and decorated in traditional, English-countryside style. Suites are larger than most New York City apartments. Rooms facing Central Park come with telescopes, and all have flat-screen TVs with DVD players; the hotel even has a library of Academy Award–winning films available. The marble bathrooms are also oversize and feature a choice of bathrobes, terry or linen, and extravagant Frederic Fekkai bath amenities.

For families who can afford the prices, the hotel is extremely kid-friendly. Suites have sofa beds, and cribs and rollaway beds can be brought in. Children are given in-room cookies and milk. You can even bring your dog (under 60 lb.); if it rains, the pooch gets to wear a Burberry trench coat. Now that's homey elegance.

The Algonquin ★★ The atmosphere in this 1902 landmark building is so steeped in writers' lore that you'll feel guilty turning on the television instead of reading the latest issue of the New Yorker that's provided in the guest rooms. Or maybe the television will be a welcome respite from the barrage of witticisms and prose displayed throughout the hotel. Rooms can be cramped, but they are equipped with possibly the most comfortable, inviting beds in the city as well as high-speed Internet and flat-screen televisions. If you have a tendency toward claustrophobia, head to the plush lobby, where you can sit in cushy chairs, sip exquisite (and expensive) cocktails, have a snack, or just read or play on your laptop. (The lobby is Wi-Fi equipped.) For a special splurge, stay in one of the roomy one-bedroom suites, where all that's missing to get you going on that novel you've been toying with is a manual Smith Corona typewriter.

Meals are served in the recently renovated and celebrated Round Table Room, while the fabulous Oak Room (p. 187) is one of the city's top cabaret rooms, featuring such esteemed talents as Andrea Marcovicci and Julie Wilson. The publike Blue Bar is home to a rotating collection of Hirschfeld drawings that's well worth a browse.

Doubletree Guest Suites Times Square ★ Kids For many, the location of this 43-story Doubletree, in the heart of darkness known as Times Square, where the streets are constantly gridlocked, the bright neon burns holes into your eye sockets, the noise level is ear-splitting, and where, lucky you, there is an Olive Garden across the street and a McDonald's next door, might offer a more Vegas-like experience than a true New York one. But at times we all must make sacrifices for our children, and this Doubletree, location and all, is perfect for the kids. From the fresh-baked chocolate-chip cookies served upon arrival, the spacious and affordable suites big enough for two 5-year-olds to play hide-and-seek and the all-day children's room-service menu and its proximity to the gargantuan Toys "R" Us, the TKTS Booth, and other kid-friendly Times Square offerings, this Doubletree is hard to beat for families. Bathrooms have two entrances so the kids don't have to traipse through the parent's room, and every suite has two televisions (with PlayStation).

Le Parker Meridien ★★ Kids Not many hotels in New York can rival the attributes of this hotel: Its location on 57th Street, not too far from Times Square and a close walk from Central Park and Fifth Avenue shopping, is practically perfect; the 17,000-square-foot fitness center, called Gravity, features state-of-the-art equipment, basketball and racquetball courts, a spa, and a rooftop pool; three excellent restaurants, including Norma's (p. 99), where breakfast is an art, and the aptly named Burger Joint (p. 106), rated by many as the best hamburger in the city; a gorgeous lobby that also serves as a public space; and elevators with televisions that show Tom and Jerry and Rocky and Bullwinkle, and Charlie Chaplin shorts that are a wonder for the kids. The spacious hotel rooms have a fun feel to them, with hidden drawers and swirling television platforms, inventively exploiting an economical use of space. Rooms have wood platform beds with feather beds, built-ins that include work desks, Aeron chairs, free high-speed Internet, and 32-inch flat-screen televisions with VCR/DVD and CD players. The slate-and-limestone bathrooms are large but, unfortunately, come with shower only.

Sofitel New York ★★ (Finds) There are many fine hotels on 44th Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues, but the newest (built in 2000) and best, in this writer's estimation, is the soaring Sofitel. Upon entering the hotel and the warm, inviting lobby with check-in tucked off to the side, you wouldn't think you were entering a hotel that is this young—which is one of the reasons why the hotel is so special. The designers have successfully melded modern, new-world amenities with European old-world elegance. The rooms are spacious and ultracomfortable, adorned with art from New York and Paris. The lighting is soft and romantic, the walls and windows soundproof. Suites are extra-special, equipped with king-sized beds, two televisions, and pocket doors separating the bedroom from a sitting room. Bathrooms are magnificent, with separate showers and soaking tubs. Sofitel reflects its French heritage with a greeting of “bonjour” or “bonsoir” at reception; a gift shop with hard-to-find French products, including perfumes and cosmetics; and a French restaurant called Gaby that offers delicious croissants for breakfast.

Casablanca Hotel ★★ (Value) Try to picture the exotic, romantic setting of the movie Casablanca—ceiling fans, mosaic tiles, and North African-themed art—and then try to picture that setting in the heart of neon-blinding, cacophonous Times Square. The combination seems unlikely, but really, who wouldn't want a desert oasis in the middle of all that mayhem? And that's what the Casablanca Hotel really is: a calming refuge where you can escape from the noise and crowds. Where, in Rick's Café, the Casablanca's homey guest lounge, you can sit by a fire, read a paper, check your e-mail, watch television on the gargantuan-size screen, or sip a cappuccino from the serve-yourself cappuccino/espresso machine. Or, if the days or nights are balmy, you can lounge on the rooftop deck or second-floor courtyard. The rooms might not be the biggest around, but they are well outfitted with ceiling fans, bathrobes, free bottles of water, complimentary high-speed Internet access, and tiled bathrooms. Because of its location, moderate prices, and size (only 48 rooms), the Casablanca is in high demand, so book early.

Hotel 41 ★ (Finds) Like the Casablanca Hotel (above) a few blocks up, Hotel 41 offers a stylish, comfortable, and moderate alternative to the gleaming, glittering, and pricey hotels that tower over Times Square. Just seven floors high, the Hotel 41 features minimalist modern decor in the guest rooms. Rooms, for these prices, are of decent size, but what sets the hotel apart are the freebies: high-speed Internet, complimentary continental breakfast, free espresso or cappuccino all day, in-room DVD players with the hotel's DVD library available for viewing, bathrobes in the rooms, double-paned windows (a necessity in Times Sq.), refrigerators in all rooms, and amenities like Aveda bath products. If you plan to stay for more than a few days, try for one of the junior suites or, for a splurge, Penthouse no. 2, which features an outdoor deck. Service is boutique-friendly, and off the lobby is Bar 2156, a lively bar/restaurant (where breakfast is served) that draws a local crowd for happy hour.

Hotel Metro ★★ (Kids) The Metro is the choice in Midtown for those who don't want to sacrifice style or comfort for affordability. This Art Deco-style jewel has larger rooms than you'd expect for the price. They're outfitted with retro furnishings, playful fabrics, fluffy pillows, smallish but beautifully appointed marble bathrooms, and alarm clocks. Only about half the bathrooms have tubs, but the others have shower stalls big enough for two (junior suites have whirlpool tubs). The family room is an ingenious invention: a two-room suite that has a second bedroom in lieu of a sitting area; families on tighter budgets can opt for a double/double.

The neo-Deco design gives the whole place an air of New York glamour. A great collection of black-and-white photos, from Man Ray classics to Garbo and Dietrich portraits, adds to the vibe. The fire-lit library/lounge area off the lobby, where a complimentary buffet breakfast is laid out and the coffeepot's on all day, is a popular hangout. Service is attentive, and the well-furnished rooftop terrace boasts a breathtaking view of the Empire State Building.

Hotel QT ★★ Value Owned by Andre Balazs, of The Mercer (p. 48), Hotel QT offers much of The Mercer's style without the hefty rates. From its Midtown location, to many extras such as a swimming pool in the lobby, steam room and sauna, free high-speed Internet, complimentary continental breakfast, and good-size rooms including a number with bunk beds, Hotel QT is now one of the best moderate options in the Times Square area. Upon entering, you check in at a kiosk/front desk where you pick up periodicals or essentials to stock your minibar. The rooms are sparse in tone, but the queen- and king-sized platform beds are plush and dressed with Egyptian-cotton sheets. The biggest drawback is the bathrooms: There are no doors on the bathrooms—sliding doors conceal the shower (none of the rooms have tubs) and the toilet. But for prices this low along with the extras, who are we to quibble?

Broadway Inn ★ (Finds) More like a San Francisco B&B than a Theater District hotel, this welcoming inn is a charmer. The second-floor lobby sets the easygoing tone with stocked bookcases, cushy seating, and cafe tables where breakfast is served. The rooms are basic but comfy, outfitted in an appealing neo-Deco style with firm beds, good-quality linens and textiles, and nice bathrooms (about half have showers only). The place is impeccably kept. Two rooms have king-sized beds and whirlpool tubs, but the standard doubles are fine for two if you're looking to save some dough. If there are more than two of you, or you're staying a while, the suites—with pullout sofa, microwave, minifridge, and lots of closet space—are a great deal. The location can be noisy, but double-paned windows keep the rooms surprisingly peaceful; still, ask for a back-facing one if you're extra-sensitive. The inn's biggest asset is its terrific staff, who go above and beyond the call to make guests happy; they'll even give you a hotline number upon check-in to call for directions, advice, and other assistance while you're on the town. The inn has inspired a loyal following, so reserve early. However, there's no elevator in the four-story building, so overpackers and travelers with limited mobility should book elsewhere.

Red Roof Inn ★ (Value) Manhattan's first and only Red Roof Inn offers relief from Midtown's high-priced hotel scene. The hotel occupies a former office building that was gutted and laid out fresh, allowing for more spacious rooms and bathrooms than you'll usually find in this price category. The lobby feels smart, and elevators are quiet and efficient. In-room amenities—including coffeemakers and TVs with on-screen Web access—are better than most competitors', and furnishings are new and comfortable. Wi-Fi is available throughout the property. The location—on a block lined with nice hotels and affordable Korean restaurants, a stone's throw from the Empire State Building—is excellent. Be sure to compare the rates offered by Apple Core Hotel's reservation line and those quoted on Red Roof's national reservation line and website, as they can vary significantly. Complimentary continental breakfast adds to the value.

Subway: B, D, F, N, R, V to 34th St. Amenities: Breakfast room; wine-and-beer lounge; exercise room; concierge; laundry service; dry cleaning. In room: A/C, TV w/pay movies and Internet access, dataport, fridge, coffeemaker, hair dryer, iron, video games, Wi-Fi.

Travel Inn (Kids Value) Extras such as a huge outdoor pool and sun deck, a sunny, up-to-date fitness room, and free parking (with in and out privileges!) make the Travel Inn a terrific deal. The Travel Inn may not be loaded with personality, but it does offer the clean, bright regularity of a good chain hotel—an attractive trait in a city where “quirky” is the catchword at most affordable hotels. Rooms are oversize and comfortably furnished, with extra-firm beds and work desks; even the smallest double is sizable and has a roomy bathroom, and double/doubles make great affordable shares for families. A total renovation over the last couple of years has made everything feel like new, even the nicely tiled bathrooms. Though a bit off the track, Off-Broadway theaters and affordable restaurants are at hand, and it's a 10-minute walk to the Theater District.

The Peninsula-New York ★★☆☆ The paparazzi was waiting outside as I lugged my bag into the hotel lobby and, for a moment, they contemplated an explosion of flashbulbs. It didn't take them long, however, to realize I was no celeb—just a fortunate soul spending a night at the Peninsula Hotel. Housed in a beauty of a landmark Beaux Arts building, the Peninsula is the perfect combination of old-world charm and modern, state-of-the-art technology. Rooms are huge with plenty of closet and storage space, but best of all is the bedside control panel that allows you to regulate lighting, television, stereo, air-conditioning, and signal the DO NOT DISTURB sign on your door. Even though you don't have to leave the comfort of your bed, eventually you will need to go to the bathroom, and when you do, you'll not be disappointed. The huge marble bathrooms all have spacious soaking tubs with yet another control panel including the controls for, in most rooms, a television so you can watch while taking your bubble bath. The Peninsula also features one of the best and biggest New York hotel health clubs and spas, the rooftop Pen-Top Bar, and a faultless concierge desk. If a splurge is what you want, you won't do much better than the Peninsula.

Valet parking $55 Subway: E, V to Fifth Ave. Pets accepted. Amenities: Restaurant; rooftop bar; library-style lounge for afternoon tea and cocktails; tri-level rooftop health club and spa w/treatment rooms, heated pool, exercise classes, whirlpool, sauna, and sun deck; 24-hr. concierge; business center; 24-hr. room service; in-room massage; babysitting; laundry service; dry cleaning. In room: A/C, TV w/pay movies, fax, mini-bar, hair dryer, laptop-size safe, complimentary "water bar" w/5 choices of bottled water, T1 Internet connectivity, Wi-Fi.

St. Regis ★★ When John Jacob Astor built the St. Regis in 1904, he set out to create a hotel that would reflect the elegance and luxury he was used to in hotels in Europe. Over a hundred years later, the St. Regis, now a New York landmark, still reflects that European splendor. Located on Fifth Avenue and close to Rockefeller Center, St. Patrick's Cathedral, and Saks, this Beaux Arts classic is a marvel; antique furniture, crystal chandeliers, silk wall coverings, and marble floors adorn both the public spaces and the high-ceilinged, airy guest rooms. The suites are particularly ornate, some with French doors, four-poster beds, and decorative fireplaces. The marble bathrooms are spacious and feature separate showers and tubs. In a nod to the future, plasma televisions were recently added in all the rooms, along with LCD screens in the bathrooms. Service is efficiently white-gloved and every guest is assigned a personal, tuxedoed butler, on call 24 hours to answer any reasonable requests.

Even if it's beyond your budget, take a walk through the lobby and the hotel bar, the famous King Cole Bar—birthplace of the Bloody Mary and home to the Old King Cole mural by Maxfield Parrish.

The Benjamin ★★☆☆ From the retro sign and clock on Lexington Avenue to the high-ceilinged marble lobby, when you enter The Benjamin, it's as if you've stepped into Jazz Age New York. But once you get to your spacious room and notice the numerous high-tech amenities, such as Bose Wave radios, Internet browsers and video games for the TVs, high-speed Internet access, fax machines, ergonomic chairs and moveable workstations, you will know you are most definitely in the 21st century. Many of the amenities are geared toward business travelers, but why should they be the only ones to experience all this comfort and luxury? All rooms are airy, but the deluxe studios and one-bedroom suites are extra large. There are even a few one-bedroom suites with terraces. How many hotels can claim a "sleep concierge" or guarantee a good night's sleep? And don't forget the pillow menu featuring 11 options, including buckwheat and Swedish Memory, in which foam designed by NASA reacts to your body temperature. If you are a light sleeper, however, book a room away from Lexington Avenue, which can get busy (that is, noisy) most weeknights and mornings. Bathrooms feature Frette robes, TV speakers, and water pressure from the showerhead strong enough to make you think you've just experienced a deep-tissue massage. The hotel also features a good fitness center and the Woodstock Spa and Wellness Center.

Hotel Elysée ★★☆☆ This romantic gem of a hotel in the heart of Midtown might be easy to miss: It's dwarfed by modern glass towers on either side of it. But that it is so inconspicuous is part of the Elysée's immense romantic appeal. Built in 1926, the hotel has a storied past as the preferred address for artists and writers including Tennessee Williams, Jimmy Breslin, Maria Callas and Vladimir Horowitz (who donated a Steinway, which still resides in the Piano Suite), John Barrymore, Marlon Brando, and Ava Gardner, who once had a tryst here with football legend Paul Hornung. The hotel still retains that sexy, discreet feel and now is run expertly by HK Hotels (The Giraffe, The Gansevoort, and The Library). Rooms were recently renovated and have many quirky features; some have fireplaces, others have kitchens or solariums, and all are decorated in country-French furnishings. Good-size bathrooms are done up in Italian marble and are well outfitted. Off the gorgeous black-and-white marble-floored lobby is the legendary Monkey Bar. On the second floor is the Club Room, where a free continental breakfast is offered daily along with complimentary wine and cheese weekday evenings.

The Kitano New York ★★☆☆ (Finds) Owned by the Kitano Group of Japan, this elegant Murray Hill gem offers a unique mix of East and West sensibilities. The marble and mahogany lobby, with its Y-shaped staircase and Botero bronze Dog, is one of the most attractive in New York. The hotel was first opened in 1973; in the mid-1990s, along with acquiring an 1896 landmark town house next door, the Kitano was fully renovated. If you're a lucky (and wealthy) individual, you'll get the opportunity to stay in one of three one-bedroom town-house suites, each with sunken living room, bay windows, and original, eclectic art. Or, if your sensibilities are Eastern-oriented, the hotel offers a Tatami suite, with tatami mats, rice paper screens, and a Japanese Tea Ceremony room. Most rooms are not quite that luxurious or unique, but all include tasteful mahogany furniture, soundproof windows, and, for a real taste of Japan, green tea upon arrival; marble bathrooms are large and have heated towel racks and removable showerheads. The sky-lit Garden Café in the town house offers contemporary American cuisine, while Hakubai serves traditional multicourse kaiseki cuisine. There's also an interesting gift shop in the lobby specializing in unique Japanese items. Best of all is the mezzanine-level bar where Wednesday through Saturday nights it turns into Jazz at the Kitano.

The Library Hotel ★★ (Finds) New York is not Las Vegas, so I'm usually wary of the hotel as high concept, but in this case the concept really works: a hotel 1 block from the New York Public Library, each of whose 10 guest-room floors is dedicated to 1 of the 10 major categories of the Dewey Decimal System. When I visited the hotel, I was appropriately booked into a "Geography and Travel" room. There I was greeted with books such as Barcelona, by Robert Hughes, and Bella Tuscany, by Frances Mayes. The most disappointing thing about all those books is that I was only staying 1 night and didn't have the chance to read any of them. Still, there was something about having them by my bed; perhaps their soothing aura comforted me. Overall, the hotel has a pleasing, informal feel. Guest rooms, which come in three categories—petite (really small), deluxe, and junior suites—feature mahogany built-ins, generous desks, and immaculate marble bathrooms; all are extremely comfortable. The Library's public spaces—a reading room where weekday wine and cheese and a daily complimentary breakfast are served, a writer's den with a fireplace and flat-screen television, and a rooftop terrace—all help make The Library a welcome refuge in the heart of the city.

The Roger ★★ The hotel's namesake, Roger Williams, in time, abandoned his puritanical roots to become a secular leader. This Murray Hill hotel, formerly known as "the Roger Williams," shed its traditional, slightly-worn veneer and was reborn in 2005 with a glitzy, colorful new look and style—not to mention a hip name. This Roger wears its new look well. Starting from the welcoming lobby with its odd assortment of mod yet comfortable seating and where small jazz combos entertain 3 nights a week, to the many varieties of rooms—some small, some generous, some with landscaped terraces, others with views of the nearby Empire State building and all with impressive amenities such as colorful quilts, flat-panel televisions, complimentary high-speed Internet, and good-size marble bathrooms—the Roger is now one of the top choices in what is a quiet yet convenient Midtown location. A floating granite staircase leads from the lobby to a mezzanine lounge, where you can have breakfast in the morning and drink cocktails by candlelight at night.

Waldorf=Astoria and the Waldorf Towers ★★☆☆ If you are looking for the epitome of old-school elegance, you can't do better than the Waldorf=Astoria. This massive 1-square-block Art Deco masterpiece is not only a hotel icon, it's a genuine New York City landmark. Here you'll find a lobby so big and grand, it's reminiscent of Grand Central Station, including having its own signature clock. With over 1,000 rooms, the pace can be hectic, and at times, the lines for checking in might remind you of the post office. Thankfully, service here is much more efficient than the post office and it won't be long before you're in your room. And what rooms they are; no two the same, yet all are airy, with high ceilings, traditional decor, comfortable linens and beds, and spacious marble bathrooms, along with fax machines and high-speed Internet access. If you crave more luxury, book a room on the Astoria level, which features huge suites, deluxe bathroom amenities, access to the clubby Astoria Lounge for breakfast or afternoon hors d'oeuvres, and free entry to the hotel's fitness club (other guests pay a fee); for even more opulence, try a suite in the Waldorf Towers, where most rooms are bigger than most New York City apartments.

One of three bars in the hotel, Sir Harry's Bar, off the lobby, is the main gathering spot for a pre- or post-dinner cocktail, but even better is the Bull and Bear, with its round mahogany bar, classic cocktail creations, and celebrated steaks.

Thirty Thirty ★ (Value) Thirty Thirty is just right for bargain-hunting travelers looking for a splash of style with an affordable price. The building—which formerly housed the well-known Martha Washington women's hotel and the legendary nightclub Danceteria, where Madonna got her start—was gutted, renovated, and redone with brand-new everything. The design-conscious tone is set in the loft-like industrial-modern lobby. Rooms are on the smallish side but do the trick for those who intend to spend their days out on the town. They're done in a natural palette with a creative edge—purplish carpet, khaki bedspread, woven wallpaper—that comes together more attractively than you might expect. Configurations are split between twin/twins (great for friends), queens, and queen/queens (great for triples, budget-minded quads, or shares that want more spreading-out room). Nice features include cushioned headboards, firm mattresses, two-line phones, built-in wardrobes, and spacious tiled bathrooms. A few larger units have kitchenettes. There's no room service, but delivery is available from nearby restaurants.

Not only will you immediately dispel any prejudices you might have had toward The Donald, you might even begin to comprehend why someone would be willing to sell their soul for the chance to become the master builder’s apprentice.

Guest rooms are surprisingly understated, with high ceilings and floor-to-ceiling windows, some with incredible views of Central Park and all with telescopes for taking in the view, and sumptuous marble bathrooms with Jacuzzi tubs. But if that’s not enough—it certainly was for me—you also get two complimentary bottles of Trump water, complete with a picture of The Donald on each one. For a hotel this well run, you can forgive the man for his excesses.

Hotel Beacon ★★ (Kids Value) For families, you won't find a better location—or value. Close to Central Park and Riverside Park, the Museum of Natural History and Lincoln Center, and major subway lines, the Beacon is in the heart of the Upper West Side. Rooms are generously sized and feature a kitchenette, a roomy closet, and a marble bathroom. Almost all standard rooms feature two double beds, and they're big enough to sleep a family on a budget. The large one- and two-bedroom suites are some of the best bargains in the city; each has two closets and a pullout sofa in the living room. The two-bedrooms have a second bathroom, making them well outfitted enough to house a small army—including my own. And the view from our room and many others in the hotel is a true New York vista: the magnificent, turn-of-the-20th-century Ansonia building, ballet dancers limbering up at a dance studio, and fresh fruit and vegetables constantly being replenished at Fairway market directly across the street. There's no room service, but a wealth of good budget dining options that deliver are in the immediate vicinity.

The Lucerne ★★ (Finds) This 1903 landmark building has had many incarnations over the years, including one as a dormitory for Columbia University students. But most recently, it has been transformed into a luxury boutique hotel, and that transformation has been a triumph on many levels. As a longtime resident of the Upper West Side, I can easily say the Lucerne best captures the feel of that unique neighborhood. Service here is impeccable, especially for a moderately priced hotel; the attentive GM is on top of every detail and everything is fresh and immaculate. The rooms are all comfortable and big enough for kings, queens, or two doubles, with attractive bathrooms complete with travertine counters. Some of the rooms have views not only of the Hudson River but of one of my favorite pubs, the Dublin House (p. 197). The suites here are extra-special and include a kitchenette, a stocked minifridge, a microwave, and a sitting room with a sofa and extra television.

Hotel Newton ★ (Value) On the northern extreme of the Upper West Side, the Newton, unlike many of its peers, doesn't scream "budget" at every turn. As you enter the pretty lobby, you're greeted by a uniformed staff who are attentive and professional. The rooms are large, with good, firm beds, a desk, and a new bathroom, plus roomy closets in most (a few of the cheapest have wall racks only). Some are big enough to accommodate families, with two doubles or two queen-sized beds. The suites feature two queens in the bedroom, a sofa in the sitting room, plus niceties such as a microwave, mini-fridge, and iron that make them well worth the few extra dollars. The bigger rooms and suites have been upgraded with cherrywood furnishings, but even the older laminated furniture is much nicer than I usually see in this price range. The AAA-approved hotel is impeccably kept. The 96th Street express subway stop is just a block away, providing convenient access to the rest of the city, and the Key West Diner next door is a favorite for huge, cheap breakfasts.

The Carlyle: A Rosewood Hotel ★★ This 34-story grande dame towers over Madison Avenue majestically, epitomizing the old-world, moneyed neighborhood where it stands. Service is white-glove (literally) and doormen wear bowler hats; many celebrities and dignitaries, some with faces obscured by silk scarves, sip tea in the hotel's Gallery. Guest rooms range from singles to seven-room suites, some with terraces and full dining rooms. All have marble bathrooms with whirlpool tubs and the amenities you'd expect from a hotel of this caliber. The English manor-style decor is luxurious but not excessive, creating the comfortably elegant ambience of an Upper East Side apartment. Many apartments have breathtaking views of downtown or the West Side and Central Park.

The lobby was recently renovated: The marble floors and columns, the original clock, and the Piranesi prints and murals were restored, and features such as Baccarat light fixtures, a new reception desk, and an expanded concierge space were added. The hotel's Carlyle Restaurant features excellent French fare, while the supper club Cafe Carlyle (p. 187) is the place for first-rate cabaret. Bemelmans Bar, named after Ludwig Bemelmans, who created the Madeline books and painted the mural here, is a wonderful spot for cocktails; there's live jazz Monday through Saturday evenings.

Hotel Plaza Athénée ★★☆☆ This hideaway in New York's most elegant neighborhood (the stretch of Madison Ave. in the 60s) is a mirror image of that elevated social strata; it's elegant, luxurious, and oozing with sophistication. With antique furniture, hand-painted murals, and the Italian-marble floor that adorns the lobby, the Plaza Athénée has a European feel. And in that tradition, service here is as good as it gets, with personalized check-in and staff at every turn.

The rooms come in a variety of shapes and sizes, and are all high-ceilinged and spacious; entrance foyers give them a real residential feel. They are designed in rich fabrics and warm colors that help set a tone that makes you want to lounge in your room. The suites have so much closet space, it made this New Yorker, used to miniscule apartment closets, envious. Many of the suites have chaises, and a few have terraces large enough to dine out on. The Portuguese-marble bathrooms are outfitted with thick robes made exclusively for the hotel; put one on and you might never want to take it off. The lush, leather-floored lounge is appropriately called Bar Seine and is a welcome spot for a pre-dinner cocktail. The restaurant, Arabelle, receives high praise for its weekend brunch.

The Lowell ★★☆☆ The Lowell's style of luxury is best described as elegant, sophisticated 20th-century opulence. The lobby is small and clubby with first-rate European, old-world service. The rooms are the treasures; each different from the other and all a good size. About two-thirds are suites with kitchenettes or fully equipped kitchens; some have private terraces and most have working fireplaces. In the rooms you'll also find big, cushy armchairs, lots of leather, interesting artwork, and porcelain figurines scattered about. Bathrooms are Italian marble and outfitted with Bulgari amenities. The Pembroke Room offers breakfast, including a hearty English breakfast and afternoon tea, while the Post House is known for their steaks. On a quiet, tree-lined street 1 block from Central Park and in the midst of Madison Avenue shopping, the Lowell's location is ideal for those who want (and can afford) an urban retreat away from the Midtown madness.

Affinia Gardens ★☆☆☆☆ (Finds) One of the newest members of the Affinia hospitality group (The Benjamin, p. 65 is another), this Upper East Side property has a residential feel that is true to the neighborhood. Affinia has transformed the hotel into an oasis of tranquility. Affinia Gardens' theme is serenity. Off the lobby is the lounge, appropriately called "Serenity," a 24-hour quiet zone where you can sit in comfort, sip tea, and unwind. If you choose to relax in the privacy of your room, you won't be disappointed. You can order, free of charge, a "tranquillity kit" that includes meditation CDs and books, massage tools, chair massager, and floor pillows. Or you can lay back on the comfortable Affinia bed and snooze to the calming sounds of the ocean, brook, wind, or forest that come with the clock radio/CD player. This is an all-suite hotel and rooms range from junior suites to two-bedrooms; all are generously sized and come with full kitchens. Bathrooms, proportionally, are on the smallish side but well outfitted. The hotel is a bit out of the way from the center of things. But that can be a plus if tranquility is what you seek.

Where to Dine

Attention, foodies: Welcome to your mecca. New York is the best restaurant town in the country, and one of the finest in the world. Other cities might have particular specialties, but no other culinary capital spans the globe as successfully as the Big Apple.

RESERVATIONS

Reservations are always a good idea, and a virtual necessity if your party is bigger than two. Do yourself a favor and call ahead so you won't be disappointed. If you're booking dinner on a weekend night, it's a good idea to call a few days in advance if you can.

But what if they don't take reservations? Lots of restaurants, especially at the affordable end of the price range, don't take reservations. One of the ways they keep prices down is by packing people in as quickly as possible. Thus, the best cheap and mid-price restaurants often have a wait. Your best bet is to go early. Often you can get in more quickly on a weeknight. Or just go, knowing that you're going to have to wait if you head to a popular spot; hunker down with a cocktail at the bar and enjoy the festivities around you.

Chanterelle ★★ CONTEMPORARY FRENCH One of New York's best "special occasion" restaurants mainly because, well, they treat you so special. The dining room is a charmer with floral displays and an interesting modern art collection. Tables are far enough apart to give diners plenty of intimacy, something rare in many New York restaurants these days. Your server will work with you on your choices, pairing items that go best together. The French-themed menu is seasonal and changes every few weeks, but one signature dish appears on almost every menu: a marvelous grilled seafood sausage. The wine list is superlative but expensive. Still, you don't come to Chanterelle on the cheap—you come to celebrate.

Harry's Steaks & Café ★★ (Finds) STEAKHOUSE Harry's is a crowd pleaser. It's a steakhouse, with all the accoutrements of your traditional red meat joint; dry-aged beef with hearty sides; it's a café, with a bountiful original menu, but equally dense selection, and it's a lively, Wall Street-area bar with a well-stocked spirits and wine selection. But it really doesn't matter where you eat, the kitchen is the same and you can order from either menu. When I visited, I choose to mix and match from both menus. I started with a superb Greek salad topped with white anchovies from the Café menu followed by the grilled triple-cut pork chops served on a delicious bed of sauerkraut, accompanied by a Mason jar of fresh apple sauce with a chili pepper embedded in it. The dry-aged rib steak is as good as you'll find anywhere west of Peter Luger's, but it was the crackling pork shank, from the Café menu, a gargantuan shank on the bone, its skin fried to a crackling that stole the show. Just looking at it could send one's cholesterol soaring, but it's worth it.

Landmarc ★★ (Finds) MEDITERRANEAN This cozy, intimate TriBeCa restaurant is too good to be considered just a neighborhood joint. Chef/owner Marc Murphy has put his own distinctive spin on this Italian/French rendition of a bistro. You'll find excellent smoked mozzarella and ricotta fritters alongside escargots bordelaise. It will be up to you to decide whether you imagine yourself in a Tuscan trattoria or a Provençal bistro. Or you can mix and match cuisines. Try the pasta of the day accompanied by mussels with a choice of sauce—Provençal, Dijonnaise, or the comforting blend of shallots, parsley, and white wine. Steaks and chops are cooked over an open fire and the steaks are offered with a variety of sauces; I had the hangar with a shallot bordelaise that complemented the meat perfectly. What keeps the neighbors pouring in, along with the excellent food, are the remarkably affordable wines sold, not by the glass, but by the bottle or half bottle. Desserts are simple, small, and priced that way, with none more than $3.

Bubby's Pie Company ★ AMERICAN You might have to wait in line to eat at Bubby's. You might get squeezed in at a table perilously close to another couple. And you might have to talk quite loudly to maintain a conversation with your dining companion. But your level of discomfort will subside as soon as you begin to eat Bubby's comfort food. Whether it is the slow-cooked pulled barbecue pork, the lighter-than-air meatloaf, or the buttermilk-fried half chicken, with sides such as collard greens, sautéed spinach, mac 'n' cheese, or baked beans, Bubby's dishes define comfort. Take Bubby's advice and save room for dessert, especially the homemade pies; one taste of the chocolate peanut-butter pie brought on happy childhood flashbacks. Breakfast is big here and lasts well into the middle of the day. On weekends, though, here in trendy TriBeCa, the wait for brunch can be lengthy. Bubby's also has a branch across the river in the DUMBO neighborhood of Brooklyn.

The Odeon ★ AMERICAN BRASSERIE For over 2 decades The Odeon has been a symbol of the TriBeCa sensibility; in fact, the restaurant can claim credit for the neighborhood's cachet—it was the first to lure artists, actors, writers, and models to the area below Canal Street before it was given its moniker. Why did they come? They came to drink, schmooze, and enjoy the hearty no-frills brasserie grub such as the country frisée salad with bacon, Roquefort cheese, and pear vinaigrette; truffled poached egg; grilled skirt steak; moules frites (mussels with fries); and sautéed cod. Though the restaurant is not quite the celebrity magnet it was in its heyday in the '80s, the food, drink, and that inviting, open, Deco-ish room has withstood the test of time and has surpassed trendy to claim well-deserved New York establishment status.

Big Wong King ★ CANTONESE For over 30 years, Big Wong has been an institution for workers from the nearby courthouses and Chinese families who come to feast on congee (rice porridge) and fried crullers for breakfast. They also come for the superb roasted meats, the pork and duck seen hanging in the window, the comforting noodle soups, and the terrific barbecued ribs. This is simple, down-home Cantonese food—lo mein, chow fun, bok choy in oyster sauce—cooked lovingly, and so cheap. If you don't mind sharing a table, Big Wong is a must at any time of day.

New York Noodletown ★★ CHINESE/SEAFOOD So what if the restaurant has the ambience of a school cafeteria? I'm wary of an overadorned dining room in Chinatown; the simpler the better. And New York Noodletown is simple, but the food is the real thing. Seafood-based noodle soups are spectacular, as is the platter of chopped roast pork. Those two items alone would make me happy. But I'm greedy and wouldn't leave the restaurant without one of its shrimp dishes, especially the salt-baked shrimp. If your hotel has a good-size refrigerator, take the leftovers home—they'll make a great snack the next day. New York Noodletown keeps long hours, which makes it one of the best late-night bets in the neighborhood, too.

Pho Viet Huong ★ (Value) VIETNAMESE Chinatown has its own enclave of Vietnamese restaurants, and the best is Pho Viet Huong. The menu is vast and needs intense perusing, but your waiter will help you pare it down. The Vietnamese know soup, and pho, a beef-based soup served with many ingredients, is the most famous, but the hot-and-sour canh soup, with either shrimp or fish, is the real deal. The small version is more than enough for two to share while the large is more than enough for a family. The odd pairing of barbecued beef wrapped in grape leaves is another of the restaurant's

Tips A Chinatown Sweet Treat

When in Chinatown, after a dim sum banquet or a noodle joint, skip the feeble dessert offerings and head to one of my favorite ice cream shops in the city, the Chinatown Ice Cream Factory ★, 65 Bayard St., between Mott and Elizabeth streets (☎ 212/608-4170). specialties and should not be missed, while the bun, various meats and vegetables served over rice vermicelli, are simple, hearty, and inexpensive. You'll even find Vietnamese sandwiches here: French bread filled with ham, chicken, eggs, lamb, and even pâté. All of the above is best washed down with an icy cold Saigon beer.

'inoteca ★★ (Finds) ITALIAN SMALL PLATES The Lower East Side was once the home to many Kosher wine factories, but you'll find only Italian wines at cozy 'inoteca. The list is over 250 bottles long, but even better are the exquisitely prepared small plates that complement the wines. Though the Italian-language menu is a challenge, servers are helpful. The panini stand out in their freshness and their delicacy, with the coppa (a spicy cured ham) with hot peppers and rucola (arugula) being the standout. The tramezzini, a crustless sandwich, is nothing like the crustless sandwiches served at high tea. Here, among other things, you can have yours stuffed with tuna and chick peas or with pollo alla diavola, spicy shredded pieces of dark-meat chicken. The "Fritto" section includes a wonderful mozzarella in corroza, breaded mozzarella stuffed with a juicy anchovy sauce and lightly fried. Whatever you order, don't rush; 'inoteca is a place to go slow, to savor both wine and food.

Katz's Delicatessen ★★ (Value) JEWISH DELI This is arguably the city's best Jewish deli. The motto is "There's Nothing More New York Than Katz's," and it's spot-on. Founded in 1888, this cavernous, brightly lit place is suitably Noo Yawk, with dill pickles, Dr. Brown's cream soda, and old-world attitude to spare. But one word of caution: Katz's has become a serious tourist destination so if you see a tour bus parked in front, you might be in for a long wait. (And remember to tip your carver, who gives you a plate with a sample of pastrami or corned beef as he prepares your sandwich!)

Dani ★ ITALIAN You would think in a city with countless residents of Sicilian ancestry that there would be more authentic Sicilian restaurants. Sadly, that is not the case in Manhattan, but the good news is that Dani is one of the few and does an exemplary job with that special cuisine. Located in SoHo, the dining room is open, high-ceilinged and airy. But that open space tends to project sound and when the not-so-appropriate rock soundtrack is blaring, conversation can be difficult. You don't need to talk, however, to enjoy what you are eating and chef Don "Dani" Pintabona will see that you do starting with the Sicilian fish sampler: fluke, citrus sardine, and pickled Spanish mackerel that will make you long for a long weekend in Palermo. Of the pastas, it's hard to resist that Sicilian specialty, chitarra con sarde, homemade pasta with sardines, fennel, and currants, but if you do, the second best option would be the bucatini con moscardino, bucatini with baby octopus, chilies, and cherry tomatoes. Of the “secondi,” the grilled swordfish with capers, pine nuts, and raisins is about as good a representation of Sicilian cuisine as you will find. Of the desserts, the grapefruit and campari granita makes the most fitting finish.

Cendrillon ★★ (Finds) FILIPINO/ASIAN Cendrillon features authentic yet innovative Filipino food in a comfortable setting with exposed brick, a skylight in the main dining room, and cozy booths up front. How authentic? Try a shot of lambagong, also known as “coconut grappa.” It’s a potent drink distilled from the coconut flower sap and blended with sugar-cane sap, and as far as I know, Cendrillon is the only restaurant in New York to serve this Filipino specialty. The drink will ignite your appetite for the flavors to follow, like the squash soup with crab dumplings or the fresh lumpia with tamarind and peanut sauce (Asian vegetables wrapped in a purple-yam-and-rice wrapper). Cendrillon’s chicken adobo (chicken braised in a marinade of vinegar, soy, chiles, and garlic) renders the bird tender and tasty as you could imagine, while Romy’s (the chef/owner) spareribs, marinated in rice wine and garlic, rubbed with spices, and cooked in a Chinese smokehouse, are as good as any ribs I’ve had cooked in a Texas smokehouse. You’ll be tempted by just about everything, but save room for the exotic desserts like the Buko pie, made with coconut and topped with vanilla-bean ice cream, or the halo halo, a parfait stuffed with ice creams and sorbets with flavors like avocado, jackfruit, and purple yam.

45 Mercer St. (btwn Broome and Grand sts.). ☎ 212/343-9012. www.cendrillon.com. Main courses $15–$24. AE, DISC, MC, V. Sun 11am–10pm; Tues–Sat 11am–10:30pm. Subway: N/R to Prince St.; 6 to Spring St.; 1/9 to Canal St.; A, C, E to Canal St.

Lupa ★★ (Value) ROMAN ITALIAN Since it opened in late 1999, this Roman-style osteria has remained a hot ticket. For one, it’s blessed with an impeccable pedigree: One of its owners is Mario Batali, the Food Network “Iron Chef” who has built a mini-empire in the Manhattan restaurant world. Second, it offers high-quality food at good value—you can eat well here and not have to max out your credit card. And finally, the food is consistently tasty—but don't expect big portions. That's part of the secret to the good value, but don't worry—you won't starve. The menu is thoughtful and creative, focusing on lusty Roman fare like ricotta gnocchi with sausage and fennel, or pork saltimbocca. Wines, too, have been thoughtfully chosen, and you can order a bottle from the extensive list or sample one of several varieties that come in a carafe. Here, perhaps more than at any other Batali enterprise, the service hits the right notes: Servers are warm and supremely knowledgeable. Make a reservation, or go early to snag one of the tables set aside for walk-ins.

170 Thompson St. (btwn Houston and Bleecker sts.). ☎ 212/982-5089. www.lupa-restaurant.com. Reservations recommended. Primi $9–$16; secondi $16–$20. AE, MC, V. Daily noon–midnight. Subway: B, D, F, Q, A, C, E to W. 4th St.

Pao! ★ PORTUGUESE New York has multiple restaurants of almost every ethnicity, yet there is a surprising scarcity of Portuguese eateries. Of the few, this cozy, comfortable charmer is the best. Pao!, which translates to “bread,” keeps it simple, and the results are pure and authentic. Start with caldo verde, traditional Portuguese soup, made with kale, potatoes, and wonderfully smoky linguica (Portuguese sausage). The baked-octopus salad, tender and soaked in a garlic/cilantro vinaigrette, rivals any I've had in numerous Greek restaurants, while the cod cakes, another Portuguese standard, are light and not too salty. The combination of pork and seafood might seem odd, but it's common in Portugal; Pao!'s pairing of pork and clams is an acquired taste—one I've happily acquired. Salt cod is to Portugal what hamburgers are to the United States, and I'll take Pao!'s hearty bacalhau a braz—salt cod with egg, onion, and straw potatoes—over hamburger most any day. To complement the food, stick with a delicious Portuguese wine, from which there are many to choose. Desserts are egg-based and delicate; the soft pound cake with lemon egg custard filling is heavenly.

Bread ★ ITALIAN The bread at Bread comes from Balthazar Bakery down the street, but it's what they do with it that makes this eatery so special. For example, they take a rustic ciabatta loaf, slather it with Sicilian sardines, Thai mayonnaise, tomato, and lettuce, and then turn it over to their panini press. The result is a gooey convergence of flavors that you will attempt to gobble down gracefully. It will fall apart, but that's okay; someone will be along shortly with more napkins. Besides the spectacular sardine sandwich, the Italian tuna with mesclun greens and tomatoes in a lemon dressing, and the fontina with grilled zucchini, eggplant, arugula, and tomato in a balsamic vinaigrette are also standouts. Really, there are no losers on the bread side of Bread's menu, which also includes salads, pastas, and "plates." The 32-seat restaurant is in chic Nolita, and if you are lucky, you might even be treated by the sight of a breathtakingly thin model doing her best to keep the contents of one of Bread's sandwiches from staining her designer duds.

Le Miu ★★ (Finds) JAPANESE What happens when four celebrated Japanese chefs from notable restaurants (Nobu 57 and Megu to name two) open their own joint? In some cases, the result could be chaos, but in the case of Le Miu, good things happened. The restaurant, a slim, austere space tucked away on a bustling East Village block, is a refuge for those seeking fresh, delicately prepared sushi standards along with some interesting innovations. The Le Miu tartar: tuna, yellowtail, and salmon topped with caviar is a welcoming beginning, followed by sardine with ginger ceviche. The Saikyo miso marinated black cod in a phyllo jacket and the king crab leg with a curry milk sauce are revelations that I will now have to happily schlep down to the East Village to continue to experience, especially since the prices, for sushi this good, are hard to beat. Le Miu also has an impressive hot- and cold-sake list.

Brick Lane Curry House ★ (Finds) INDIAN The vibrancy of the traditional Indian restaurants, seemingly interconnected on the block of East 6th Street known as "Little India," has diminished, but this relatively new addition has added some welcome vigor. The food is so good at Brick Lane that they don't even need the requisite sitar players to draw in customers. But beware: They don't compromise on their spice. In fact, they might just have the hottest dish in the city. It's a curry called phaal that requires a verbal disclaimer by the customer to not hold the restaurant liable for any physical or emotional damage incurred from eating it. If you are able to finish it, the restaurant promises a bottle of beer on the house. But there is no need to blister your intestines: The other, less hazardous, curries will bring on a good enough sweat, including the excellent Madras and the tangy Goan. Brick Lane's boti rolls (chicken tikka served in fresh-baked bread) are special while the rassam soup of the day, a thin, clear soup that changes daily, will help clear your sinuses even before you touch a curry. There are also a number of vegan items.

A.O.C. Bedford ★★ (Finds) MEDITERRANEAN You'll find this brick-walled, cozy, romantic charmer tucked away on equally cozy and romantic Bedford Street in the West Village. Here the A.O.C. in the restaurant name stands for appellation d'origine controlee—the French designation for high-quality food products. But on the menu you'll not only find A.O.C. products from France, but D.O.C., the Italian designation, and D.O., the Spanish. You really won't need all those designations to know that what you are eating is of high quality—just a few bites will suffice. The paella marinara, a constant on the menu, is prepared for two, stuffed with jumbo shrimp (heads on for more flavor), squid, scallops, mussels, and clams and cooked in Spanish Calasparra rice. Another standout is the duck, a crispy breast prepared best medium rare, and served with a Bosc pear. Finish with a selection of cheeses, A.O.C.-, D.O.C.-, and D.O.-quality only, of course. The restaurant has an impressive wine list and bottles are, as they should be, decanted at your table.

Mas ★★ (Finds) FRENCH I've never had the pleasure of dining in a French country farmhouse, but if the experience at Mas is anything like it, I now know what I've been missing. This "farmhouse" is in the West Village, and though there are nods to the rustic in the decor with wood beams and a bar of sandstone with stools made from tree trunks, there is also an atmosphere of sophistication. A glass-enclosed wine cellar is visible from the small dining room, the restaurant stays open late, and you'll find hipsters in jeans and T-shirts as well as folks in power suits eating here. And it's that combination, along with the creative menu, that makes Mas so special. The dishes are innovative and the ingredients are fresh, many of them supplied by upstate New York farms. The tender, perfectly prepared braised pork belly, from Flying Pig Farm, is served with polenta and a stew of escargot and lima beans; and the duck breast, from Stone Church Farm, melds magically with apple puree, sautéed Brussels sprouts. Service is low-key but attentive, and the seating, though somewhat cramped, is not enough to dim the romantic aura.

Strip House ★★ STEAK With a photo gallery of seminude burlesque performers decorating the red velvet walls, roomy burgundy banquettes, and a steady flow of lounge music, you may, as I once did, mistakenly refer to the Strip House as the Strip Club. But despite the faux-Playboy look, the only decadence here is in the titanic portions of perfectly charred and seasoned red meat, specifically, the strip steak. I had the strip on the bone that I still remember with fondness. The filet mignon is simply and impeccably prepared and the porterhouse for two, carved at your table, is in the Peter Luger league. The sides are variations on the standards: creamed spinach with black truffles, french fries with herbs and garlic, and, best of all, the crisp goose-fat potatoes. Is goose fat a good fat or a bad fat? Only your dietician knows for sure. Desserts are monumental, especially the multilayered chocolate cake, so have your waiter bring extra forks. With the exception of those banquettes, seating is tight, so don't expect intimacy.

Maremma ★★ (Finds) ITALIAN/WESTERN Named after the rocky, rough coastal region of Tuscany where cowboys roam the land, Maremma is New York's first and only spaghetti Western restaurant. Here you'll find small plates on the menu like Casella's spin on the traditional sloppy Joe he calls "sloppy Giuseppe," made with tender pieces of shredded beef over thick-crusted Tuscan bread, or the bordatino di mare, sticks of fried seafood with a crispy polenta crust served with spicy "Tuscan ketchup." The addition of chocolate to the wild-boar ragout that covers the fresh pappardelle is Casella's nod to the West, while a touch of bourbon Westernizes the tomato-and-grana-padano sauce served over artisanal pasta. The Tuscan fries, traditional fries but with herbs and garlic sprinkled on them, are an addictive revelation. Not only is Maremma the only Italian/Western restaurant in New York, it is also probably the only restaurant in New York that serves Rocky Mountain oysters (also known as bull's testicles). Buddakan ★ ASIAN My expectations of Buddakan were of a loud, dance club scene in a large, 16,000-square-foot bi-level space where the food would be showy, but flavorless. I was right about the loud, dance club scene, but I was wrong about the food. The "Brasserie" is the main dining room on the lower level and the steps can seem steep after a few cocktails in the upstairs lounge like the signature Heat, a combination of tequila, Cointreau, and chilled cucumbers (though the stairs were not steep enough to deter a man from being carried down in his wheelchair the night I dined there). To fortify yourself after those cocktails, don't hesitate to order some of Buddakan's superb appetizers like the edamame dumplings, the crab and corn fritters, and most notably, the crispy calamari salad. In fact, you can make your meal out of sharing appetizer—the extensive menu at Buddakan works best for large parties and has the now-obligatory “communal” table. But if you order one entrée, make sure it’s the sizzling short rib; tender and removed from the bone and sitting on top of a bed of mushroom chow fun.

Cookshop ★★ AMERICAN On far-west Tenth Avenue, with a prime view of a garage across the street, Cookshop is brawny and boisterous with food to match. Seating can be tight and you would hear your neighbor’s conversation if it weren’t so loud in the restaurant. But never mind, enjoy the chef’s creations. A pizza with shaved king oyster mushrooms and stracchino cheese or the grilled Montauk squid in a salsa verde make good starters to complement the restaurant’s innovative cocktails. Or combine a few of the snacks such as the fried spiced hominy or the smoked pork tacos as starters for the table. Cookshop offers entrée options in four categories: sauté, grill, wood oven, and rotisserie. The whole roasted porgy, head and all, cooked in the wood oven is moist and full of flavor, while the chile-braised beef short ribs served over cheddar grits from the sauté section are tender to the bone. Service is efficient and helpful.

La Nacional ★★ (Finds) SPANISH/TAPAS It’s not easy finding the oldest Spanish restaurant in New York; in fact, the search for this unmarked restaurant on West 14th Street might get you a bit frustrated. Once you find it, though, you will be rewarded. Founded in 1868 as a gathering spot for the Benevolent Spanish Society, La Nacional, a social club, is a hidden treat. At one time food was secondary to the company of Spanish expats who congregated here, filling the room with smoke and loud talk of Spanish politics and football. It was here where Gabriel Garcia Lorca spent countless hours documenting his New York City experience. The cigarette smoke has been replaced by the smoke of the grill, which turns out tasty tapas like sardines, octopus, and shrimp. There is a somewhat formal dining room in the front, while in the back, next to the open kitchen, there are a few tables and TVs usually tuned to soccer matches. Come and share a bottle of Spanish wine and make a meal out of the tapas—the albondigas (Spanish meatballs), boquerones

RUB ★★ BARBECUE RUB is short for Righteous Urban Barbecue—a contradiction in terms if there ever was one. Co-owned by Kansas City pit master Paul Kirk, who has won seven World Barbecue Championships and is a member of the Barbecue Hall of Fame, the arrival of RUB in New York was eagerly anticipated by those barbecue fanatics who are aware there is a Barbecue Hall of Fame. Could chef Kirk replicate his cuisine in New York where pollutant-inducing smokers are illegal? The answer is no. You will never get that true smoked taste without creating some serious smoke, but that doesn't mean what you get at RUB is bad. On the contrary, the smoked turkey and barbecued chicken are the best I've had; moist inside with a distinctive smoked flavor, and the ribs, St. Louis–style, were delicate and crispy, yet tender and meaty. The “burnt ends,” the fatty part of the brisket, however, were a bit tough. The restaurant is cramped and loud and the prices urban (meaning high) but the food at RUB will provide all the comfort you need.

A Voce ★★ MODERN ITALIAN The kind of food that is served at A Voce; rustic Italian for the most part with exceptional nods to innovation, seems somewhat out of place in the loud, post-modern dining room in a sleek highrise just off Madison Park. At A Voce you can start with something peasant-pleasing like Sardinian sheep's milk ricotta and slather it on thick, crusty grilled bread or you can sample the hip, wild branzini tartara (Mediterranean sea bass)—something no peasant would ever eat. The same can be said for the “secondi.” Chef Carmellini offers “My Grandmother's meat ravioli” and though my grandmother never made meat ravioli—Carmellini's nonna's meat ravioli is so good it certainly was not from

The Hole Truth: N.Y.'s Best Bagels

Not many things are more New York than a bagel, and New Yorkers are loyal to their favorite bagel purveyors. In fact, discussions about who makes the best bagel can lead to heated arguments. Following are the top contenders:

Absolute Bagels, 2708 Broadway, between 107th and 108th streets (☎ 212/932-2052). A new player on the bagel scene, their egg bagels, hot out of the oven, melt in your mouth, and their whitefish salad is perfectly smoky, though not overpowering.

Ess-A-Bagel, 359 First Ave., at 21st Street (☎ 212/260-2252; www.ess-a-bagel.com). When it comes to size, Ess-a-Bagel's are the best of the biggest; plump, chewy, and oh-so-satisfying. Also at 831 Third Ave., between 50th and 51st streets (☎ 212/980-1010).

H&H Bagels, 2239 Broadway, at 80th Street (☎ 212/595-8003; www.handhbagel.com). H&H makes what has long been reputed as the best bagel in New York—which may have resulted in the price hike to $1 a bagel. Some complain they are a bit too sweet, but I disagree. The bagels are always fresh and warm, the bagel aficionado's prerequisite. Also at 639 W. 46th St., at Twelfth Avenue (☎ 212/595-8000). Takeout only.

Kossar's Bialys, 367 Grand St., at Essex Street (☎ 877/4-BIALYS; www.kossarsbialys.com). We know about their bialys, but don't forget about the bagels. Also hand-rolled, the result is a slightly crunchy exterior with a tender, moist middle. You came for the bialys, but you'll leave with both.

Murray's Bagels, 500 Sixth Ave., between 12th and 13th streets (☎ 212/462-2830), and 242 Eighth Ave., at 23rd Street (☎ 646/638-1334). There's nothing like a soft, warm bagel to begin your day, and Murray's does them beautifully. Their smoked fish goes perfectly on their bagels.

a can, or, continuing on that rustic theme, the “country-style Tuscan tripe,” with barlotti beans, tomato, fried duck egg, and grilled ciabatta bread, which (minus the duck egg) would have made my normally dour Calabrese grandfather happy. A Voce offers daily specials called “del mercato” which usually features the chef's more unique creations like, on the day I visited a “rabbit terrina” with salt-cured foie gras. You won’t go wrong whether you try the rustic or the modern. The chef’s palate-cleansing citrus tiramisu is the perfect conclusion.

City Bakery ★ (Kids) ORGANIC AMERICAN City Bakery offers comfort food that manages to be delicious, nutritious, and eco-friendly. Its salad bar is unlike any other in the city, where the integrity of the ingredients is as important as the taste. This is health food, all right—roasted beets with walnuts, glistening sautéed greens, lavender eggplant tossed in miso—but with heart and soul, offering such classic favorites as French toast with artisanal bacon, flavorful mac ’n’ cheese, fried chicken, tortilla pie, even smoked salmon with all the trimmings on Sunday. The “bakery” in the name refers to the plethora of sinful desserts; kids love the spinning wheel of chocolate and the homemade marshmallows. One caveat: It’s a bit pricey for a salad bar, but oh, what good eats.

Barbetta ★★ ITALIAN One of New York’s oldest restaurants (est. 1906) and one of the few to serve cuisine from Piemonte (the Piedmont), Italy’s northwesternmost region, Barbetta’s food, like its decor, is richly elegant. At Barbetta, if you dine in the autumn or winter, you might have the pleasure of white truffles, flown in from Piemonte, and shaved over your already decadent gnochetti ai formaggi, freshly made gnocchi in an unforgettable cheese sauce, or the stunning creation of an edible quail's nest filled with fonduta cheese surrounded by three tiny, speckled quail's eggs. On the menu you can choose from one of the restaurant's 1906 creations like the bolliti misti, a Piemontesi specialty, a mix of boiled meats and broth served from an antique silver cart, but for a meal this unique, you must order 48 hours in advance. Barbetta also features an impressive Italian wine list and, in the warmer months, one of the city's most romantic outdoor gardens. While this is a Theater District restaurant and many come for the pre-theater prix-fixe, Barbetta is best experienced at a relaxed, leisurely pace.

Frankie & Johnnie's ★★ STEAKHOUSE When restaurants open other branches, red flags go up. Does that mean they have become a chain and their quality has eroded to chain-food status? In the case of Frankie & Johnnie's, the legendary Theater District former-speakeasy-turned-steakhouse, which opened another outlet in 2005 in the two-story townhouse once owned by John Barrymore, those fears were allayed after one bite of their signature sirloin. It also helps that the dining room on the second floor of the townhouse is gorgeous, especially the Barrymore room, the actor's former study with stained-glass ceiling panels, dark wood walls, and a working fireplace. Not only are Frankie & Johnnie's steaks underrated in the competitive world of New York steakhouses, but the other options are superb as well. The crabcake appetizer had an overwhelmingly high crab-to-cake ratio—and that's a good thing in my book—while the side of hash browns was the best I've had. Service is old-school, and if you are staying in Midtown, the restaurant provides complimentary limo service to and from the restaurant.

Keens Steakhouse ★★ STEAKHOUSE Up until the latter part of the 20th century, Keens, which was established in the same location in 1885, referred to itself as a “chop house.” They are now known as a steakhouse, but I wish they had remained true to their roots and hadn't made that change. To their credit, they are a steakhouse in name only. They not only serve the basics of a steakhouse—the porterhouse for two, aged, T-Bone, and filet mignon with the requisite sides such as creamed spinach and hash browns—but they serve chops: lamb chops, prime rib, short ribs, and most notably, mutton chops. It is the mutton chop that has made Keens the original that it is. The monstrous cut has two flaps of long, thick, rich, subtly gamy meat on either side of the bone that look kind of like muttonchop sideburns. Keens is no gussied-up remake: It's the real thing, from the thousands of ceramic pipes on the ceiling (regular diners were given their own personal pipes, including celebrities like Babe Ruth, George M. Cohan, and Albert Einstein) to the series of rooms on two floors with wood paneling, leather banquettes, fireplaces (in some), a bar with a three-page menu of single malts, and even the framed playbill Lincoln was reading at the Ford Theater that infamous evening in 1865.

Molyvos ★★ GREEK When Molyvos opened in 1997 it was heralded as a trailblazer of upscale, innovative Greek cuisine. Now, a decade later, upscale and innovative Greek is the current “in vogue” cuisine in Manhattan. Molyvos's longterm success is based on its ability to please those who want simple, unpretentious traditional Greek food as well as exciting, original Greek-accented creations. For those who like their Greek unadulterated, you won't go wrong with cold mezedes, such as the spreads tzatziki, melitzanos-alata, and taramosalata, and hot mezedes like spinach pie or grilled octopus. For Greek food with an edge there's ouzo-cured salmon on a chickpea fritter or the terrific seafood Cretan bread salad. Just a sampling of the mezedes should be enough for anyone's hearty appetite but with entrees as good as grilled garides, wild head-on prawns barbecued “souvlaki-style” and the chios pork and gigante bean stew, not ordering one would be a mistake. The knowledgeable sommelier will pair your choices with a comparable Greek wine, of which there are many. Or, skip the wine and sample one or two of the dozens of ouzos available, but don't skip the desserts. Sure you've had baklava before, but have you ever had chocolate baklava? Yes, it's as good as it sounds.

Becco ★ (Finds ITALIAN If you're a fan of Lidia's Italian-American Kitchen on PBS, you'll be happy to know you can sample Lidia Bastianich's simple, hearty Italian cooking here. Becco, on Restaurant Row, is designed to serve her meals "at a different price point" (read: cheaper) than her East Side restaurant, Felidia. The prices are not rock-bottom, but in terms of service, portions, and quality, you get tremendous bang for your buck at Becco (which means to "peck, nibble, or savor something in a discriminating way"). The main courses can head north of the $20 mark, but take a look at the prix-fixe menu ($17 at lunch, $22 at dinner), which includes either a Caesar salad or antipasto plate, followed by a "Symphony of Pasta," unlimited servings of three fresh-made daily pastas. There's also an excellent selection of Italian wines at $20 a bottle. If you can't make up your mind about dessert, have them all: A tasting plate includes gelato, cheesecake, and whatever else the chef has whipped up that day. Lidia herself does turn up at Becco and Felidia regularly; you can even dine with her. (See website for details).

Norma's ★★ (Finds CREATIVE AMERICAN BREAKFAST Nowhere is breakfast treated with such reverence, and decadence, as at Norma's, a soaring, ultramodern ode to the ultimate comfort food. There's something for everyone on the huge menu. Classics come in styles both simple and haute: Blueberry pancakes come piled high with fresh Maine berries and Devonshire cream, while buttermilks are topped with fresh Georgia peaches and chopped walnuts. Even oatmeal is special: genuine Irish McCann's, dressed with sautéed green apples and red pears and brûléed for a flash of

Pizza, New York Style

Once the domain of countless first-rate pizzerias, Manhattan's pizza offerings have noticeably dropped in quality. The proliferation of national chains into the market has lowered standards. Still, there is plenty of good pizza to be found. Don't be tempted by imitations; when it comes to pizza, search out the real deal. Here are some of the best:

DiFara Pizza ⚡, 1424 Avenue J, Brooklyn, at E. 15th St. (☎ 718/258-1367). DiFara's is ballyhooed in all the local publications as the best pizza in the city. And though the exterior is nondescript, looking like your basic neighborhood pizzeria and the interior is cramped, and to be kind, somewhat unkempt with bits of congealed cheese, olive oil, sauce, and crust from a generation of diners still on the tables, DiFara's lives up to its reputation thanks to the stubborn zeal of owner Dominic DeMarco, who, for over 40 years, has made every pizza himself. Stooped but determined, DeMarco, in his own deliberate way and using top ingredients, crafts each pizza finishing with hand grated parmesan cheese, a few dollops of extra-virgin olive oil, and then, using scissors, hand cutting fresh basil onto the pie. The result is a work of art, but one that might test your patience. Expect to wait an hour for a pie, maybe a bit less for a slice. But after one taste, you will know it was worth it.

Grimaldi's Pizzeria, 19 Old Fulton St., between Front and Water streets (☎ 718/858-4300; www.grimaldis.com). If you need incentive to walk across the Brooklyn Bridge, Grimaldi's, in Brooklyn Heights, provides it. In fact, the pizza is so good, made in a coal oven with a rich sauce and home-made mozzarella, you might run across the bridge to get to it. Be warned: It can get very crowded at dinnertime.

John's Pizzeria, 278 Bleecker St., near Seventh Avenue South (☎ 212/243-1680). Since it has expanded from this original location—there are now three in the city—the once-gleaming luster of John's has faded slightly, but the pizza is still a cut above the rest. Thin-crust and out of a coal oven with the proper ratio of tomato sauce to cheese, John's pizza has a loyal following. Though the quality at all of the locations is good, the original Bleecker Street location is the most old-world romantic and my favorite. Also at 260 W. 44th St., between Broadway and Eighth Avenue (☎ 212/391-7560), and 408 E. 64th St., between York and First avenues (☎ 212/935-2895).

Lombardi's, 32 Spring St., between Mulberry and Mott streets (☎ 212/941-7994; www.lombardispizza.com). Claiming to be New York's first "licensed" pizzeria, Lombardi's opened in 1905 and still uses a generations-old Neapolitan family pizza recipe. The coal oven kicks out perfectly cooked pies, some topped with ingredients such as pancetta, home-made sausage, and even fresh-shucked clams. A garden in the back makes it even more inviting during warm weather.

Patsy's Pizzeria ★★, 2287 First Ave., between 117th and 118th streets (☎ 212/534-9783). My favorite, and also the favorite of Frank Sinatra, who liked it so much he had pies flown out to Las Vegas. The coal oven has been burning since 1932, and though its neighborhood in east Harlem has had its ups and downs, the quality of pizza has never wavered. Try the marinara pizza, a pie with fresh marinara sauce—but no cheese—that's so good you won't miss the mozzarella. Unlike the other pizzerias mentioned, you can order by the slice at Patsy's. Don't be fooled by imitators using Patsy's name; this is the original and the best.

Totonno's Pizzeria Napolitano, 1524 Neptune Ave., between West 15th and West 16th streets, Coney Island, Brooklyn (☎ 718/372-8606). This unassuming pizzeria has been at the same spot since 1924 and it makes pizzas almost exactly as it did 80 years ago—thin crust, fresh sauce, and mozzarella, and that's about it. Don't even think about asking for an exotic topping on these pies (and why would you?). Enjoy it in its simple unadorned glory. Totonno's second branch is on the Upper East Side, 1544 Second Ave., between 80th and 81st streets (☎ 212/327-2800). Go ahead and order the exotic toppings there, but for the real deal, go to Coney Island.

sugary sweetness. Don't pass on the applewood-smoked bacon, so good it's worth blowing any diet for. Norma's can even win over breakfast foes with creative sandwiches, a generous Cobb with seared ahi, and a terrific chicken potpie. It's not cheap for breakfast, but definitely worth the splurge.

At Le Parker Meridien Hotel, 118 W. 57th St. (btwn Sixth and Seventh aves.). ☎ 212/708-7460. www.normasnyc.com. Reservations accepted. Main courses $8–$23 (most $13–$18). AE, DC, DISC, MC, V. Mon–Fri 6:30am–3pm; Sat–Sun 7am–3pm. Subway: B, N, Q, R, W to 57th St.

Virgil's Real BBQ ★★ (Kids) BARBECUE/SOUTHERN In the heart of the theme-restaurant wasteland known as Times Square is a theme restaurant that actually has good food. The “theme” is Southern barbecue and the restaurant, sprawling over two levels, is made to look and feel like a Southern roadhouse with good-ol'-boy decorations on the walls and blues on the soundtrack. Virgil's does an admirable job in re-creating that authentic flavor so hard to find north of the Mason-Dixon Line. The spice-rubbed ribs are slow-cooked and meaty, but it's the Owensboro lamb (smoked slices of lamb) and the Texas beef brisket that are the standouts. Both are melt-in-your-mouth tender; the lamb is sprinkled with a flavorful mustard sauce, while the brisket is perfect with a few dabs of Virgil's homemade spicy barbecue sauce. For starters, the corn dogs with poblano mustard are something New Yorkers rarely have the pleasure of experiencing, while the BBQ nachos—tortilla chips slathered with melted cheese and barbecued pulled pork—are a meal in themselves. Desserts are what you would expect from a restaurant emulating a Southern theme: big and sweet. Try the homemade ice-cream sandwich made with the cookie of the day. Virgil's is a great place to bring the kids; if they're noisy, no one will notice.

152 W. 44th St. (btwn Sixth and Seventh aves.). ☎ 212/921-9494. www.virgilsbbq.com. Reservations recommended. If you're looking for the quintessential New York deli, you have a choice between the Stage Deli, 834 Seventh Ave., between 53rd and 54th streets (☎ 212/245-7850), known for its huge celebrity-named sandwiches, and the Carnegie Deli, 854 Seventh Ave., at 55th Street (☎ 800/334-5606), the place to go for the best pastrami, corned beef, and cheesecake in town. For more, see the sidebar “The New York Deli News,” on p. 104.

There is an outlet of John's Pizzeria in Times Square, 260 W. 44th St., between Broadway and Eighth Avenue (☎ 212/391-7560; subway: 1, 2, 3, 7, A, B, C, E, N, R, W, Q, S to 42nd Street/Times Square; see the box "Pizza, New York-Style," on p. 100). Also consider the Burger Joint ★★, in the lobby of Le Parker Meridien Hotel, 118 W. 57th St. (☎ 212/708-7460), for cheap yet excellent burgers (see the box "Where to Find Your (Burger) Bliss," on p. 106).

Sapporo ★ (Value) JAPANESE NOODLES Peruse the community bulletin board as you enter Sapporo and you might find yourself a deal on an apartment—if you can read Japanese. Thankfully, the menu is in English in this Theater District Japanese noodle shop. If the mostly Japanese clientele doesn't convince you of Sapporo's authenticity, the din of satisfied diners slurping huge bowls of steaming ramen (noodle soup with meat and vegetables) will. And though the ramen is Sapporo's specialty, the gyoza (Japanese dumplings) and the donburi (pork or chicken over rice with soy-flavored sauce) are also terrific. Best of all, nothing on the menu is over $10 and that's not easy to find in the Theater District.

152 W. 49th St. (btwn Sixth & Seventh aves.). ☎ 212/869-8972. Reservations not accepted. Main courses $6–$9. No credit cards. Mon–Sat 11am–11pm; Sun 11am–10pm. Subway: N, R to 49th St.

Uncle Nick's GREEK For stupendous portions of surprisingly good traditional Greek food at ridiculous prices, come to Uncle Nick's. Turn off your cellphone upon entering, not because you might disturb your neighbors, but because there is no way you will be able to have a phone conversation in this loud restaurant. But how can you talk if your mouth is filled with one or more of Nick's Greek dips like taramosalata or tzatziki, or his perfectly tender, grilled baby octopus? If you haven't filled up on his appetizers, order one of Nick's grilled specialties: The grilled lamb kabob is a winner and guaranteed for leftovers, while the gyro plate is a challenge for those with even the heartiest appetites. Seafood is also good, especially the swordfish kabobs. Desserts are standard; you won't have room for them anyway. Service is friendly to match the rollicking atmosphere here. Next door is the slightly more intimate Uncle Nick's Ouzeria, specializing in mezedes, Greek small dishes like tapas.

747 Ninth Ave. (btwn 50th and 51st sts.). ☎ 212/245-7992. Appetizers $8–$15; main courses $15–$25. Sun–Thurs noon–10:30pm; Fri–Sat noon–11:30pm. Subway: C or E to 50th St. Nick's Ouzeria next door at 749 Ninth Ave. ☎ 212/397-2892.

The New York Deli News

There's nothing more Noo Yawk than hunkering down over a mammoth pastrami on rye at an authentic Jewish deli, where anything you order comes with a bowl of lip-smacking sour dills and a side of attitude. Here are some of the best:

Artie's New York Delicatessen, 2290 Broadway, between 82nd and 83rd streets (☎ 212/579-5959; www.arties.com). This new kid on the deli block can hold its own on the playground with the big boys, thank you very much (especially in the wiener department).

Barney Greengrass, the Sturgeon King, 541 Amsterdam Ave., between 86th and 87th streets on the Upper West Side (☎ 212/724-4707). This unassuming, daytime-only deli has become legendary for its high-quality salmon (sable, gravlax, Nova Scotia, kippered, lox, pastrami—you choose), whitefish, and sturgeon (of course).

Carnegie Deli, 854 Seventh Ave., at 55th Street (☎ 800/334-5606 or 212/757-2245; www.carnegiedeli.com). It's worth subjecting yourself to surly service, tourist-targeted overpricing, and elbow-to-elbow seating for some of the best pastrami and corned beef in town. Even big eaters may be challenged by mammoth sandwiches with names like "Fifty Ways to Love Your Liver" (chopped liver, hard-boiled egg, lettuce, tomato, and onion).

Katz's Delicatessen ★★, the city's best deli, remains fabulously old-world despite its hipster-hot Lower East Side location at 205 E. Houston St., at Ludlow Street (☎ 212/254-2246). For more on Katz's, see p. 84.

Stage Deli, 834 Seventh Ave., between 53rd and 54th streets (☎ 212/245-7850; www.stagedeli.com). Noisy and crowded and packed with tourists, it's still as authentic as they come with the sandwiches named for celebrities.

Wondee Siam ★ (Finds) THAI Hell's Kitchen offers countless ethnic culinary variations and one of the most prevalent is Thai—there are at least six Thai restaurants in a 5-block radius. My favorite is the tiny, zero-ambience Wondee Siam. I don't need colorful decorations or a big fish tank to enjoy authentic, uncompromisingly spicy Thai food and that's what I get at Wondee Siam. Here you don't have to worry that your waiter will assume you want a milder form of Thai. If there is a little red asterisk next to your item, you can be sure it is appropriately spicy. The soups are terrific, especially the sinus-clearing tom yum. In fact, there is a whole section of yum (chiles) dishes on the menu; my favorite being the larb gai, minced ground chicken with ground toasted rice. The curries are also first-rate as are the noodles, including the mild pad Thai. This is strictly BYOB and you'll want to do so to complement the spicy food.

792 Ninth Ave. (btwn 52nd and 53rd sts.). ☎ 212/459-9057. Reservations not accepted. Main courses $8.50–$18 (most under $10). No credit cards. Mon–Sat 11am–11pm; Sun 11am–10:30pm. Subway: C, E to 50th St. Wondee Siam II, 813 Ninth Ave. (btwn 53rd and 54th sts.). ☎ 917/286-1726.

Aquavit ★★ SCANDINAVIAN I'll miss the waterfall and the intimate town-house setting that Aquavit vacated in 2005. Thankfully, however, the food and staff had no trouble adjusting to the transition. Everything remains first-rate. The restaurant is now in the bottom of a glass tower on East 55th Street, and designed in sleek Scandinavian style with modernist furniture. In the front of the restaurant is an informal and less-expensive cafe, while past a long bar is the dining room.

After the move, if anything, the food has improved. The smoked fish—really all the fish—is prepared perfectly. I often daydream about the herring plate: four types of herring accompanied by a tiny glass of Aquavit, distilled liquor not unlike vodka flavored with fruit and spices, and a frosty Carlsberg beer. The hot smoked Arctic char on the main a la carte menu, served with clams and bean puree in a mustard green broth, is also a winner. Most fixed-price menus offer a well-chosen beverage accompaniment option.

65 E. 55th St. (btwn Park and Madison aves.). ☎ 212/307-7311. www.aquavit.org. Reservations recommended. Where to Find Your (Burger) Bliss

New York is hamburger happy. And that happiness has nothing to do with Mickey D's. It's about real, solid, locally-made burgers and there are plenty of places to find them without resorting to supersizing yourself. Here are some:

Brgr ★ 287 Seventh Ave. at 26th Street (☎ 212/488-7500). The newest addition to this rarefied list opened in late 2006 and features top quality meats and homemade toppings. The beef is natural Angus from Montana Legend beef but just as good are the turkey burgers made from Plainville Farms all-natural turkeys. Some of the toppings include Roquefort cheese, sweet onion marmalade, and homemade burger sauce. Save room for a Brgr shake made with Ronnybrook farms milk and ice cream.

Burger Joint ★★, located discreetly behind a curtain in the lobby of Le Parker Meridien Hotel, 118 W. 57th St. (☎ 212/708-7460), this is like the burger joint you might remember in college—only the burgers are better. And for a place off the lobby of a fancy hotel, it's downright cheap.

New York Burger Co., 303 Park Ave. South, between 23rd and 24 streets (☎ 212/254-2727), and 678 Sixth Ave., between 21st and 22nd streets (☎ 212/229-1404). Here you won't feel so guilty as you devour the burgers at this "healthy" fast-food alternative. The beef is all-natural, devoid of hormones or antibiotics and served on a fresh-baked brioche. What do they taste like? Pretty good! The burgers have plenty of flavor and come in a number of varieties.

P.J. Clarke's ★, 915 Third Ave., at 55th Street (☎ 212/317-1616; www.pjclarkes.com). P.J. Clarke's has been a Midtown

BLT Steak ★★★ STEAKHOUSE/BISTRO Steakhouses are often stereotyped as bastions of male bonding; testosterone-fueled with red meat and hearty drinks. But BLT (Bistro Laurent Touren-del) Steak breaks that mold in a big way; on the night I visited, I noticed more women—slinky and model-like—chomping on thick cuts of beef than men. That doesn't mean men can't also enjoy the beef here; served in cast-iron pots and finished in steak butter with a choice of sauces—béarnaise, red wine, horseradish, and bleu cheese, institution for over 50 years and its hamburger, like the restaurant's old wood walls, broken telephone booth, and hidden dining nook for two, has been blessedly preserved. Nothing more than a slab of chopped meat cooked to order, on a bun, and for the curious price of $8.10, the hamburger is a simple masterpiece. A new Clarke's opened in the Financial District downtown at 4 World Financial Center (☎ 212/285-1500).

Rare Bar & Grill ★, 303 Lexington Ave., between 37th and 38th streets (☎ 212/481-1999). You might pay a little more for your burger at Rare Bar & Grill—they range from $13 to $18—but you are paying for 8 ounces of Grade A American chuck beef that is ground daily at the restaurant. Rare has a number of interesting varieties; my favorite is the M&M burger with caramelized shallots, cheddar cheese, and apple-smoked bacon flambéed in whiskey. Rare recently opened a downtown branch, at 228 Bleecker St., between Carmine and Downing streets (☎ 212/691-7273).

Shake Shack, in Madison Square Park (☎ 212/889-6600). Open from the beginning of spring through most of November, Danny Meyer of Gramercy Tavern, The Modern, and Eleven Madison Park fame is behind this "shack" in the middle of Madison Square Park where adoring fans line up early and often for takeout burgers, hot dogs, and milkshakes. Try to come during off-hours, if possible, to avoid the lines; the burgers are good, but we're just talking hamburgers here—not worth waiting interminably for.

to name a few. The signature is the porterhouse for two (at $70!), but I recommend the New York strip or the short ribs braised in red wine. Both can be shared, which may be a good idea, especially after devouring the complimentary popovers and sampling an appetizer such as the tuna tartare or a side of onion rings or creamy spinach. Even after sharing one of the meats, you might not have room for the chestnut-chocolate sundae or peanut-butter chocolate mousse, and that would be a shame. This is not a restaurant for intimate conversation; even the music was muffled by the din of the diners.

106 E. 57th St. (btwn Park and Lexington aves.). ☎ 212/752-7470. www.bltsteak.com. Reservations highly recommended. Main courses $24–$39. AE, DC, MC, V. Mon–Fri 11:45am–2:30pm; Mon–Thurs 5:30–11pm; Fri–Sat 5:30–11:30pm. Subway: 4, 5, 6, N, R, W to 59th St.

Country ★★ FRENCH/AMERICAN Stunningly elegant and urbane, there is really nothing country about Country. And that's not a knock. Gorgeously designed by David Rockwell, the restaurant's centerpiece is the 200-square-foot Tiffany skylight dome that was hidden over the years by a dropped ceiling. The prix-fixe menu changes every 2 weeks and matches the decor's sophisticated style. When I visited in early spring, warm asparagus in a light lemon vinaigrette was an outstanding first-course option while the lamb cannelloni (tender pieces of shredded lamb in a wonton-thin dumpling) made the perfect second-course accompaniment. Of the third-course options, the striped bass with crushed herbs, potatoes, and clams was the standout. A selection of cheeses is offered as a dessert option and it's hard to resist. Downstairs are the more countrified, darker, wood-paneled booths of Café at Country.

90 Madison Ave. (at 29th St.). ☎ 212/889-7100. Reservations required. Prix-fixe $105; 5-course tasting menu $110; 4-course tasting menu $105; 6-course $135. AE, DC, DISC, MC, V. Sun–Thurs 5:30–10pm; Fri–Sat 5:30–11pm. Café at Country main courses $15–$27. Mon–Sat 11:30am–3pm and 5:30–11pm; Sun 10:30am–3pm. Subway: N/R to 28th St.; 6 to 28th St.

Oceana ★★★ SEAFOOD When you enter Oceana, the nautical themes are obvious. But this is no seafood shack—it's more like a luxury ocean liner. Standouts include tartare of yellowfin tuna with daikon radish, black cardamom, and horseradish sorbet; striped bass wrapped in a ham croissant; and stuffed artichoke and Icelandic cod basted in butter and herbs. His dishes look so good on the plate you might not want to eat them, but that would be a big mistake. In this case the artwork is extremely edible. Oceana also features an excellent wine list and your waiter will help pair wines with your dishes if you desire. Though this is not your everyday restaurant—prices are too steep for that—the atmosphere is relaxed and the service is personable.

55 E. 54th St. (btwn Park and Madison aves.). ☎ 212/759-5941. www.oceana-restaurant.com. Reservations recommended. 3-course prix fixe $48 lunch, $78 dinner. AE, DISC, MC, V. Mon–Fri noon–2:30pm and 5:30–10:30pm; Sat 5–10:30pm. Subway: E, F to Fifth Ave.

Café Gray ★★ FRENCH/ASIAN/EASTERN EUROPEAN
Café Gray sits on a corner of the third floor overlooking Central Park. The problem is, you cannot see much of Central Park from the restaurant's dining room. Instead, blocking the view is the live show of talented cooks preparing your meal in the expansive open kitchen. You just can't have it all here. But you won't care once those well-trained cooks plate your dishes and your server begins bringing them to you. And if one of those first plates holds the unparalleled starter of risotto with a mushroom fricassee, the mushroom gravy rich and melding mouthwateringly with the starch of the risotto, the lack of Central Park view will no longer be worthy of complaint. It seems that short ribs are on every menu of all the new trendy restaurants. That may be because they all are trying to equal Chef Gray's remarkable braised short ribs he pairs with a delicate mound of soft grits in a meux mustard sauce. Desserts, as they seem to do at so many quality restaurants, sometimes exceed the main courses in grandeur and the chocolate pistachio soufflé is no exception. Service is impeccable and welcomingly casual, but with all the commotion in the kitchen do not expect a hushed environment.

Porter House New York ★★ STEAKHOUSE The space, located in the Time Warner Center on Columbus Circle is sleek with large leather banquettes for groups along with smaller, white table-clothed tables by the floor-to-ceiling windows overlooking Central Park. Along with the nice view, this steakhouse satisfies the essentials of the best red meat emporiums, with a few inventive twists. I gambled by ordering the chili-rubbed ribeye—would chili obscure the natural flavor of the meat? My gamble paid off; the chili was subtle and actually brought out the cut's essence. If you want your steak straight ahead, the dry-aged prime strip steak, cooked to perfection and bursting with flavor, won't let you down. Sides are somewhat steakhouse unconventional: they add pieces of thick smoky bacon to the creamed spinach and offer porcini mushrooms on a bed of polenta as an alternative to mashed potatoes. But it's the meat—and that you are eating it overlooking Central Park—that makes Porter House New York so special.

Ouest ★★★ CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN With plush red banquettes and an intimate balcony area, Ouest is both cozy and clubby. Service is personable but also professional—so good you'll need to keep reminding yourself that you are on the Upper West Side. But what really draws the crowds is chef Tom Valenti's mastery in the kitchen, especially with meats such as his signature braised lamb shank or his melt-in-your-mouth braised beef short ribs. The sautéed skate is perfectly prepared with a simple sauce of parsley and olive oil, while the baby calamari in a spicy tomato sopressata sauce appetizer was so good I actually smiled as I ate it.

Telepan ★★ AMERICAN The venue for Telepan is an Upper West Side townhouse with a dining room painted in soothing lime green. The cool design complements the menu which changes seasonally but always features farm fresh products. I had the good fortune to dine in the spring and was greeted with fresh ramps, fiddleheads, and young peas in many of the dishes I sampled. There was no fresh produce, however, in the foie gras donuts listed as a “share.” The “donuts” are dusted with cocoa and cinnamon and might work as well with a cup of java as with a cocktail. Of the appetizers, the standout was the wild green frittata which did indeed come with in-season ramps. Telepan offers Mid Courses and of them, the pea pancakes with pea agnolotti looked and, more importantly, tasted greenmarket fresh. Save room for an entrée, specifically the haddock with a sweet lobster sauce. Whatever you choose to eat, you’ll have no problem finding a complementary wine from the restaurant’s long and impressive list. Telepan has become a pre-Lincoln Center favorite so if you want to avoid the crush, make a reservation for after curtain.

MODERATE

Carmine’s ★ (Kids) FAMILY-STYLE SOUTHERN ITALIAN Everything is B-I-G at this rollicking family-style mainstay with two locations, on the Upper West Side (the original) and in Times Square. In many cases big means bad, but not here. Carmine’s, with a dining room vast enough to deserve its own zip code, and massive portions, turns out better pasta and entrees than most 20-table Italian restaurants. I’ve never had pasta here that wasn’t al dente, and the marinara sauce is as good as any I’ve had in Manhattan. The salads are always fresh and the fried calamari perfectly tender. Rigatoni marinara, linguine with white-clam sauce, and ziti with broccoli are pasta standouts, while the best meat entrees include veal parmigiana, broiled porterhouse steak, shrimp scampi, and the remarkable chicken scarpariello (chicken pan-broiled with a lemon-rosemary sauce). The tiramisu is pie-size, thick, creamy, and bathed in Kahlúa and Marsala. Order half of what you think you’ll need. Don’t expect intimate conversation; in fact, it’s downright loud.

2450 Broadway (btwn 90th and 91st sts.). ☎ 212/362-2200. www.carminesnyc.com. Reservations recommended before 6pm; accepted only for 6 or more after 6pm. Family-style main courses $19–$65 (most $23 or less). AE, DC, DISC, MC, V. Sun–Thurs 11:30am–11pm; Fri–Sat 11:30am–midnight. Kefi ★★ (Finds) GREEK Chef/owner Michael Psilakis has transformed what was formerly nouveau-Greek Onera back to something much closer to your father’s Greek. More accurately, Kefi is like your Greek mother's (if you had a Greek mother) kitchen and in fact, the restaurant was inspired by Psilakis's mother and her traditional recipes. So gone is the Offal Tasting menu of Onera and in are Greek standards like moussaka, spinach pie, Greek salad, and grilled fish. But oh, what Psilakis does with the standards! The mezes (Greek appetizers) are good enough to make up a meal; it's hard to resist the selection of spreads accompanied by pita, the warm feta, tomatoes, capers and anchovies, and the sublime grilled octopus salad, as good as I've had anywhere. But something's gotta give if you want to save room for entrées like the flat noodles with braised rabbit, the grilled whole branzino with potatoes, olives, tomatoes and feta, or the slow cooked, comforting lamb shank on a bed of orzo. If it is humanly possible after indulging in all of the above, don't miss out on the desserts, most notably the walnut cake with maple walnut ice cream. Service is casual and the space is a bit cramped, but not enough to deter you from the many pleasures of Kefi.

222 W. 79th St. (btwn Broadway and Amsterdam Ave.). ☎ 212/873-0200. Reservations not taken. Main courses $10–$20. Cash only. Tue–Thurs 5–10:30pm; Fri–Sat 5–11pm; Sun 5–10pm. Subway: 1 to 79th St.

Savann ★ MEDITERRANEAN The restaurant scene on Amsterdam Avenue in the low 80s is particularly volatile, but for over 9 years, Savann has survived on that difficult stretch of real estate thanks to consistently top-notch food, personable service, and a casual, low-key atmosphere. This is a neighborhood place with regulars who swear by the food. Some favorites include the home-cured gravlax, here served over a chickpea-scallion pancake in a flying-fish caviar and dill sauce; the grilled calamari; the Seafood Savann, a medley of seafood in a light tomato sauce served over linguine; the mixed seafood phyllo purse; and the perfectly cooked filet mignon. For dessert don't miss the tarte tatine, a homemade apple tart served with cinnamon ice cream and warm honey. In warm weather, the sidewalk cafe is a great place for people-watching.

414 Amsterdam Ave. (btwn 79th and 80th sts.). ☎ 212/580-0202. www.savann.com. Reservations recommended. Main courses $12–$27 (most under $20). AE, MC, V. Mon–Fri noon–3:30pm; Sat–Sun 11am–3:30pm; daily 4–11pm. Subway: 1 to 79th St.

For breakfast or lunch, also consider Artie's Delicatessen, 2290 Broadway, between 82nd and 83rd streets (☎ 212/579-5959; www.arties.com), and Barney Greengrass, the Sturgeon King, 541 Amsterdam Ave., between 86th and 87th streets (☎ 212/724-4707), two of the best Jewish delis in town. See “The New York Deli News” sidebar on p. 104 for further details.

You’ll find some of the best bagels in New York on the Upper West Side, including H&H Bagels, 2239 Broadway, at 80th Street (☎ 212/595-8003), and Absolute Bagels, 2788 Broadway, between 106th and 107th streets (☎ 212/932-2052). For non-vegetarians and the non-health-minded, consider the cheapest, yet in some ways most comforting, indulgence: Gray’s Papaya, 2090 Broadway, at 72nd Street (☎ 212/799-0243). This 24-hour hot-dog stand is a New York institution.

Celeste ★★ (Finds) ITALIAN Tiny but charming Celeste features its own wood-burning pizza oven, which churns out thin-crust, simple but delicious pizzas. Pizza is not the only attraction here; the “fritti” (fried) course is unique; the fritto misto de pesce (fried mixed seafood) is delectable, but the fried zucchini blossoms, usually available in the summer and fall, are amazing. The fresh pastas are better than the dried pasta; I never thought the fresh egg noodles with cabbage, shrimp, and sheep’s cheese would work, but it was delicious. Not on the menu, but usually available, are plates of artisanal Italian cheeses served with homemade jams. Though the main courses are also good, stick with the pizzas, antipasto, frittis, and pastas. For dessert, try the gelato; the pistachio was the best I’ve had in New York. The restaurant has been “discovered,” so go early or go late or expect a wait.

502 Amsterdam Ave. (btwn 84th & 85th sts.). ☎ 212/874-4559. Reservations not accepted. Pizza $10–$12; antipasto $7–$10; pasta $10; main courses $14–$16. No credit cards. Mon–Sat 5–11pm; Sun noon–3pm. Subway: 1 to 86th St.

Flor de Mayo (Finds) CUBAN/CHINESE Cuban/Chinese cuisine is a New York phenomenon that started in the late 1950s when Cubans of Chinese heritage immigrated to New York after the revolution. Most of the immigrants took up residence on the Upper West Side, and Cuban/Chinese restaurants flourished. Many have disappeared, but the best one, Flor de Mayo, still remains and is so popular that a new branch opened further south on Amsterdam Avenue. The kitchen excels at both sides of the massive menu, but the best dish is the la brasa half-chicken lunch special—beautifully spiced and slow-roasted until it’s fork tender and falling off the bone, served with a pile of fried rice, bounteous with roast pork, shrimp, and veggies. Offered Monday through Saturday until 4:30pm, the whole meal is $6.95, and it’s enough to fortify you for

Dining Uptown: The Soul of Harlem

There is much soul in Manhattan, but Harlem seems to possess the mother lode when it comes to food. Here is one man's primer to Harlem's soul food (see map on p. 119):

Amy Ruth's, 113 W. 116th St., between Lenox and Seventh avenues (☎ 212/280-8779). Claiming to be authentic soul, Amy Ruth's has become a mecca for Harlem celebs, with the gimmick of naming platters after them, like the Rev. Al Sharpton (chicken and waffles) and the Rev. Calvin O. Butts III (chicken wings and waffles). Most of the celebrities gained their fame in Harlem, as did the chicken and waffles, or fried whiting and waffles, or steak and waffles. You can't go wrong with anything here as long as waffles are included.

Charles' Southern Style Kitchen (★), 2837 Eighth Ave., between 151st and 152nd streets (☎ 877/813-2920 or 212/926-4313). Nothing fancy about this place, just a brightly lit, 25-seater on a not-very-attractive block in upper Harlem. But you don't come here for fancy, you come for soul food at its simplest and freshest. And come hungry. The $13 all-you-can-eat buffet features crunchy, moist, pan-fried chicken; ribs in a tangy sauce, with meat falling off the bone; stewed oxtails in a thick brown onion gravy; macaroni and cheese; collard greens with bits of smoked turkey; black-eyed peas; and corn bread, warm and not overly sweet. Hours can be erratic, so call before you head there.

M&G Diner, 383 W. 125th St., at St. Nicholas Avenue (☎ 212/864-7326). All the soul-food joints I've listed serve top-notch fried chicken, but the best I've had is the perfectly pan-fried, the day. Service and atmosphere are reminiscent of Chinatown: efficient and lightning-quick. My favorite combo: the noodles-, greens-, shrimp-, and pork-laden Chinese soup with yellow rice and black beans.

2651 Broadway (btwn 100th & 101st sts.). ☎ 212/663-5520 or 212/595-2525. Reservations not accepted. Main courses $4.50–$19 (most under $10); lunch specials $5–$7 (Mon–Sat to 4:30pm). AE, MC, V ($15 minimum). Daily noon–midnight. Subway: 1 to 103rd St. Also at 484 Amsterdam Ave. (btwn 83rd & 84th sts.). ☎ 212/787-3388. Subway: 1 to 86th St.

supermoist bird at the M&G. This small, no-frills diner, open 8am–11:30pm, is a treat any time. Start your day with a breakfast of eggs with salmon croquettes or eggs with grits or finish it with the chicken, chitterlings, or meatloaf. All the sides are freshly made, and the desserts, especially the sweet-potato pie, are phenomenal. There's a great jukebox loaded with soul to complement the food.

Miss Mamie's Spoonbread Too, 366 W. 110th St., between Columbus and Manhattan avenues (☎ 212/865-6744). Entering this strawberry-curtained charmer is like stepping into South Carolina. But you are in Harlem, or at least the southern fringe of Harlem, and you won't be paying South Carolina soul prices, or Harlem soul prices, either. Still, despite the prices, Miss Mamie's is the real deal, especially their barbecued ribs, falling off the bone in a sweet peppery sauce, and the smothered chicken, fried and then covered with thick pan gravy.

Sylvia's, 328 Lenox Ave., between 126th and 127th streets (☎ 212/996-0660; www.sylviassoulfood.com). Sylvia is the self-proclaimed queen of not only Harlem soul food but all soul food. In reality, Sylvia is a queen of self-promotion. Sylvia's now has become a franchise, offering canned food, beauty products, and fragrances. With all that attention to merchandising, the food at her original Harlem restaurant has suffered and it's more of a tourist trap. If you plan to go, however, make it on Sunday for the gospel brunch, which is an absolute joy.

Good Enough to Eat ★ (Kids Finds) AMERICAN HOME COOKING For 25 years the crowds have been lining up on weekends outside Good Enough to Eat to experience chef/owner Carrie Levin's incredible breakfasts. As a result, lunch and dinner have been somewhat overlooked. That's too bad, because these meals can be as great as the breakfasts. The restaurant's cow motif and farmhouse knickknacks imply hearty, home-cooked food, and that's what's done best here. Stick with the classics: meatloaf with gravy and mashed potatoes; turkey dinner with cranberry relish, gravy, and cornbread stuffing; macaroni and cheese; griddled corn bread; Vermont spinach salad; and the BBQ sandwich, roast chicken with barbecue sauce and homemade potato chips. And save room for the desserts; though the selection is often overwhelming, I can never resist the coconut cake. This is food you loved as a kid, which is one reason why the kids will love it today. There are only 20 tables here, so expect a wait on weekends during the day or for dinner after six.

483 Amsterdam Ave. (btwn 83rd and 84th sts.). ☎ 212/496-0163. www.goodenoughtoeat.com. Breakfast $5.25–$12; lunch $8.50–$15; dinner $8.50–$23 (most under $18). AE, MC, V. Breakfast Mon–Fri 8:30am–4pm, Sat–Sun 9am–4pm; lunch Mon noon–4pm, Tues–Fri 11:30am–4pm; dinner Mon–Thurs & Sun 5:30–10:30pm, Fri–Sat 5:30–11pm. Subway: 1 to 86th St.

Noche Mexicana ★ (Finds MEXICAN This tiny restaurant serves some of the best tamales in New York. Wrapped in cornhusks, as a good tamale should be, they come in two varieties: in a red mole sauce with shredded chicken or in a green tomatillo sauce with shredded pork. There are three tamales in each order, which costs only $5, making it a cheap and almost perfect lunch. The burritos are authentic and meals unto themselves. The tinga burrito, shredded chicken in a tomato-and-onion chipotle sauce, is my favorite. Each is stuffed with rice, beans, and guacamole. Don't get fancy here; stick with the tamales, burritos, and soft tacos, the best being the taco al pastor, a taco stuffed with pork marinated with pineapple and onions.

852 Amsterdam Ave. (btwn 101st and 102nd sts.). ☎ 212/662-6900 or 212/662-7400. Burritos $6.50–$8.50; tacos $2; tamales $6; Mexican dishes $9.50–$11. AE, DISC, MC, V. Sun–Thurs 10am–11pm; Fri–Sat 10am–midnight. Subway: 1 to 103rd St.

Paola's ★ ITALIAN There is no shortage of Italian restaurants on the Upper East Side, but many are mediocre at best. There is nothing, however, mediocre about Paola's, and having survived and thrived in the neighborhood for over 10 years is testament to the restaurant's quality and charms. The charm begins with Paola herself, almost always present and always the gracious hostess. The two dining rooms are comforting and inviting; the larger centered on a wood-burning oven used to cook many of the restaurant's meat dishes, the other the smaller, but cozy, wine room. Most appealing of all is the menu. Hope that Paola has found baby artichokes the day you visit, because you will want to begin with the carciofi alla Giudea, artichokes prepared in the style of the Roman Jews—cooked twice and addictively crispy. The pastas are usually home-made; the pappardelle with a duck-meat ragout is a standout, while the hand-rolled trofie served with pesto is a specialty. The stinco d'agnello, slow-roasted lamb shank with sage and parmesan polenta, is a hearty main course, roasted in the wood-burning oven, as are the naturally raised, corn-fed poussins, served with potato gratin and sautéed greens. Fig ice cream topped with port-soaked figs is the decadent way to finish your meal.

Nick's Family-Style Restaurant and Pizzeria ★ Kids ITALIAN

Since 1994, Nick Angelis has wowed them in Forest Hills, Queens, with his pizza. In 2003 he took his act to Manhattan, where the pizza is garnering equally high praise. The pizza is thin-crust, with the proper proportions of creamy, homemade mozzarella and fresh tomato sauce. But this is much more than a pizzeria: Try the light, lemony baked clams or “Josephine’s” perfectly breaded eggplant parmigiana. If you dare combine pizza with a calzone, this is the place; Nick’s calzone, stuffed with ricotta and mozzarella cheese, is spectacular. The orecchiette with broccoli rabe and sausage is the pasta winner, while the filet of sole oreganato Livornese with mussels is the standout main course. Save room for an extra-large cannoli for dessert; the shell is flaky and the filling ultra-creamy. Full orders are enough to feed two or three and are a great bargain for a group, but half-orders are also available. The room is comfortable and far from fancy. Go early or be prepared to wait.

1814 Second Ave. (at 94th St.). ☎ 212/987-5700. Pizza $12–$14; macaroni half-orders $6–$12, full orders $12–$24; entree half-orders $8.50–$12, full orders $17–$24. AE, DC, DISC, MC, V. Sun–Thurs 11:30am–11pm; Fri–Sat 11:30am–11:30pm. Subway: 6 to 96th St.

Exploring New York City

Don't try to tame New York—you can't. Decide on a few must-see attractions, and then let the city take you on its own ride. Inevitably, as you make your way around the city, you'll be blown off course by unplanned diversions that are as much fun as what you meant to see. After all, the true New York is in the details. As you dash from sight to sight, take time to admire a cornice on a prewar building, linger over coffee at a sidewalk cafe, or just idle away a few minutes on a bench watching New Yorkers parade through their daily lives.

1 The Top Attractions

American Museum of Natural History ★★ ★ (Kids) This is one of the hottest museum tickets in town, thanks to the Rose Center for Earth and Space ★, whose four-story-tall planetarium sphere hosts the show, Cosmic Collisions, narrated by Robert Redford, about the violent beginnings of the universe. Prepare to be blown away by this astounding, literally earth-shaking short film.

Buy your tickets in advance for the Space Show in order to guarantee admission (they're available online); I also recommend buying tickets in advance for a specific IMAX film or special exhibition, such as the Butterfly Conservatory (see below), especially during peak seasons (summer, autumn, holiday time) and for weekend visits; otherwise, you might miss out.

Other must-sees include the Big Bang Theater, which re-creates the theoretical birth of the universe; the Hall of the Universe, with its 16-ton meteorite; and the terrific Hall of Planet Earth, which focuses on the geologic processes of our home planet (great volcano display!). All in all, you'll need at least 2 hours to fully explore the Rose Center. Tip: Friday night is a great time to plan your visit, as the center isn't overcrowded, live jazz and food fill the Hall of the Universe, and, bathed in blue light, the sphere looks magical.

The rest of the 4-square-block museum is nothing to sneeze at. Founded in 1869, it houses the world's greatest natural-science collection in a group of buildings made of towers and turrets, pink

The diversity of the holdings is astounding: some 36 million specimens, ranging from microscopic organisms to the world's largest cut gem, the Brazilian Princess Topaz (21,005 carats). Rose Center aside, it would take you all day to see the entire museum, and then you still wouldn't get to everything. If you don't have a lot of time, you can see the best of the best on free highlights tours offered daily every hour at 15 minutes after the hour from 10:15am to 3:15pm. The Hall of Human Origins in the newly opened Anne and Bernard Spitzer Hall traces the evolution of man and even offers children's workshops where kids can compare skull casts of early humans.

The museum excels at special exhibitions, so check to see what will be on while you're in town in case any advance planning is required. The magical Butterfly Conservatory (★), a walk-in enclosure housing nearly 500 free-flying tropical butterflies, has developed into a can't-miss fixture from October through May; check to see if it's in the house while you're in town.

Brooklyn Bridge (★ ★ Moments) Its Gothic-inspired stone pylons and intricate steel-cable webs have moved poets like Walt Whitman and Hart Crane to sing the praises of this great span, the first to cross the East River and connect Manhattan to Brooklyn. Begun in 1867 and ultimately completed in 1883, the Brooklyn Bridge is now the city's best-known symbol of the age of growth that seized the city during the late 19th century. Value A Money & Time-Saving Tip CityPass may be New York's best sightseeing deal. Pay one price ($53, or $44 for kids 12–17) for admission to five major attractions: The American Museum of Natural History (admission only; does not include Space Show), the Guggenheim Museum, the Empire State Building, the Museum of Modern Art, and a 2-hour Circle Line harbor cruise. Individual tickets would cost more than twice as much.

More important, CityPass is not a coupon book. It contains actual tickets, so you can bypass lengthy lines. This can save you hours because sights such as the Empire State Building often have ticket lines of an hour or more.

CityPass is good for 9 days from the first time you use it. It's sold at participating attractions and at <http://citypass.com>. To avoid online service and shipping fees, you may buy the pass at your first attraction (start at an attraction that's likely to have the shortest admission line, such as the Guggenheim, or arrive before opening to avoid a wait at such spots as the Empire State Building). However, if you begin your sightseeing on a weekend or during holidays, when lines are longest, online purchase may be worthwhile.

For more information, call CityPass at ☎ 208/787-4300. (Note, however, that CityPass is not sold over the phone.)

imagine the awe that New Yorkers of that age felt at seeing two boroughs joined by this span. It's still astounding.

Walking the bridge: Walking the Brooklyn Bridge is one of my all-time favorite New York activities, although there's no doubt that the Lower Manhattan views from the bridge now have a painful resonance as well as a joyous spirit. A wide wood-plank pedestrian walkway is elevated above the traffic, making it a relatively peaceful, and popular, walk. It's a great vantage point from which to contemplate the New York skyline and the East River.

There's a sidewalk entrance on Park Row, just across from City Hall Park (take the 4, 5, or 6 train to Brooklyn Bridge/City Hall). But why do this walk away from Manhattan, toward the far less impressive Brooklyn skyline? Instead, for Manhattan skyline views, take an A or C train to High Street, one stop into Brooklyn. From there, you'll be on the bridge in no time: Come above ground, and then walk through the little park to Cadman Plaza East and head downslope (left) to the stairwell that will take you up to the footpath. (Following Prospect Place under the bridge, turning right onto Cadman Plaza East, will also take you directly to the stairwell.) It's a 20- to 40-minute stroll over the bridge to Manhattan, depending on your pace, the amount of foot traffic, and the number of stops you make to behold the spectacular views (there are benches along the way). The footpath will deposit you right at City Hall Park.

Tasty tips: The perfect complement to your stroll over the bridge is a stop for pizza at Grimaldi's (see "Pizza, New York Style," on p. 100), followed by homemade ice cream at the Brooklyn Ice Cream Factory (☎ 718/246-3963), located at the Fulton Ferry Fire Boat House on the river and in the shadow of the bridge. The pizza and ice cream will fortify you for your stroll into Manhattan.

Subway: A, C to High St.; 4, 5, 6 to Brooklyn Bridge–City Hall.

Ellis Island ★★ One of New York's most moving sights, the restored Ellis Island opened in 1990, slightly north of Liberty Island. Roughly 40% of Americans (myself included) can trace their heritage back to an ancestor who came through here. For the 62 years when it was America's main entry point for immigrants (1892–1954), Ellis Island processed some 12 million people. The greeting was often brusque—especially in the early years of the century (until 1924), when as many as 12,000 came through in a single day. The statistics can be overwhelming, but the Immigration Museum skillfully relates the story of Ellis Island and immigration in America by placing the emphasis on personal experience.

It's difficult to leave the museum unmoved. Today you enter the Main Building's baggage room, just as the immigrants did, and then climb the stairs to the Registry Room, with its dramatic vaulted tiled ceiling, where millions waited anxiously for medical and legal processing. A step-by-step account of the immigrants' voyage is detailed in the exhibit, with haunting photos and touching oral histories. What might be the most poignant exhibit is Treasures from Home, 1,000 objects and photos donated by descendants of immigrants, including family heirlooms, religious articles, and rare clothing and jewelry. Outside, the American Immigrant Wall of Honor commemorates the names of more than 500,000 immigrants and their families. You can even research your own family's history at the interactive American Family Immigration History Center. You might also make time to see the award-winning short film Island of Hope, Island of Tears, which plays on a continuous loop in two theaters. Short live theatrical performances depicting the immigrant experience are also often part of the day's events.

Empire State Building ★★☆☆ It took 60,000 tons of steel, 10 million bricks, 2.5 million feet of electrical wire, 120 miles of pipe, and 7 million man-hours to build. King Kong climbed it in 1933—and again in 2005. A plane slammed into it in 1945. The World Trade Center superseded it in 1970 as the island's tallest building. On that horrific day of September 11, 2001, it once again regained its status as New York City's tallest building. And through it all, the Empire State Building has remained one of the city's favorite landmarks and its signature highrise. Completed in 1931, the limestone-and-stainless-steel streamline Deco dazzler climbs 102 stories (1,454 ft.) and now harbors the offices of fashion firms, and, in its upper reaches, a jumble of high-tech broadcast equipment.

The Empire State Building glows every night, bathed in colored floodlights to commemorate events of significance—red, white, and blue for Independence Day; green for St. Patrick's Day; red, black, and green for Martin Luther King Day; blue and white for Hanukkah; lavender and white for Gay Pride Day. (You can find a lighting schedule online.) The silver spire can be seen from all over the city.

The best views, and what keeps the nearly three million visitors coming every year, are the ones from the 86th- and 102nd-floor observatories. The lower one is best—you can walk out on a windy deck and look through coin-operated viewers (bring quarters!) over what, on a clear day, can be as much as an 80-mile radius. The panorama is magnificent. One surprise is the flurry of rooftop activity, an aspect of city life that thrives unnoticed from our sidewalk vantage point. The higher observation deck is glass-enclosed and cramped.

Light fog can create an admirably moody effect, but it goes without saying that a clear day is best. Dusk brings the most remarkable views and the biggest crowds. Consider going in the morning, when the light is still low on the horizon, keeping glare to a minimum. Starry nights are pure magic. In your haste to go up, don't rush through the three-story-high marble lobby without pausing to admire its features, which include a wonderful streamline mural.

350 Fifth Ave. (at 34th St.). ☎ 212/736-3100. www.esbnyc.com. Observatory admission $18 adults, $16 seniors and children 12–17, $12 children 6–11, free for children under 6. Daily open 8am–2am, last elevator at 1:15am. Subway: B, D, F, N, R, Q, V, W to 34th St.; 6 to 33rd St.

Grand Central Terminal ★★ Even if you're not catching one of the subway lines or Metro-North commuter trains that rumble through Grand Central Terminal, come for a visit; it's one of the most magnificent public places in the country. And even if you arrive and leave by subway, be sure to exit the station, walking a couple of blocks south, to about 40th Street, before you turn around to admire Jules-Alexis Coutan's neoclassical sculpture Transportation hovering over the south entrance, with a majestic Mercury, the Roman god of commerce and travel, as its central figure.

The greatest visual impact comes when you enter the vast majestic main concourse. The high windows allow sunlight to penetrate the space, glinting off the half-acre Tennessee-marble floor. The brass clock over the central kiosk gleams, as do the gold- and nickel-plated chandeliers piercing the side archways. The masterful sky ceiling, a brilliant greenish blue, depicts the constellations of the winter sky above New York. They're lit with 59 stars, surrounded by dazzling 24-carat gold and emitting light fed through fiber-optic cables, their intensities roughly replicating the magnitude of the actual stars as seen from Earth. Look carefully and you'll see a patch near one corner left unrestored as a reminder of the neglect once visited on this splendid overhead masterpiece. On the east end of the main concourse is a grand marble staircase.

This Beaux Arts splendor serves as a hub of social activity as well. Excellent-quality shops and restaurants have taken over the mezzanine and lower levels. Off the main concourse at street level, there's a mix of specialty shops and national retailers, as well as the Grand Central Market for gourmet foods. The New York Transit Museum Store, in the shuttle passage, houses transit-related exhibits and a gift shop that's worth a look. The lower dining concourse ★ houses a food court and the famous Oyster Bar & Restaurant.

42nd St. at Park Ave. ☎ 212/340-2210 (events hot line). www.grandcentralterminal.com. Subway: S, 4, 5, 6, or 7 to 42nd St./Grand Central.

Metropolitan Museum of Art ★★ Home of blockbuster after blockbuster exhibition, the Metropolitan Museum of Art attracts some five million people a year, more than any other spot in New York City. And it's no wonder—this place is magnificent. At 1.6 million square feet, this is the largest museum in the Western Hemisphere. Nearly all the world's cultures are on display—from Egyptian mummies to ancient Greek statuary to Islamic carvings to Renaissance paintings to Native American masks to 20th-century decorative arts—and masterpieces are the rule. You could go once a week for a lifetime and still find something new on each visit.

So unless you plan on spending your entire vacation in the museum (some do), you cannot see the entire collection. My recommendation is to give it a good day—or better yet, 2 half-days so you don't burn out. One good way to get an overview is to take the Museum Highlights Tour, offered every day at various times (usually between 10:15am and 3:15pm; tours also offered in Spanish, Italian, German, and Korean). Visit the museum's website for a schedule of this and subject-specific tours (Old Masters Paintings, American Period Rooms, Arts of China, Islamic Art, and so on); you can get a schedule of the day's tours at the Visitor Services desk when you arrive. A daily schedule of Gallery Talks is also available.

The least overwhelming way to see the Met on your own is to pick up a map at the round desk in the entry hall and concentrate on what you like, whether it's 17th-century paintings, American furniture, or the art of the South Pacific. Highlights include the American Wing's Garden Court, with its 19th-century sculpture; the ground-level Costume Hall; and the Frank Lloyd Wright room. The beautifully renovated Roman and Greek galleries are overwhelming, but in a marvelous way, as are the collections of Byzantine Art and later Chinese art. The highlight of the astounding Egyptian collection is the Temple of Dendur, in a dramatic, purpose-built glass-walled gallery with Central Park views.

The big news this season at the Met is that after 50 years of being used as a dining area, the Greek and Roman galleries reopened in the spring of 2007 after a $220 million renovation redesigned and expanded the galleries to 57,000 square feet. The galleries now exhibit ancient artifacts that had been in storage including 30,000 of the square footage devoted to Roman collections.

In response to the huge crowds, the Met now opens on "holiday Mondays." On those Mondays, such as Memorial Day or Labor Day, the museum is open from 9:30am to 5:30pm.

To purchase tickets for concerts and lectures, call ☎ 212/570-3949 (Mon–Sat 9:30am–5pm). The museum contains several dining facilities, including a full-service restaurant serving Continental cuisine

(☎ 212/570-3964 for reservations). The roof garden is worth visiting if you're here from spring to autumn, offering peaceful views over Central Park and the city.

The Met's medieval collections are housed in upper Manhattan at The Cloisters ★★; see the full listing on p. 142.

Fifth Ave. at 82nd St. ☎ 212/535-7710. www.metmuseum.org. Admission (includes same-day entrance to the Cloisters) $15 adults, $10 seniors and students, free for children under 12 when accompanied by an adult. Sun, holiday Mon (Memorial Day, Labor Day, and so on), and Tues–Thurs 9:30am–5:15pm; Fri–Sat 9:30am–8:45pm. Strollers are permitted in most areas—inquire at Information Desks for gallery limitations. Oversized and jogging strollers are prohibited. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 86th St.

Museum of Modern Art ★★ The newer, larger MoMA, after a two-year renovation, is almost twice the space of the original. The renovation, designed by Yoshio Taniguchi, highlights space and light, with open rooms, high ceilings, and gardens—a beautiful work of architecture and a perfect complement to the art within. This is where you'll find van Gogh's Starry Night, Cézanne's Bather, Picasso's Les Femmes d'Alger, and the great sculpture by Rodin, Monument to Balzac. Whenever I visit, I like to browse the fun "Architecture and Design" department, with examples of design for appliances, furniture, and even sports cars. MoMA also features edgy new exhibits and a film series that attracts serious cinephiles. But the heart of the museum remains the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Sculpture Garden, which has been enlarged; the museum's new design affords additional views of this lovely space from other parts of the museum. MoMA is one of the most expensive museums in New York, but does have a "free" day: on Fridays from 4 to 8pm.

11 W. 53rd St. (btwn Fifth & Sixth aves.). ☎ 212/708-9400. www.moma.org. Admission $20 adults, $16 seniors, $12 students, children under 16 free accompanied by an adult. Sat–Mon and Wed–Thurs 10:30am–5:30pm; Fri 10:30am–8pm. Subway: E, V to Fifth Ave.; B, D, E to Seventh Ave.

Rockefeller Center ★★ A streamline moderne masterpiece, Rockefeller Center is one of New York's central gathering spots for visitors and New Yorkers alike. A prime example of the city's skyscraper spirit and historic sense of optimism, it was erected mainly in the 1930s, when the city was deep in the Depression as well as its most passionate Art Deco phase. Designated a National Historic Landmark in 1988, it's the world's largest privately owned business-and-entertainment center, with 18 buildings on 21 acres.

For a dramatic approach to the complex, start at Fifth Avenue between 49th and 50th streets. The builders purposely created the gentle slope of the Promenade, known as the Channel Gardens

Heading for the Top of the Rock

Giving the Empire State Building some friendly competition when it comes to spectacular views, is the observation deck of 30 Rockefeller Plaza known as the Top of the Rock ★★. The deck, which comprises floors 67 to 70, which had been closed since 1986, reopened in 2005. The stately deck was constructed in 1933 to resemble the grandeur of a luxury ocean liner, and unlike the Empire State Building, the observation deck here is more spacious and the views, though not quite as high, are just as stunning. You might have just as much fun getting up there as you will on the deck; the sky-shuttle elevators with glass ceilings project images from the 1930s through the present day as it zooms its way up. Reserved-time tickets help minimize the lines and are available online at www.topoftherocknyc.com. The observation deck is open daily from 8:30am to midnight; admission rates are $18 for adults, $16 for seniors, $11 for ages 6 to 11, and free for children under 6. For more information, call ☎ 877/NYC-ROCK (877/692-7625) or 212/698-2000 or visit www.topoftherocknyc.com.

because it's flanked to the south by La Maison Française and to the north by the British Building. (The Channel, get it?)

The Rink at Rockefeller Center ★ (☎ 212/332-7654; www.rockefellercenter.com) is tiny but romantic, especially during the holidays, when the Christmas tree's multicolored lights twinkle from above. The rink is open from mid-October to mid-March, and you'll skate under the magnificent tree for the month of December.

The focal point of this "city within a city" is the building at 30 Rockefeller Plaza ★, a 70-story showpiece towering over the plaza. It's still one of the city's most impressive buildings; walk through for a look at the granite-and-marble lobby, lined with monumental sepia-toned murals by José Maria Sert. You can pick up a walking-tour brochure highlighting the center's art and architecture at the information desk. On the 65th floor, the legendary Rainbow Room is open to the public on a limited basis.

NBC television maintains studios throughout the complex. Saturday Night Live and Late Night with Conan O'Brien originate at 30 Rock. NBC's Today show is broadcast live on weekdays from 7 to 10am from the glass-enclosed studio on the southwest corner of 49th Street and Rockefeller Plaza; come early if you want a visible spot, and bring your HI MOM! sign.

The 70-minute NBC Studio Tour (☎ 212/664-3700; www.shopnbc.com) will take you behind the scenes at the Peacock network. The tour changes daily but might include the Today show, NBC Nightly News, Dateline NBC, and/or Saturday Night Live sets. Who knows? You may even run into Meredith Viera or Brian Williams. Tours run every 15 minutes Monday through Saturday from 8:30am to 5:30pm, Sunday from 9:30am to 4:30pm (later on certain summer days); of course, you'll have a better chance of encountering some real live action on a weekday. Tickets are $19 for adults, $16 for seniors and children 6 to 16. You can reserve your tickets for either tour in advance (reservations are recommended) or buy them right up to tour time at the NBC Experience store, on Rockefeller Plaza at 49th Street. They also offer a 75-minute Rockefeller Center Tour hourly every day between 10am and 4pm. Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for seniors and children 6 to 16; two-tour combination packages are available for $23.

Radio City Music Hall (★, 1260 Sixth Ave., at 50th Street (☎ 212/247-4777; www.radiocity.com), is perhaps the most impressive architectural feat of the complex. Designed by Donald Deskey and opened in 1932, it's one of the largest indoor theaters, with 6,200 seats. But its true grandeur derives from its magnificent Art Deco appointments. The crowning touch is the stage's great proscenium arch, which from the distant seats evokes a faraway sun setting on the horizon of the sea. The men's and women's lounges are also splendid. The theater hosts the annual Christmas Spectacular, starring the Rockettes. The illuminating 1-hour Stage Door Tour is offered Monday through Saturday from 10am to 5pm, Sunday from 11am to 5pm; tickets are $17 for adults, $10 for children under 12.

Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum (★ It's been called a bun, a snail, a concrete tornado, and even a giant wedding cake; bring your kids, and they'll probably see it as New York's coolest opportunity for skateboarding. Whatever description you choose to apply, Frank Lloyd Wright's only New York building, completed in 1959, is best summed up as a brilliant work of architecture—so brilliant that it competes with the art for your attention. Though you might not see much except scaffolding; the exterior of the museum is being restored with a completion date scheduled for spring 2008.

But the restoration has no effect on what's inside and it's easy to see the bulk of what's on display in 2 to 4 hours. Usually the progression is counterintuitive: from the first floor up, rather than from the sixth floor down. If you're not sure, ask a guard before you begin. Permanent exhibits of 19th- and 20th-century art, including strong holdings of Kandinsky, Klee, Picasso, and French Impressionists, occupy a stark annex called the Tower Galleries, an addition (accessible at every level) that some critics have claimed made the structure look like a toilet bowl backed by a water tank. (Judge for yourself—I think there may be something to that view.)

The Guggenheim runs some special programs, including free docent tours daily, a limited schedule of lectures, free family films, avant-garde screenings for grown-ups, curator-led gallery tours on select Friday afternoons, and the World Beat Jazz Series, which resounds through the rotunda on Friday and Saturday from 5 to 8pm. 1071 Fifth Ave. (at 89th St.). ☎ 212/423-3500. www.guggenheim.org. Admission $18 adults, $15 seniors and students, free for children under 12, pay-what-you-wish Fri 6–8pm. Sat–Wed 10am–5:45pm; Fri 10am–7:45pm. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 86th St.

Staten Island Ferry ★ Value In 2006, the Staten Island Ferry celebrated its 100th anniversary. Over the years it has been one of New York's best bargains—sometimes costing a nickel and most of the time, like now, costing nothing at all. It's New York's best freebie—especially if you just want to glimpse the Statue of Liberty and not climb her steps. You get an hour-long excursion (round-trip) into the world's biggest harbor. This is not strictly a sightseeing ride but commuter transportation. As a result, during business hours, you'll share the boat with working stiffs reading and drinking coffee.

You should go on deck and enjoy the busy harbor traffic. The old orange-and-green boats usually have open decks along the sides or at the bow and stern; try to catch one of these if you can, since the newer white boats don't have decks. Grab a seat on the right side of the boat for the best view. On the way out of Manhattan, you'll pass the Statue of Liberty (the boat comes closest to Lady Liberty on the way to Staten Island), Ellis Island, and from the left side of the boat, Governor's Island; you'll see the Verrazano Narrows Bridge spanning from Brooklyn to Staten Island in the distance. Once you've docked, there's usually another boat waiting to depart for Manhattan. The skylight views are awesome on the return trip.

Free admission. 24 hr.; every 20–30 min. weekdays, less frequently during off-peak and weekend hours. Statue of Liberty ★★☆☆ Kids For the millions who came by ship to America in the last century—either as privileged tourists or needy, hopeful immigrants—Lady Liberty, standing in the Upper Bay, was their first glimpse of America. No monument so embodies the nation's, and the world's, notion of political freedom and economic potential. Even if you don't make it to Liberty Island, you can get a spine-tingling glimpse from Battery Park, from the New Jersey side of the bay, or during a ride on the Staten Island Ferry (see above). It's always reassuring to see her torch lighting the way.

Proposed by French statesman Edouard de Laboulaye as a gift from France to the United States, commemorating the two nations' friendship and joint notions of liberty, the statue was designed by sculptor Frédéric-Auguste Bartholdi with the engineering help of Alexandre-Gustave Eiffel (who was responsible for the famed Paris tower) and unveiled on October 28, 1886. Touring tips: Ferries leave daily every half-hour to 45 minutes from 9am to about 3:30pm, with more frequent ferries in the morning and extended hours in summer. Try to go early on a weekday to avoid the crowds that swarm in the afternoon, on weekends, and on holidays. A stop at Ellis Island ★★ (p. 130) is included in the fare, but if you catch the last ferry, you can visit the statue or Ellis Island, not both.

You can buy ferry tickets in advance via www.statuereservations.com, which will allow you to board without standing in the sometimes-long ticket line; however, there is an additional service charge of $1.75 per ticket. Even if you've already purchased tickets, arrive as much as 30 minutes before your desired ferry time to allow for increased security procedures prior to boarding. The ferry ride takes about 20 minutes.

Once on Liberty Island, you'll start to get an idea of the statue's immensity: She weighs 225 tons and measures 152 feet from foot to flame. Her nose is 4½ feet long; her index finger is 8 feet long.

On Liberty Island in New York Harbor. 📞 212/363-3200 (general info), or 212/269-5755 (ticket/ferry info). www.nps.gov/stli or www.statuecruises.com. Free admission; ferry ticket to Statue of Liberty and Ellis Island $12 adults, $9.50 seniors, $4.50 children 3–17. Daily 9am–3:30pm (last ferry departs around 3:30pm); extended hours in summer. Subway: 4, 5 to Bowling Green; 1 to South Ferry. Walk south through Battery Park to Castle Clinton, the fort housing the ferry ticket booth.

Times Square Overrated There's no doubt that Times Square has evolved into something much different than it was over a decade ago when it had a deservedly sleazy reputation. Yet there is much debate among New Yorkers about which incarnation was better. For New Yorkers, Times Square is a place we go out of our way to avoid. The crowds, even by New York standards, are stifling; the restaurants, mostly national chains, aren't very good; the shops, also mostly national chains, are unimaginative; and the attractions, like Madame Tussauds New York wax museum, are kitschy. I suppose it's a little too Vegas for us. Still, you've come all this way; you've got to at least take a peek, if only for the amazing neon spectacle of it.

Most Broadway theaters are around Times Square, so plan your visit around your show tickets. For your pre-dinner meal, walk 2 blocks west to Ninth Avenue where you'll find many relatively inexpensive, good restaurants. If you are with kids, the Ferris wheel in the Toys "R" Us store makes a visit to Times Square worthwhile.

Subway: 1, 2, 3, 7, N, Q, R, S, W to Times Sq.; A, C, E to 42nd St.—Port Authority.

Wall Street & the New York Stock Exchange Wall Street—it's an iconic name, and the world's prime hub for bulls and bears everywhere. This narrow 18th-century lane (you'll be surprised at how little it is) is appropriately monumental, lined with neoclassical towers that reach as far skyward as the dreams and greed of investors who built it into the world's most famous financial market.

At the heart of the action is the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), the world's largest securities trader, where billions change hands. The NYSE came into being in 1792, when merchants met daily under a nearby buttonwood tree to try to pass off to each other the U.S. bonds that had been sold to fund the Revolutionary War. By 1903, they were trading stocks of publicly held companies in this Corinthian-columned Beaux Arts "temple" designed by George Post. About 3,000 companies are now listed on the exchange, trading nearly 314 billion shares valued at about $16 trillion. Unfortunately, the NYSE is no longer open to the public for tours.

World Trade Center Site (Ground Zero)

Do you call a place where over 3,000 people lost their lives an “attraction”? Or do you now call it a shrine? This is the quandary of the World Trade Center site. What had been a big hole for five years is a little more than that; construction began in 2006 on the proposed “Freedom Tower” to be built at the site. But even though work is ongoing, there is still political bickering on what will rise from that hole. The new design retains essential elements of the original—soaring 1,776 feet into the sky, its illuminated mast evoking the Statue of Liberty’s torch. From the square base, the Tower will taper into eight tall isosceles triangles, forming an octagon at its center. An observation deck will be located 1,362 feet above ground. Of course, all this could change by the time this book comes out.

For now, you can see the site through a viewing wall on the Church Street side; on that “Wall of Heroes” are the names of those who lost their lives that day along with the history of the site, including photos of the construction of the World Trade Center in the late 1960s and how, after it opened in 1972, it changed the New York skyline and downtown. A walk along the Wall of Heroes remains a painfully moving experience.

The site is bounded by Church, Barclay, Liberty, and West streets. Call ☎ 212/484-1222 or go to www.nycvisit.com or www.southstseaport.org for viewing information; go to www.downtownny.com for lower-Manhattan area information and rebuilding updates. The Tribute Center gives guided tours of the site. Call ☎ 212/422-3520 or visit www.tributewtc.org for more information. Tours are given Mon–Fri at 11am, 1pm and 3pm; Sat and Sun at noon, 1, 2, and 3pm. The fee is $10 for adults; children younger than 12 are free.

shunned by traditional academics, assembled a sizable collection, and founded the museum in 1930 in Greenwich Village.

Today’s museum is an imposing presence on Madison Avenue—an inverted three-tiered pyramid of concrete and gray granite with seven seemingly random windows designed by Marcel Breuer, a leader of the Bauhaus movement. The rotating permanent collection consists of an intelligent selection of major works by Edward Hopper, George Bellows, Georgia O'Keeffe, Roy Lichtenstein, Jasper Johns, and other artists. A second-floor exhibit space is devoted exclusively to works from its permanent collection from 1900 to 1950, while the rest is dedicated to rotating exhibits.

Shows are usually all well curated and more edgy than what you'd see at MoMA or the Guggenheim. Topics range from topical surveys, such as "American Art in the Age of Technology" and "The Warhol Look: Glamour Style Fashion" to in-depth retrospectives of famous or lesser-known movements (such as Fluxus, the movement that spawned Yoko Ono, among others) and artists (Mark Rothko, Keith Haring, Duane Hanson, Bob Thompson). Free gallery tours are offered daily, and music, screenings, and lectures fill the calendar.

Yankee Stadium ★★ Next to the Colosseum in Rome, there aren't many more famous sports arenas in the world than the House That Ruth Built. The Yankees play from April until October (and, since they seem to be in the playoffs most years, mostly through Oct). Depending on who's in town, tickets, which range in price from $12 to $115, can be tough to score. But if you plan in advance, and even if you don't, you should be able to purchase a seat by going through a broker or scalping (be careful of forgeries) the day of a game. If you are not visiting during the baseball season, tours of the stadium, including Monument Park, are held year-round. (You can purchase tickets online.) For more information, see the section "Spectator Sports," later in this chapter. The 2007 and 2008 seasons are your last chance to see a game in the 1923-built Yankee Stadium. A new stadium is in the works and scheduled to open in the same area for the 2009 season.

Children's Museum of Manhattan ★ Kids Here's a great place to take the kids when they're tired of being told not to touch. Designed for ages 2 to 12, this museum is strictly hands-on. Interactive exhibits and activity centers encourage self-discovery. The Time Warner Media Center takes children through the world of animation and helps them produce their own videos. The Body Odyssey is a zany, scientific journey through the human body. This isn't just a museum for the 5-and-up set—there are exhibits designed for babies and toddlers, too. The schedule also includes art classes and storytellers, and a full slate of entertainment on weekends.

212 W. 83rd St. (btwn Broadway & Amsterdam Ave.). ☎ 212/721-1234. www.cmom.org. Admission $9 children and adults, $6 seniors. School season Wed–Sun and school holidays 10am–5pm; summer Tues–Sun 10am–5pm. Subway: 1 to 86th St.

The Cloisters ★★ If it weren't for this branch of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, many New Yorkers would never get to this northernmost point in Manhattan. This remote yet lovely spot is devoted to the art and architecture of medieval Europe. Atop a cliff overlooking the Hudson River, you'll find a 12th-century chapter house, parts of five cloisters from medieval monasteries, a Romanesque chapel, and a 12th-century Spanish apse brought intact from Europe. Surrounded by peaceful gardens, this is the one place on the island that can even approximate the kind of solitude suitable to such a collection. Inside you'll find extraordinary works that include the famed Unicorn tapestries, sculpture, illuminated manuscripts, stained glass, ivory, and precious metal work.

Despite its remoteness, the Cloisters are popular, especially in fine weather, so try to schedule your visit during the week rather than on a crowded weekend afternoon. A free guided Highlights Tour is offered Tuesday through Friday at 3pm and Sunday at noon; gallery talks are also a regular feature. Additionally, Garden Tours are offered Tuesday through Sunday at 1pm in May, June, September, and October; lectures and other special programming are always on Sunday from noon to 2pm; and medieval music concerts are regularly held in the stunning 12th-century Spanish chapel. For an extra-special experience, you may want to plan your visit around one.

At the north end of Fort Tryon Park. 📍 212/923-3700. www.metmuseum.org. Suggested admission (includes same-day entrance to the Metropolitan Museum of Art) $20 adults, $15 seniors, $10 students, free for children under 12. Nov–Feb Tues–Sun 9:30am–4:45pm; Mar–Oct Tues–Sun 9:30am–5:15pm. Subway: A to 190th St., then a 10-min. walk north along Margaret Corbin Dr., or pick up the M4 bus at the station (1 stop to Cloisters). Bus: M4 Madison Ave. (Fort Tryon Park–The Cloisters).

Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum ★ Part of the Smithsonian Institution, the Cooper-Hewitt is housed in the Carnegie Mansion, built by steel magnate Andrew Carnegie in 1901. Some 11,000 square feet of gallery space is devoted to changing exhibits that are invariably well conceived, engaging, and educational. Shows are both historic and contemporary in nature, and topics range from “The Work of Charles and Ray Eames: A Legacy of Invention” to “Russell Wright: Creating American Lifestyle” to “The Architecture of Reassurance: Designing the Disney Theme Parks.” Many installations are drawn from the museum’s own vast collection of industrial design, drawings, textiles, wall coverings, books, and prints. On your way in, note the fabulous Art Nouveau-style copper-and-glass canopy above the entrance. And be sure to visit the garden, ringed with Central Park benches from various eras.

2 E. 91st St. (at Fifth Ave.). 📍 212/849-8400. www.cooperhewitt.org. Admission $12 adults, $9 seniors and students, free for children under 12, free to all Fri 5–9pm. Mon–Thurs 10am–5pm; Fri 10am–9pm; Sat 10am–6pm; Sun noon–6pm. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 86th St.

El Museo del Barrio What started in 1969 with a small display in a local school classroom in East Harlem is today the only museum in America dedicated to Puerto Rican, Caribbean, and Latin American art. The northernmost Museum Mile institution has a permanent exhibit ranging from pre-Columbian artifacts to photographic art and video. The display of santos de palo (wood-carved religious figurines) is especially noteworthy, as is “Taíno, Ancient Voyagers of the Caribbean,” dedicated to the active, highly developed cultures that Columbus encountered when he landed in the “New World.” The well-curated changing exhibitions tend to focus on 20th-century artists and contemporary subjects.

1230 Fifth Ave. (at 104th St.). ☎ 212/831-7272. www.elmuseo.org. Suggested admission $6 adults, $4 seniors (free on Thurs) and students, free for children under 12. Wed–Sun 11am–5pm. Subway: 6 to 103rd St.

The Frick Collection ★★ Henry Clay Frick could afford to be an avid collector of European art after amassing a fortune as a pioneer in the coke and steel industries at the turn of the 20th century. To house his treasures and himself, he hired architects Carrère & Hastings to build this 18th-century French-style mansion (1914), one of the most beautiful remaining on Fifth Avenue.

Most appealing about the Frick is its intimate size and setting. This is a living testament to New York’s vanished Gilded Age—the interior still feels like a private home (albeit a really, really rich guy’s home) graced with beautiful paintings, rather than a museum. Come here to see the classics by some of the world’s most famous painters: Titian, Bellini, Rembrandt, Turner, Vermeer, El Greco, and Goya, to name only a few. A highlight of the collection is the Fragonard Room, graced with the sensual rococo series “The Progress of Love.” The portrait of Montesquieu by Whistler is also stunning. Included in the price of admission, the AcousticGuide audio tour is particularly useful because it allows you to follow your own path rather than a proscribed route. A free 22-minute video presentation is screened in the Music Room every half-hour from 10am to 4:30pm (from 1:30 on Sun); starting with this helps to set the tone for what you’ll see.

1 E. 70th St. (at Fifth Ave.). ☎ 212/288-0700. www.frick.org. Admission $15 adults, $10 seniors, $5 students. Children under 10 not admitted; children under 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Tues–Sat 10am–6pm; Sun 11am–5pm. Closed all major holidays. Subway: 6 to 68th St./Hunter College.

Tips* Intrepid in Drydock

The much-loved U.S.S. Intrepid battleship/museum is sitting in drydock in Bayonne, New Jersey at the moment, and you might not be able to see it this trip. It is scheduled to return to the pier at W. 46th St. in 2008. For information and updates, call ☎ 212/245-0072 or visit www.intrepidmuseum.org.

rotating exhibitions of the museum's 50,000-plus prints as well as visiting shows. The emphasis is on contemporary photographic works, but historically important photographers aren't ignored. A must on any photography buff's list.

1133 Sixth Ave. (at 43rd St.). ☎ 212/857-0000. www.icp.org. Admission $12 adults, $8 seniors and students, under 12 free. Tues–Thurs and Sat–Sun 10am–6pm; Fri 10am–8pm. Subway: B, D, F, V to 42nd St.

Lower East Side Tenement Museum ★ Kids This museum is the first-ever National Trust for Historic Preservation site that was not the home of someone rich or famous. It's something quite different: a five-story tenement that 10,000 people from 25 countries called home between 1863 and 1935—people who had come to the United States looking for the American dream and made 97 Orchard St. their first stop. The tenement museum tells the story of the great immigration boom of the late 19th and early 20th centuries, when the Lower East Side was considered the “Gateway to America.” A visit here makes a good follow-up to an Ellis Island trip.

The only way to see the museum is by guided tour. Two primary tenement tours, held on all open days and lasting an hour, offer a satisfying exploration of the museum: Piecing It Together: Immigrants in the Garment Industry, which focuses on the restored apartment and the lives of its turn-of-the-20th-century tenants, an immigrant Jewish family named Levine from Poland; and Getting By: Weathering the Great Depressions of 1873 and 1929, featuring the homes of the German-Jewish Gumpertz family and the Sicilian-Catholic Baldizzi family, respectively. A knowledgeable guide leads you into each urban time capsule, where several apartments have been restored to their lived-in condition, and recounts the real stories of the families who occupied them in fascinating detail. You can pair the tours for an in-depth look at the museum, since the apartments and stories are so different; however, one tour serves as an excellent introduction if you don't want to invest an entire afternoon here.

These tours are not really for kids, who won't enjoy the serious tone and "don't touch" policy. Much better for them is the 45-minute, weekends-only Confino Family Apartment tour, a living-history program geared to families, which allows kids to converse with an interpreter who plays teenage immigrant Victoria Confino (ca. 1916); kids can also handle whatever they like and try on period clothes.

The hour-long Streets Where We Lived neighborhood heritage walking tour is also offered on weekends from April through December. Small permanent and rotating exhibits, including photos, videos, and a model tenement, are housed in the visitor center and exhibition space in the tenement building at 97 Orchard St. Special tours and programs are sometimes on the schedule.

Tours are limited in number and sell out quickly, so it pays to buy tickets in advance, which you can do online or over the phone by calling Ticketweb at ☎ 800/965-4827.

108 Orchard St. (btwn Delancey & Broome sts.). ☎ 212/982-8420. www.tenement.org. Tenement tours depart Tues–Fri every 40 min. 1–4pm; Sat–Sun every half-hour 11am–4:45pm. Confino Apt. tour Sat–Sun hourly noon–3pm. Walking tour Apr–Dec Sat–Sun 1 and 3pm. Subway: F to Delancey St.; J, M, Z to Essex St.

Morgan Library ★★ (Finds) This New York treasure, boasting one of the world's most important collections of original manuscripts, rare books and bindings, master drawings, and personal writings has reopened after 2 years of extensive renovations. Those renovations include a welcoming entrance on Madison Avenue; new and renovated galleries, so that more of the library's holdings can be exhibited; a modern auditorium; and a Reading Room with greater capacity and electronic resources and expanded space for collections storage. Some of the Library's recent exhibitions include one on the life of Bob Dylan through music, letters, and memorabilia and an exhibit on illustrator, Saul Steinberg. You can lunch in the intimate Morgan Dining Room as if you were dining in JP's own quarters.

225 Madison Ave. (between 36th & 37th sts.). ☎ 212/590-0300. www.themorgan.org. Tues–Thurs 10:30am–5pm, Fri 10:30am–9pm, Sat 10am–6pm, Sun 11am–6pm. $12 adults, $8 seniors and students, under 12 free. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 33rd St.

Museum of the City of New York A wide variety of objects—costumes, photographs, prints, maps, dioramas, and memorabilia—trace the history of New York City from its beginnings as a humble Dutch colony in the 16th century to its present-day prominence. Two outstanding permanent exhibits are the re-creation of John D. Rockefeller's master bedroom and dressing room, and the space devoted to “Broadway!,” a history of New York theater. Kids will love “New York Toy Stories,” a permanent exhibit showcasing toys and dolls owned and adored by centuries of New York children. The permanent “Painting the Town: Cityscapes of New York” explores the changing cityscape from 1809 to 1997, and carries new profundity in the wake of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. In the summer of 2007, MCNY featured the fun exhibit, The Glory Days: New York Baseball, 1947-1957.”

Museum of Jewish Heritage—A Living Memorial to the Holocaust ★

In the south end of Battery Park City, the Museum of Jewish Heritage occupies a strikingly spare six-sided building designed by award-winning architect Kevin Roche, with a six-tier roof alluding to the Star of David and the six million murdered in the Holocaust. The permanent exhibits—“Jewish Life a Century Ago, The War Against the Jews,” and “Jewish Renewal”—recount their prewar lives, the unforgettable horror that destroyed them, and the tenacious renewal experienced by European and immigrant Jews in the years from the late 19th century to the present. The museum’s power derives from the way it tells that story: through the objects, photographs, documents, and, most poignantly, the videotaped testimonies of Holocaust victims, survivors, and their families, chronicled by Steven Spielberg’s Survivors of the Shoah Visual History Foundation. Thursday evening is dedicated to panel discussions, performances, and music, while Sunday is for family programs and workshops; a film series is also a part of the calendar.

While advance tickets are not usually necessary, you may want to purchase them to guarantee admission; call ☎ 212/945-0039. Audio tours narrated by Meryl Streep and Itzhak Perlman are available at the museum for an additional $5.

36 Battery Place (at 1st Place), Battery Park City. ☎ 212/968-1800. www.mjhnyc.org. Admission $10 adults, $7 seniors, $5 students, free for children under 12 and for everyone Wed 4–8pm. Museum of Television & Radio If you can resist the allure of this museum, I’d wager you’ve spent the last 70 years in a bubble. You can watch and hear all the great personalities of TV and radio—from Uncle Miltie to Johnny Carson to Jerry Seinfeld—at a private console (available for 2 hr.). You can also conduct computer searches to pick out the great moments of history, viewing almost anything that made its way onto the airwaves, from the Beatles' first appearance on The Ed Sullivan Show to the crumbling of the Berlin Wall (the collection consists of 75,000 programs and commercials). Selected programs are also presented in two theaters and two screening rooms, which can range from "Barbra Streisand: The Television Performances" to little-seen Monty Python episodes.

25 W. 52nd St. (btwn Fifth & Sixth aves.). ☎ 212/621-6600. www.mtr.org. Admission $10 adults, $8 seniors and students, $5 children under 14. Tues–Sun noon–6pm (Thurs until 8pm). Subway: B, D, F, V to 47–50th sts./Rockefeller Center; E, V to 53rd St.

New Museum of Contemporary Art ★ This contemporary-arts museum has moved closer to the mainstream in recent years, but it's only a safety margin in from the edge as far as most of us are concerned. Expect adventurous and well-curated exhibitions. Previous schedules have included Portrait of the Lost Boys, New Zealander Jacqueline Fraser's moving narrative made of sumptuous fabric and fragile wire sculptures that examines the high incidence of suicide among teenage boys in New Zealand, and "John Waters: Change of Life," photographs by the filmmaker who brought us Pink Flamingos and Hairspray. As of December 1, 2007, the museum will be in residence in its new 60,000-square-foot, $35-million home on the Bowery at Prince Street. It will be the first new art museum constructed from the ground up below 14th Street.

556 W. 22nd St. (at Eleventh Ave.). ☎ 212/219-1222. www.newmuseum.org. Admission $6 adults, $3 seniors and students, free to visitors 18 and under, $3 Thurs after 6pm. Tues–Wed and Fri–Sat noon–6pm; Thurs noon–8pm (Zenith Media Lounge to 6:30pm). Subway: C, E to 23rd St.

New-York Historical Society ★ Launched in 1804, the New-York Historical Society is a major repository of American history, culture, and art, with a special focus on New York and its broader cultural significance. The grand neoclassical edifice near the Museum of Natural History has finally emerged from the renovation tent. Now open on the fourth floor is the Henry Luce III Center for the Study of American Culture, a state-of-the-art study facility and gallery of fine and decorative arts, which displays more than 40,000 objects amassed over 200 years—including paintings, sculpture, Tiffany lamps, textiles, furniture, even carriages—that had previously been in storage for decades. Of particular interest to scholars and ephemera buffs are the extensive Library Collections, which include books, manuscripts, maps, newspapers, photographs, and more documents chronicling the American experience. (An appointment may be necessary to view some or all of the Library Collections, so call ahead.) The 2006 exhibit “Slavery in New York” was so popular it has now become permanent and the companion exhibit, “New York Divided: Slavery and the Civil War” was featured in 2007.

An extensive, top-quality calendar of programs runs the gamut from story hours to Irving Berlin music nights to lectures by such luminaries as Ric Burns to expert-led walks through Manhattan neighborhoods; call or check the website for the schedule.

Skyscraper Museum Wowed by the sheer verticality in this town? Awed by the architectural marvel that is the highrise? You’re not alone. If you’d like to learn more about the technology, culture, and muscle behind it all, seek out this formerly itinerant museum, which moved into its first permanent home in 2004 in the 38-story Skidmore, Owings & Merrill tower that also houses the Ritz-Carlton New York, Battery Park. The new space comprises two galleries, one housing a permanent exhibition dedicated to the evolution of Manhattan’s skyline, the other for changing shows. In 2007 the museum featured “Giants: The Twin Towers and the Twentieth Century”, about the building of the World Trade Center (and not the destruction of) including documentaries and memorabilia.

39 Battery Place (Little West St. and 1st Place). ☎ 212/968-1961. www.skyscraper.org. Admission: $5 adults, $2.50 seniors and students. Wed–Sun noon–6pm. Subway: 4, 5 to Bowling Green.

South Street Seaport & Museum Kids Dating back to the 17th century, this historic district on the East River encompasses 11 square blocks of historic buildings, a maritime museum, several piers, shops, and restaurants. You can explore most of the Seaport on your own. It’s a beautiful but somewhat odd place. The 18th- and 19th-century buildings lining the cobbled streets and alleyways are impeccably restored but nevertheless have a theme-park air about them, no doubt due to the mall-familiar shops housed within. The Seaport’s biggest tourist attraction is Pier 17, a historic barge converted into a mall, complete with food court and cheap-jewelry kiosks.

Despite its rampant commercialism, the Seaport is well worth a look. There’s a good amount of history to be discovered here, most of it around the South Street Seaport Museum, a fitting tribute to the sea commerce that once thrived here. On weekends the museum dedicates Saturday and Sunday afternoons to family fun with music, art, and other activities for children 4 and older.

In addition to the galleries—which house paintings and prints, ship models, scrimshaw, and nautical designs, as well as frequently changing exhibitions—there are a number of historic ships berthed at the pier to explore, including the 1911 four-masted Peking and the 1893 Gloucester fishing schooner Lettie G. Howard. A few of the boats are living museums and restoration works in progress; the 1885 cargo schooner Pioneer (© 212/748-8786) offers 2-hour public sails daily from early May through September. Even Pier 17 has its merits. Head up to the third-level deck overlooking the East River, where the long wooden chairs will have you thinking about what it was like to cross the Atlantic on the Normandie. From this level you can see south to the Statue of Liberty, north to the Gothic majesty of the Brooklyn Bridge, and Brooklyn Heights on the opposite shore.

At the gateway to the Seaport, at Fulton and Water streets, is the Titanic Memorial Lighthouse, a monument to those who lost their lives when the ocean liner sank on April 15, 1912. It was erected overlooking the East River in 1913 and moved to this spot in 1968, just after the historic district was so designated.

At Water & South sts.; museum visitor center is at 12 Fulton St. © 212/748-8600 or 212/SEA-PORT. www.southstseaport.org. Museum admission $8 adults, $6 students and seniors, $4 children 5–12, free for children under 5. Museum Apr–Oct Tues–Sun 10am–6pm, Thurs 10am–8pm; Nov–Mar Fri–Mon 10am–5pm. Subway: 2, 3, 4, 5 to Fulton St. (walk east, or downslope, on Fulton St. to Water St.).

3 Skyscrapers & Other Architectural Highlights

For details on the Empire State Building ★★, see p. 131; for Grand Central Terminal ★, p. 132; for Rockefeller Center ★, p. 134; and for the Brooklyn Bridge ★, p. 128. You might also wish to check out “Places of Worship,” below, for treasures like St. Patrick’s Cathedral, Temple Emanu-El, and the Cathedral of St. John the Divine ★.

The Upper West Side is home to two of the city’s prime examples of residential architecture. On Broadway, taking up the block between 73rd and 74th streets, is the Ansonia, looking for all the world like a flamboyant architectural wedding cake. This splendid Beaux Arts building has been home to the likes of Stravinsky, Toscanini, and Caruso, thanks to its virtually soundproof apartments. (It was also where members of the Chicago White Sox plotted to throw the 1919 World Series, a year before Babe Ruth moved in after donning the New York Yankees’ pinstripes.) Even more notable is the Dakota, at 72nd Street and Central Park West. Legend has it that the angular 1884 apartment house—accented with gables, dormers, and oriel windows that give it a brooding appeal—earned its name when its forward-thinking developer, Edward S. Clark, was teased by friends that he was building so far north of the city that he might as well be building in the Dakotas. The building's most famous resident, John Lennon, was gunned down outside the 72nd Street entrance on December 8, 1980; Yoko Ono still lives inside.

Chrysler Building ★★ Built as Chrysler Corporation headquarters in 1930, this is perhaps the 20th century's most romantic architectural achievement, especially at night when the lights in its triangular openings play off its steely crown. As you admire its facade, be sure to note the gargoyles reaching out from the upper floors, looking, for all the world, like streamline-Gothic hood ornaments. The observation deck closed long ago, but you can visit its lavish ground-floor interior, which is Art Deco to the max.

405 Lexington Ave. (at 42nd St.). Subway: S, 4, 5, 6, 7 to 42nd St./Grand Central.

Flatiron Building This triangular masterpiece was one of the first skyscrapers. Its wedge shape is the only way the building could fill the triangular property created by the intersection of Fifth Avenue and Broadway, and that happy coincidence created one of the city's most distinctive buildings. Built in 1902 and fronted with limestone and terra cotta (not iron), the Flatiron measures only 6 feet across at its narrow end. So called for its resemblance to the laundry appliance, it was originally named the Fuller Building, then later "Burnham's Folly" because folks were certain that architect Daniel Burnham's 21-story structure would fall down. It didn't.

175 Fifth Ave. (at 23rd St.). Subway: R to 23rd St.

New York Public Library ★★ The New York Public Library, adjacent to Bryant Park ★ and designed by Carrère & Hastings (1911), is one of the country's finest examples of Beaux Arts architecture, a majestic structure of white Vermont marble with Corinthian columns and allegorical statues. Before climbing the broad flight of steps to the Fifth Avenue entrance, note the famous lion sculptures—Fortitude on the right, and Patience on the left—so dubbed by whip-smart former mayor Fiorello La Guardia. At Christmastime, they don natty wreaths to keep warm.

This library is actually the Humanities and Social Sciences Library, only one of the research libraries in the New York Public Library system. The interior is one of the finest in the city and features

Astor Hall, with high arched marble ceilings and grand staircases. Thanks to restoration and modernization, the stupendous Main Reading Rooms have been returned to their stately glory and moved into the computer age (goodbye, card catalogs!). After a $5-million restoration, what was once known only as Room 117, a Beaux Arts masterpiece with incredible views of Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street, reopened and is now known as the Lionel Pincus and Princess Firyal Map Division. Here you will find possibly the finest and most extensive collection of maps in the world.

Even if you don't stop in to peruse the periodicals, you may want to check out one of the excellent rotating exhibitions.

Fifth Ave. at 42nd St. ☎ 212/930-0830 (exhibits and events) or 212/661-7220 (library hours). www.nypl.org. Free admission to all exhibitions. Tues–Wed 11am–7:30pm. Thurs–Sat 10am–6pm; Sun 1 to 5pm. Subway: B, D, F, V to 42nd St.; S, 4, 5, 6, 7 to Grand Central/42nd St.

United Nations In the midst of New York City is this working monument to world peace. The U.N. headquarters occupies 18 acres of international territory—neither the city nor the United States has jurisdiction here—along the East River from 42nd to 48th streets. Designed by an international team of architects (led by American Wallace K. Harrison and including Le Corbusier) and finished in 1952, the complex along the East River weds the 39-story glass slab Secretariat with the free-form General Assembly on beautifully landscaped grounds donated by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. One hundred eighty nations use the facilities to arbitrate worldwide disputes. Guided tours leave every half-hour and last 45 minutes to an hour.

At First Ave. & 46th St. ☎ 212/963-8687. www.un.org/tours. Guided tours $12 adults, $9 seniors, $8.50 high school and college students, $6.50 children 5–14. Children under 5 not permitted. Daily tours every half-hour 9:30am–4:45pm; Sat, Sun 10am to 4:30pm Jan–Feb; limited schedule may be in effect during the general debate (late Sept to mid-Oct). Subway: S, 4, 5, 6, 7 to 42nd St./Grand Central.

4 Places of Worship

Abyssinian Baptist Church ★ The most famous of Harlem's more than 400 houses of worship is this Baptist church, founded downtown in 1808 by African-American and Ethiopian merchants. It was moved uptown to Harlem back in the 1920s by Adam Clayton Powell, Sr., who built it into the largest Protestant congregation—white or black—in America. His son, Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (for whom the adjoining boulevard was named), carried on his tradition, and also became a U.S. congressman. Abyssinian is now the domain of the fiery, activist-minded Rev. Calvin O. Butts, whom the chamber of commerce has declared a “living treasure.” The Sunday morning services—at 9 and 11am—offer a wonderful opportunity to experience the Harlem gospel tradition.

132 Odell Clark Place (W. 138th St., btwn Adam Clayton Powell Blvd. & Lenox Ave.). ☎ 212/862-7474. www.abyssinian.org. Subway: 2, 3, B, C to 135th St.

Cathedral of St. John the Divine ★ The world’s largest Gothic cathedral, St. John the Divine has been a work-in-progress since 1892. Its sheer size is amazing enough—a nave that stretches two football fields and a seating capacity of 5,000—but keep in mind that there is no steel structural support. The church is being built using traditional Gothic engineering—blocks of granite and limestone are carved out by master masons and their apprentices—which may explain why construction is still ongoing, more than 100 years after it began, with no end in sight. In fact, a December 2001 fire destroyed the north transept, which housed the gift shop. But this phoenix rose from the ashes quickly; the cathedral was reopened to visitors within a month. That’s precisely what makes this place so wonderful: Finishing isn’t necessarily the point.

Though it’s the seat of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, St. John’s embraces an interfaith tradition. Internationalism is a theme found throughout the cathedral’s iconography. Each chapel is dedicated to a different national, ethnic, or social group. The genocide memorial in the Missionary chapel—dedicated to the victims of the Ottoman Empire in Armenia (1915–23), of the Holocaust (1939–45), and in Bosnia-Herzegovina since 1992—moved me to tears, as did the FDNY memorial in the Labor chapel. Although it was conceived to honor 12 firefighters killed in 1966, hundreds of personal notes and trinkets of remembrance have made it into a tribute to the 343 firefighters killed on September 11, 2001.

Worship services Mon–Sat 8 and 8:30am (morning prayer and holy Eucharist), 12:15pm, and 5:30pm (1st Thurs service 7:15am); Sun 8, 9, and 11am and 6pm; AIDS memorial service 4th Sat of the month at 12:15pm. Subway: B, C, 1 to Cathedral Pkwy.

St. Patrick’s Cathedral This Gothic white-marble-and-stone structure is the largest Roman Catholic cathedral in the United States, as well as the seat of the Archdiocese of New York. Designed by James Renwick, begun in 1859, and consecrated in 1879, St. Patrick’s wasn’t completed until 1906. Strangely, Irish Catholics picked one of the city’s WASPiest neighborhoods for St. Patrick’s. After the death of the beloved John Cardinal O'Connor in 2000, Pope John Paul II installed Bishop Edward Egan, whom he elevated to cardinal in 2001. The cathedral seats a congregation of 2,200; if you don't want to come for Mass, you can pop in between services to get a look at the impressive interior. The St. Michael and St. Louis altar came from Tiffany & Co. (also located here on Fifth Ave.), while the St. Elizabeth altar—honoring Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton, the first American-born saint—was designed by Paolo Medici of Rome.

Mass Mon–Fri 7, 7:30, and 8am, noon, and 12:30, 1, and 5:30pm; Sat 8am, noon, and 12:30 and 5:30pm; Sun 7, 8, 9, and 10:15am (Cardinal's mass), noon, and 1 and 5:30pm; holy days 7, 7:30, 8, 8:30, and 11:30am, noon, and 12:30, 1, and 5:30pm. Subway: B, D, F, V to 47th–50th sts./Rockefeller Center.

Temple Emanu-El Many of New York's most prominent and wealthy families are members of this Reform congregation—the first in New York City—housed in the city's most famous synagogue. The largest house of Jewish worship in the world is a majestic blend of Moorish and Romanesque styles, symbolizing the mingling of Eastern and Western cultures. The temple houses a small but remarkable collection of Judaica in the Herbert & Eileen Bernard Museum, including a collection of Hanukkah lamps with examples ranging from the 14th to the 20th centuries. Three galleries also tell the story of the congregation Emanu-El from 1845 to the present. Tours are given after morning services Saturday at noon. Inquire for a schedule of lectures, films, music, symposiums, and other events.

1 E. 65th St. (at Fifth Ave.). ☎ 212/744-1400. www.emanuelnyc.org. Free admission. Daily 10am–5pm. Services Sun–Thurs 5:30pm; Fri 5:15pm; Sat 10:30am. Subway: N, R to Fifth Ave.; 6 to 68th St.

Trinity Church Serving God and Mammon, this Wall Street house of worship—with neo-Gothic flying buttresses, beautiful stained-glass windows, and vaulted ceilings—was designed by Richard Upjohn and consecrated in 1846. At that time, its 280-foot spire dominated the skyline. Its main doors, embellished with biblical scenes, were inspired in part by Ghiberti's famed doors on Florence's Baptistry. The historic Episcopal church stood strong while office towers crumbled around it on September 11, 2001; however, an electronic organ has temporarily replaced the historic pipe organ, which was damaged by dust and debris. The gates to the church currently serve as an impromptu memorial to the victims of 9/11, with countless tokens of remembrance left by locals and visitors.

The church runs a tour daily at 2pm (a second Sun tour follows the 11:15am Eucharist); groups of five or more should call ☎ 212/602-0872 to reserve. Also part of Trinity Church is St. Paul's Chapel, at Broadway and Fulton Street, New York's only surviving pre-Revolutionary church, and a transition shelter for homeless men until it was transformed into a relief center after September 11, 2001; it returned to its former duties in mid-2002. Built by Thomas McBean, with a temple-like portico and Ionic columns supporting a massive pediment, the chapel resembles London's St. Martin-in-the-Fields. In the graveyard, 18th- and 19th-century notables rest in peace and modern businesspeople sit for lunch.

At Broadway & Wall St. ☎ 212/602-0800 or 212/602-0872 for concert information. www.trinitywallstreet.org. Free admission and free tours; $2 suggested donation for noonday concerts. Museum Mon–Fri 9–11:45am; Sun–Fri 1–3:45pm; Sat 10am–3:45pm. Services Mon–Fri 8:15am, 12:05, and 5:15pm (additional Healing Service Thurs at 12:30pm); Sat 8:45am; Sun 9 and 11:15am (also 8am Eucharist service at St. Paul's Chapel, between Vesey and Fulton sts.). Subway: 4, 5 to Wall St.

5 Central Park & Other Places to Play

CENTRAL PARK

Without the miracle of civic planning that is Central Park ★★, Manhattan might be an unbroken block of buildings. Instead, smack in the middle of Gotham, an 843-acre natural retreat provides a daily escape valve and tranquilizer for millions.

While you're in the city, be sure to take advantage of the park's many charms—not the least of which is its sublime layout. Frederick Law Olmsted and Calvert Vaux won a competition with a plan that marries flowing paths with sinewy bridges, integrating them into the rolling landscape with its rocky outcroppings, man-made lakes, and wooded pockets. Designers hid traffic from the eyes and ears of park-goers by building roads that are largely hidden from the bucolic view.

GETTING THERE To reach the southernmost entrance on the west side, take the A, B, C, D, 1, to 59th Street/Columbus Circle. To reach the southeast corner entrance, take the N, R, W to Fifth Avenue; from here, it's an easy walk into the park to the Information Center in the Dairy (☎ 212/794-6564; daily 11am–5pm, to 4pm in winter), midpark at about 65th Street. Here you can ask questions, pick up park information, and purchase a good park map.

If your time for exploring is limited, I suggest entering the park at 72nd or 79th street for maximum exposure (subway: B, C to 72nd St. or 81st St./Museum of Natural History). From here, you can pick up park information at the visitor center at Belvedere Castle (☎ 212/772-0210; Tues–Sun 10am–5pm, to 4pm in winter), midpark at 79th Street. There’s also a third visitor center at the Charles A. Dana Discovery Center (☎ 212/860-1370; daily 11am–5pm, to 4pm in winter), at the northeast corner of the park at Harlem Meer, at 110th Street between Fifth and Lenox avenues (subway: 2, 3 to Central Park N./110th St.). The Dana Center is also an environmental education center hosting workshops, exhibits, music programs, and park tours, and lends fishing poles for fishing in Harlem Meer. (Park policy is catch-and-release.)

Food carts and vendors are set up at all of the park’s main gathering points. You’ll also find a fixed food counter at the Conservatory, on the east side of the park north of the 72nd Street entrance, and both casual snacks and more sophisticated New American dining at The Boat House, on the lake near 72nd Street and Park Drive North (☎ 212/517-2233).

GUIDED WALKS The Central Park Conservancy offers a slate of free walking tours of the park; call ☎ 212/360-2726 or check www.centralparknyc.org for the current schedule (click on the “Walking Tours” button on the left). The Dana Center hosts ranger-guided tours on occasion (call ☎ 212/860-1370 or 800/201-PARK for a schedule). Also consider a private walking tour; many of the companies listed in “Organized Sightseeing Tours,” below, offer guided tours of the park.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION Call the main number at ☎ 212/360-3444 for recorded information, or 212/310-6600 or 212/628-1036 to speak to a live person. Call ☎ 888/NY-PARKS for special events information. The park also has two comprehensive websites that are worth checking out before you go: The city parks department’s site at www.centralpark.org, and the Central Park Conservancy’s site at www.centralparknyc.org, both of which feature excellent maps and a far more complete rundown of park attractions and activities than I have room to include here. If you have an emergency in the park, dial ☎ 800/201-PARK, which will link you directly to the park rangers.

SAFETY TIP Even though the park has the lowest crime rate of any of the city’s precincts, keep your wits about you, especially in the more remote northern end. It’s a good idea to avoid the park entirely after dark, unless you’re heading to one of the restaurants for dinner or to a Shakespeare in the Park event.

EXPLORING THE PARK

The best way to see Central Park is to wander along its 58 miles of winding pedestrian paths, keeping in mind the following highlights.

Before starting, stop by the Information Center in the Dairy (☎ 212/794-6464; daily 11am–5pm, to 4pm in winter), midpark in a 19th-century-style building overlooking Wollman Rink at about 65th Street, to get a map and other information on sights and events, and to peruse the kid-friendly exhibit on the park's history and design.

GOING TO THE ZOO

Central Park Zoo/Tisch Children's Zoo ★ (Kids) Here is a pleasant refuge within a refuge where sea lions frolic in the central pool area with beguiling style, gigantic but graceful polar bears glide back and forth across a watery pool that has glass walls through which you can observe very large paws doing smooth strokes, monkeys seem to regard those on the other side of the fence with disdain, and in the hot and humid Tropic Zone, colorful birds swoop around in freedom, sometimes landing next to nonplused visitors.

Because of its small size, the zoo is at its best with its displays of smaller animals. The indoor multilevel Tropic Zone is a highlight, its steamy rainforest home to everything from black-and-white colobus monkeys to Emerald tree boa constrictors to a leaf-cutter ant farm; look for the new dart-poison-frog exhibit, which is very cool. So is the large penguin enclosure in the Polar Circle, which is better than the one at San Diego's SeaWorld. In the Temperate Territory, look for the Asian red pandas (cousins to the big black-and-white ones), which look like the world's most beautiful raccoons. Despite their pool and piles of ice, however, the polar bears still look sad.

The entire zoo is good for short attention spans; you can cover the whole thing in 1½ to 3 hours, depending on the size of the crowds and how long you like to linger. It's also very kid-friendly, with lots of well-written and -illustrated placards that older kids can understand. For the littlest ones, there's the $6-million Tisch Children's Zoo ★. With goats, llamas, potbellied pigs, and more, this petting zoo and playground is a real blast for the 5-and-under set.

830 Fifth Ave. (at 64th St., just inside Central Park). ☎ 212/439-6500. www.wcs.org/zoos. Admission $8 adults, $4 seniors, $3 children 3–12, free for children under 3. Summer hours (Apr–Oct) weekdays 10am–5pm, weekends 10am–5:30pm; winter hours (Nov–Mar) daily 10am–4:30pm. Last entrance 30 min. before closing. Subway: N, R to Fifth Ave.

ACTIVITIES

The 6-mile rolling road circling the park, Central Park Drive, has a lane set aside for bikers, joggers, and in-line skaters. The best time to use it is when the park is closed to traffic: Monday to Friday 10am to 3pm (except Thanksgiving to New Year's) and 7 to 10pm. It's also closed from 7pm Friday to 6am Monday, but when the weather is nice, the crowds can be hellish.

BIKING Off-road biking isn't permitted; stay on Central Park Drive or your bike may be confiscated by park police.

You can rent 3- and 10-speed bikes as well as tandems in Central Park at the Loeb Boathouse, midpark near 72nd Street and Park Drive North, just in from Fifth Avenue (☎ 212/517-2233 or 212/517-3623), for $9 to $15 an hour, with a complete selection of kids' bikes, cruisers, tandems, and the like ($200 deposit required); at Metro Bicycles, 1311 Lexington Ave., at 88th Street (☎ 212/427-4450), for about $7 an hour, or $35 a day; and at Toga Bike Shop, 110 West End Ave., at 64th Street (☎ 212/799-9625; www.togabikes.com), for $30 a day. No matter where you rent, be prepared to leave a credit-card deposit.

BOATING From March through November, gondola rides and rowboat rentals are available at the Loeb Boathouse, midpark near 74th Street and Park Drive North, just in from Fifth Avenue (☎ 212/517-2233 or 212/517-3623). Rowboats cost $10 for the first hour, $2.50 for every 15 minutes thereafter, and a $30 deposit is required; reservations are accepted. (Note that rates were not set for the summer season at press time, so these may change.)

HORSE-DRAWN CARRIAGE RIDES At the entrance to the park at 59th Street and Central Park South, you'll see a line of horse-drawn carriages waiting to take passengers through the park or along certain city streets. Horses belong on city streets as much as chamber pots belong in our homes. You won't need me to tell you how forlorn most of these horses look; if you insist, a ride is about $50 for two for a half-hour, but I suggest skipping it.

ICE-SKATING Central Park's Wollman Rink ❄️, on the east side of the park between 62nd and 63rd streets (☎ 212/439-6900; www.wollmanskatingrink.com), is the city's best outdoor skating spot, more spacious than the rink at Rockefeller Center. It's open for skating from mid-October to mid-April, depending on the weather. Rates are $9.50 for adults ($12 on weekends), $4.75 for seniors and kids under 12 ($8.25 on weekends), and skate rental is $5; lockers are available (locks are $3.75). Lasker Rink ☎ 212/534-7639, on the east side around 106th Street, is a less expensive alternative to the more crowded Wollman Rink. Open November through March, rates are $4.50 for adults, $2.25 for kids under 12, and skate rental is $4.75.

IN-LINE SKATING Central Park is the city's most popular place for blading. See the beginning of this section for details on Central Park Drive, the main drag for skaters. On weekends, head to West Drive at 67th Street, behind Tavern on the Green, where you'll find trick skaters weaving through a New York Roller Skating Association (NYRSA) slalom course, or to the Mall in front of the band shell (above Bethesda Fountain) for twirling to tunes. In summer, Wollman Rink ♠ converts to a hotshot roller rink, with half-pipes and lessons available. (See "Ice-Skating," above.)

You can rent skates for $20 a day from Blades Board and Skate, 120 W. 72nd St., between Broadway and Columbus Avenue (☎ 212/787-3911; www.blades.com). Wollman Rink (see above) also rents in-line skates for park use at similar rates.

PLAYGROUNDS Nineteen Adventure Playgrounds are scattered throughout the park, perfect for jumping, sliding, tottering, swinging, and digging. At Central Park West and 81st Street is the Diana Ross Playground ♠, voted the city's best by New York magazine. Also on the west side is the Spector Playground, at 85th Street and Central Park West, and, a little farther north, the Wild West Playground, at 93rd Street. On the east side is the Rustic Playground, at 67th Street and Fifth Avenue, a delightfully landscaped space rife with islands, bridges, and big slides; and the Pat Hoffman Friedman Playground, right behind the Metropolitan Museum of Art at East 79th Street, is geared toward older toddlers.

RUNNING Marathoners and wannabes regularly run in Central Park along the 6-mile Central Park Drive, which circles the park (please run toward oncoming traffic to avoid being mowed down by wayward cyclists and in-line skaters, who go with the flow of traffic). The New York Road Runners (☎ 212/860-4455; www.nyrrc.org), organizers of the New York City Marathon, schedules group runs 7 days a week at 6am and 6pm, leaving from the entrance to the park at 90th Street and Fifth Avenue.

SWIMMING The only pool in Central Park, Lasker Pool (on the east side at around 106th Street; ☎ 212/534-7639), is open July 1 through Labor Day weekend. Rates are $4 for adults, $2 for kids under 12. Bring a towel.

6 Organized Sightseeing Tours

Reservations are required for some of the tours below, but even if they're not, call ahead to confirm prices, times, and meeting places.

DOUBLE-DECKER BUS TOURS

Gray Line New York Tours Gray Line offers just about every sightseeing tour option and combination you could want. There are bus tours by day and night that run uptown, downtown, and all around the town, as well as bus combos with Circle Line cruises, helicopter flights, museum admittance, and guided visits of sights. There's no real point to purchasing some combination tours—you don't need a guide to take you to the Statue of Liberty, and you don't save any money on admission by buying the combo ticket.

777 Eighth Ave. (btwn 47th & 48th sts.). Tours depart from additional Manhattan locations. ☎ 800/669-0051 or 212/445-0848. www.graylinenewyork.com. Hop-on, hop-off bus tours from $49 adults, $39 children 5–11.

HARBOR CRUISES

Circle Line Sightseeing Cruises ⚓⚓ A New York institution, the Circle Line is famous for its 3-hour tour around the entire 35 miles of Manhattan. This Full Island cruise passes by the Statue of Liberty, Ellis Island, the Brooklyn Bridge, the United Nations, Yankee Stadium, the George Washington Bridge, and more, including Manhattan's wild northern tip. The panorama is riveting, and the commentary isn't bad. The big boats are basic but fine, with lots of deck room for everybody to enjoy the view. Snacks, soft drinks, coffee, and beer are available onboard for purchase.

If 3 hours is more than you or the kids can handle, go for either the 2-hour Semi-Circle or the Sunset/Harbor Lights cruise, both of which show you the highlights of the skyline. There's also a 1-hour Seaport Liberty version that sticks close to the south end of the island. But of all the tours, the kids might like The Beast best, a thrill-a-minute speedboat ride offered in summer only.

In addition, a number of adults-only Live Music and DJ Cruises sail regularly from the seaport from May through September ($20–$40 per person). Depending on the night of the week, you can groove to the sounds of jazz, Latin, gospel, dance tunes, or blues as you sail along viewing the skyline.

Departing from Pier 83, at W. 42nd St. & Twelfth Ave. Also departing from Pier 16 at South St. Seaport, 207 Front St. ☎ 212/563-3200. www.circleline42.com and www.seaportmusiccruises.com. Sightseeing cruises $12–$29 adults, $16–$24 seniors, $13–$16 children 12 and under. Subway to Pier 83: A, C, E to 42nd St. Subway to Pier 16: J, M, Z, 2, 3, 4, 5 to Fulton St.

New York Waterway ★★ New York Waterway, the nation's largest privately held ferry service and cruise operator, like Circle Line, also does the 35-mile trip around Manhattan, but does it in 2 hours, taking in all the same sights. They also offer a staggering amount of different sightseeing options, including a very good 90-minute New York Harbor Cruise, a Romantic Twilight Cruise, a Friday Dance Party Cruise, and Baseball Cruises to Yankee games.

Departing from 38th St. Ferry Terminal, at W. 38th St. & Twelfth Ave. ☎ 800/533-3779. www.nywaterway.com. Sightseeing cruises $22 adults, $18 seniors, $12 children. Free bus transportation from 57th, 49th, 42nd, and 34th sts. to 38th St. Terminal; you can flag down any of the big red buses labeled NY WATERWAY or wait at any of the bus stops along those streets.

SPECIALTY TOURS

The Municipal Art Society ★ (☎ 212/439-1049 or 212/935-3960; www.mas.org) offers historical and architectural walking tours aimed at intelligent, individualistic travelers. Each is led by a highly qualified guide who offers insights into the significance of buildings, neighborhoods, and history. Topics range from the urban history of Greenwich Village to “Williamsburg: Beyond the Bridge,” to an examination of the “new” Times Square. Weekday walking tours are $12; weekend tours are $15. Reservations may be required depending on the tour, so it's best to call ahead. The full schedule is available online or by calling ☎ 212/439-1049.

The 92nd Street Y ★ (☎ 212/415-5500; www.92ndsty.org) offers a wonderful variety of walking and bus tours, many featuring funky themes or behind-the-scenes visits. Subjects can range from “Diplomat for a Day at the U.N.” to “Secrets of the Chelsea Hotel,” or from “Artists of the Meat-Packing District” to “Jewish Harlem.” Prices range from $25 to $60 (sometimes more for bus tours), but many include ferry rides, afternoon tea, dinner, or whatever suits the program. Guides are well-chosen experts on their subjects, ranging from respected historians to an East Village poet, mystic, and art critic (for “Allen Ginsberg's New York” and “East Village Night Spots”), and many routes travel into the outer boroughs; some day trips even reach beyond the city. Advance registration is required for all walking and bus tours. Schedules are planned a few months in advance, so check the website for tours that might interest you.

All tours from Joyce Gold History Tours of New York ★★ (☎ 212/242-5762; www.nyctours.com) are offered by Joyce Gold herself, an instructor of Manhattan history at New York University and the New School for Social Research, who has been conducting history walks around New York since 1975. Her tours can really cut to the core of this town; Joyce is full of fascinating stories about Manhattan and its people. Tours are arranged around themes like “The Colonial Settlers of Wall Street,” “The Genius and Elegance of Gramercy Park,” “Downtown Graveyards,” “The Old Jewish Lower East Side,” “Historic Harlem,” and “TriBeCa: The Creative Explosion.” Tours are offered most weekends March to December and last from 2 to 3 hours, and the price is $15 per person; reservations are not required. Private tours can be arranged year-round, either for individuals or groups.

Myra Alpersen, founder and lead tour guide for NoshWalks (© 212/222-2243; www.noshwalks.com), knows food in New York City and where to find it. For the past 6 years, Alpersen has been leading hungry walkers to some of the city’s most delicious neighborhoods. From the Uzbek, Tadjik, and Russian markets of Rego Park, Queens; to the Dominican coffee shops of Washington Heights in upper Manhattan, Alpersen has left no ethnic neighborhood unexplored. Tours are held on Saturday and Sunday, leaving around 11:30am and 2:30pm. The preferred means of transport is subway; tours last around 3 hours and cost about $33 not including the food you will undoubtedly buy on the tour. Space is limited, so book well in advance.

Harlem Spirituals (© 800/660-2166 or 212/391-0900; www.harlemspirituals.com) specializes in gospel and jazz tours of Harlem that can be combined with a traditional soul-food meal. A variety of options are available, including a tour of Harlem sights with gospel service and a soul-food lunch or brunch as an optional add-on. The Harlem jazz tour includes a neighborhood tour, dinner at a family-style soul-food restaurant, and a visit to a local jazz club; there’s also an Apollo Theater variation on this tour. Bronx and Brooklyn tours are also an option for those who want a taste of the outer boroughs. Prices start at $49, $39 for children, for a Harlem Heritage tour, and go up from there based on length and inclusions (tours that include food and entertainment are pay-one-price). All tours leave from Harlem Spirituals’ Midtown office (690 Eighth Ave., between 43rd and 44th sts.), and transportation is included.

Active visitors can hook up with Bike the Big Apple (© 201/837-1133; www.bikethebigapple.com). Tours by Bike offers guided half-day, full-day, and customized tours through a variety of city neighborhoods, including the fascinating but little-explored upper Manhattan and Harlem; an ethnic tour that takes you over the legendary Brooklyn Bridge, through Chinatown and Little Italy, and to Ground Zero; and around Flushing, Queens, where you’ll feel like you’re biking around Hong Kong. You don’t have to be an Ironman candidate to participate; tours are designed for the average rider, with an emphasis on safety and fun; shorter rides are available, but the rides generally last around 5 hours. Tours are offered year-round; prices run $65 to $75 and include all gear, including the bike.

Inside CNN Take the 45-minute guided tour of CNN studios in the Time Warner Center, 10 Columbus Circle (📞 866/4CNNYC; www.cnn.com/insidecnn), and learn a little about the newsgathering process. The tour includes views of three of CNN's working studios, demonstrations, and hands-on use of television technology. The tour costs $15 for adults, $14 for seniors, $11 for children 4 to 18, and are free for children 3 and under.

7 Highlights of the Outer Boroughs

THE BRONX

Bronx Zoo Wildlife Conservation Park ★★ ★ (Kids) Founded in 1899, the Bronx Zoo is the largest metropolitan animal park in the United States, with more than 4,000 animals living on 265 acres, and one of the city's best attractions.

One of the most impressive exhibits is the Wild Asia Complex. This zoo-within-a-zoo comprises the Wild Asia Plaza education center; Jungle World, an indoor re-creation of Asian forests, with birds, lizards, gibbons, and leopards; and the Bengali Express Monorail (open May–Oct), which takes you on a narrated ride high above free-roaming Siberian tigers, Asian elephants, Indian rhinoceroses, and other nonnative New Yorkers (keep your eyes peeled—the animals aren't as interested in seeing you). The Himalayan Highlands is home to 17 extremely rare snow leopards, as well as red pandas and white-naped cranes. The 6½-acre Congo Gorilla Forest is home to Western lowland gorillas, okapi, red river hogs, and other African rainforest animals.

The Children's Zoo (open Apr–Oct) allows young humans to learn about their wildlife counterparts. If the natural settings and breeding programs aren't enough to keep zoo residents entertained, they can always choose to ogle the two million annual visitors. But there are ways to beat the crowds. Try to visit on a weekday or on a nice winter's day. In summer, come early in the day, before the heat of the day sends the animals back into their enclosures. Expect to spend an entire day here—you'll need it.

Getting there: Liberty Lines' BxM11 express bus, which makes various stops on Madison Avenue, will take you directly to the zoo; call 📞 718/652-8400. By subway, take the no. 2 train to Pelham Parkway and then walk west to the Bronxdale entrance.

Fordham Rd. & Bronx River Pkwy., the Bronx. ☎ 718/367-1010. www.bronxzoo.com. Admission $14 adults, $12 seniors and $10 for children 2–12; discounted admission Nov–Mar; free Wed year-round. There may be nominal additional charges for some exhibits. Nov–Mar daily 10am–4:30pm (extended hours for Holiday Lights late Nov to early Jan); Apr–Oct Mon–Fri 10am–5pm, Sat–Sun 10am–5:30pm. Transportation: See “Getting there,” above.

New York Botanical Garden ★ A National Historic Landmark, the 250-acre New York Botanical Garden was founded in 1891 and today, is one of America’s foremost public gardens. The setting is spectacular—a natural terrain of rocky outcroppings, a river with cascading waterfalls, hills, ponds, and wetlands.

Highlights of the Botanical Garden include the 27 specialty gardens, an exceptional orchid collection, and 40 acres of uncut forest, as close as New York gets to its virgin state before the arrival of Europeans. The Enid A. Haupt Conservatory, a stunning series of Victorian glass pavilions that recall London’s former Crystal Palace, shelters a rich collection of tropical, subtropical, and desert plants as well as seasonal flower shows. There’s also a Children’s Adventure Garden. Getting there: Take Metro-North (☎ 800/METRO-INFO or 212/532-4900; www.mta.nyc.ny.us/mnr) from Grand Central Terminal to the New York Botanical Garden station; the easy ride takes about 20 minutes. By subway, take the D or 4 train to Bedford Park, then take bus Bx26 or walk southeast on Bedford Park Boulevard for 8 long blocks.

200th St. & Kazimiroff Blvd., the Bronx. ☎ 718/817-8700. www.nybg.org. Admission $3 adults, $2 seniors and students, $1 children 2–12. Extra charges for Everett Children’s Adventure Garden, Enid A. Haupt Conservatory, T. H. Everett Rock Garden, Native Plant Garden, and narrated tram tour; entire Garden Passport package $13 adults, $11 seniors and students, $5 children 2–12. Apr–Oct Tues–Sun and Mon holidays 10am–6pm; Nov–Mar Tues–Sun and Mon holidays 10am–5pm. Transportation: See “Getting there,” above.

BROOKLYN

It’s easy to link visits to the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, the Brooklyn Museum of Art, and Prospect Park, since they’re all an easy walk from one another, just off Grand Army Plaza. Designed by Frederick Law Olmsted and Calvert Vaux as a grand entrance to their Prospect Park, it boasts a Civil War memorial arch designed by John H. Duncan (1892–1901) and the main Brooklyn Public Library, an Art Deco masterpiece completed in 1941 (the garden and museum are just on the other side of the library, down Eastern Pkwy.). The entire area is a half-hour subway ride from midtown Manhattan.

Brooklyn Botanic Garden ★ Just down the street from the Brooklyn Museum of Art (see below) is the most popular botanic garden in the city. This peaceful 52-acre sanctuary is at its most spectacular in May when the thousands of deep pink blossoms of cherry trees are abloom. Well worth seeing is the spectacular Cranford Rose Garden, one of the largest and finest in the country; the Shakespeare Garden, an English garden featuring plants mentioned in his writings; a Children's Garden; the Osborne Garden, a 3-acre formal garden; the Fragrance Garden, designed for the blind but appreciated by all noses; and the extraordinary Japanese Hill-and-Pond Garden. The renowned C. V. Starr Bonsai Museum is home to the world's oldest and largest collection of bonsai, while the impressive $2.5-million Steinhardt Conservatory holds the garden's extensive indoor plant collection.

900 Washington Ave. (at Eastern Pkwy.), Brooklyn. ☎ 718/623-7200. www.bbg.org. Admission $5 adults, $3 seniors and students, free for children under 16, free to all Tues and Sat 10am–noon year-round, plus Wed–Fri from mid-Nov through Feb. Apr–Sept Tues–Fri 8am–6pm, Sat–Sun 10am–6pm; Oct–Mar Tues–Fri 8am–4:30pm, Sat–Sun 10am–4:30pm. Subway: Q to Prospect Park; 2, 3 to Eastern Pkwy./Brooklyn Museum.

Brooklyn Museum of Art ★★ One of the nation's premier art institutions, the Brooklyn Museum of Art rocketed back into public consciousness in 1999 with the hugely controversial “Sensation: Young British Artists from the Saatchi Collection,” which drew international media attention and record crowds who came to see just what an artist—and a few conservative politicians—could make out of a little elephant dung.

Indeed, the museum is best known for its remarkable temporary exhibitions as well as its excellent permanent collection. The museum's grand Beaux Arts building, designed by McKim, Mead & White (1897), befits its outstanding holdings, most notably the Egyptian, Classical, and Ancient Middle Eastern collection of sculpture, wall reliefs, and mummies. The decorative-arts collection includes 28 American period rooms from 1675 to 1928 (the extravagant Moorish-style smoking room from John D. Rockefeller's 54th St. mansion is my favorite). Other highlights are the African and Asian arts galleries, dozens of works by Rodin, a good costumes and textiles collection, and a diverse collection of American and European painting and sculpture that includes works by Homer, O'Keeffe, Monet, Cézanne, and Degas.

Spring 2007 brought the opening of the Elizabeth A. Sackler Center for Feminist Art, which will feature permanent and rotating exhibitions of art made by women. One of the prizes of the collection is Judy Chicago's famous “The Dinner Party.”

200 Eastern Pkwy. (at Washington Ave.), Brooklyn. ☎ 718/638-5000. www.brooklynmuseum.org. Suggested admission $8 adults, $4 seniors and students, free for children under 12, free to all 1st Sat of the month 11am–11pm. Wed–Fri 10am–5pm; 1st Sat of the month 11am–11pm, each Sat thereafter 11am–6pm; Sun 11am–6pm. Subway: 2, 3 to Eastern Pkwy./Brooklyn Museum.

Coney Island ★★ Sure, Coney Island is just a shell of what it was in its heyday in the early 20th century. But it's that shell and what remains that make it such an intriguing attraction. The almost mythical Parachute Jump, refurbished, though long inoperable, stands as a monument to Coney Island. But this is not a dead amusement park; Astroland, home of the famed Cyclone roller coaster, has some great rides; though 2007 was supposed to be its last season. (There's some squabbling going on between the new landlords and the city and the attraction owners.) The new owners will keep the Cyclone, however, and the Wonder Wheel, next door at Deno's will still be in operation. The best amusement of all is the people-watching. Maybe because it is at the extreme edge of New York City, but Coney Island attracts more than its share of the odd, freaky, and funky. It's here where Nathan's Famous Hot Dogs holds its annual hot-dog-eating contest on July 4 at noon; where the entertaining Mermaid Parade spoofs the old bathing-beauty parades (late June); and where members of the Polar Bear Swim Club show their masochistic gusto by taking a plunge into the icy ocean on January 1. The best time to visit is between Memorial Day and mid-September, when the rides and amusement park are open. Bring your bathing suit and test the waters.

If you are here in the summer, or even if you are not, I recommend a visit to Coney Island just to see it and you can always visit the Coney Island Museum, 1208 Surf Ave. (☎ 718/372-5159; www.coneyisland.com). Open Saturdays and Sundays year round, you will find relics from Coney Island's heyday as the premier amusement park in the world. Check out an original "steeplechase horse," vintage bumper cars, or fun-house distortion mirrors. And for a mere 99¢, even if all you want to do is use the clean bathroom, the museum is a bargain. Subway: D, F, N, Q to Coney Island–Stillwell Ave., Brooklyn.

New York Aquarium (Kids) Because of the long subway ride (about an hour from midtown Manhattan) and its proximity to Coney Island, it's best to combine the two attractions, preferably in the summer. This small but good aquarium is home to hundreds of sea creatures. Taking center stage are Atlantic bottle-nosed dolphins and California sea lions that perform daily during summer at the Aquatheater. Also in the spotlight are Pacific octopuses, sharks, and a brand-new seahorse exhibit. Black-footed penguins, California sea otters, and a variety of seals live at the Sea Cliffs exhibit, a re-creation of a Pacific coastal habitat. But my favorites are the beautiful Beluga whales, which exude buckets of aquatic charm. Children love the hands-on exhibits at Discovery Cove. There's an indoor oceanview cafeteria and an outdoor snack bar, plus picnic tables.

502 Surf Ave. (at W. 8th St.), Coney Island, Brooklyn. ☎ 718/265-3400. www.nyaquarium.com. Admission $12 adults, $8 seniors and children 2–12. Daily 10am–5:30pm. Subway: D, F, N, Q to Coney Island–Stillwell Ave., Brooklyn.

8 Shopping Highlights

CHINATOWN

Don't expect to find the purchase of a lifetime on Chinatown's crowded streets, but there's some quality browsing to be done. The fish and herbal markets along Canal, Mott, Mulberry, and Elizabeth streets are fun for their bustle and exotica. Dispersed among them (especially along Canal St.), you'll find a mind-boggling collection of knockoff sunglasses and watches, cheap backpacks, discount leather goods, and exotic souvenirs. It's a fun daytime browse, but don't expect quality—and be sure to bargain.

Mott Street, between Pell Street and Chatham Square, boasts the most interesting of Chinatown's off-Canal shopping, with an antiques shop or two dispersed among the tiny storefronts selling blue-and-white Chinese dinnerware. Just around the corner, peek into Ting's Gift Shop (18 Doyer St.; ☎ 212/962-1081), one of the oldest operating businesses in Chinatown. Under a vintage pressed-tin ceiling, it sells good-quality Chinese toys, kits, and lanterns.

THE LOWER EAST SIDE

The bargains aren't what they used to be in the Historic Orchard Street Shopping District—which runs from Houston to Canal along Allen, Orchard, and Ludlow streets, spreading outward along both sides of Delancey Street—but prices on leather bags, luggage, linens, and fabrics on the bolt are still good. Be aware, though, that the hard sell on Orchard Street can be hard to take. Still, the district is a nice place to discover a part of New York that's disappearing. Come during the week; many stores are Jewish-owned and close Friday afternoon and all day Saturday. Sunday tends to be a madhouse.

The artists and other trendsetters who have been turning this neighborhood into a bastion of hip have also added a cutting edge to its shopping scene in recent years. You'll find a growing—and increasingly upscale—crop of alterna-shops south of Houston and north of Grand Street, between Allen and Clinton streets to the east and west, specializing in up-to-the-minute fashions and club clothes for 20-somethings, plus funky retro furnishings, Japanese toys, and other offbeat items. Before you browse, stop in at the Lower East Side Visitor Center, 261 Broome St., between Orchard and Allen streets (☎ 866/224-0206 or 212/226-9010; subway: F to Delancey St.), for a shopping guide that includes vendors both old and new. Or you can preview the list online at www.lowereastsideny.com.

SOHO

People love to complain about super-fashionable SoHo—it's become too trendy, too tony, too Mall of America. True, J. Crew is only one of the big names that have supplanted the artists' lofts that used to inhabit its historic buildings. But SoHo is still one of the best shopping 'hoods in the city—and few are more fun to browse. The cast-iron architecture, the cobblestone streets, and the rich-artist vibe: SoHo has a look and feel unlike any other Manhattan neighborhood.

SoHo's shopping grid runs from Broadway west to Sixth Avenue, and Houston Street south to Canal Street. Broadway is the most commercial strip, with such recognizable names as Pottery Barn, Banana Republic, Sephora, and A/X Armani Exchange. H&M, the popular Swedish department store with cutting-edge fashions sold at unbelievably low prices, has two stores that face one another on Broadway. Bloomingdale's has opened up a downtown branch in the old Canal Jean space. Prada's flagship store, also on Broadway, is worth visiting for its spacious, almost soothing design alone (by Dutch architect Rem Koolhaas). A definite highlight is the two-story Pearl River Chinese emporium, which offers everything from silk cheongsam (traditional Chinese high-necked dresses) to teaware.

The big names in avant-garde fashion have landed in SoHo, but you'll also find one-of-a-kind boutiques, such as the Hat Shop, 120 Thompson St., between Prince and Spring streets (☎ 212/219-1445), a full-service milliner for women that also features plenty of off-the-rack toppers, plus shoe stores galore and high-end home design and housewares boutiques.

NOLITA

Not so long ago, Elizabeth Street was a quiet adjunct to Little Italy. Today it's one of the hottest shopping strips in the neighborhood known as Nolita. Elizabeth and neighboring Mott and Mulberry streets are dotted with an increasing number of shops between Houston Street and the Bowery. It's an easy walk from the Broadway/Lafayette stop on the F, V line to the neighborhood, since it starts just east of Lafayette Street; you can take the no. 6 train to Spring Street, or the N, R to Prince Street, and walk east from there.

Nolita is the stepchild of SoHo—meaning don't expect cheap. Its wall-to-wall boutiques are largely the province of shopkeepers specializing in high-quality fashion-forward products. More and more, it's become a beacon of ethnic designs from around the world. Indomix (232 Mulberry St.; ☎ 212/334-6356; www.indomix.com) offers beaded tunics and other colorful south-Asian styles by five top designers in India. Texan-born designer and skateboarder Tracy Feith (209 Mulberry St.; ☎ 212/334-3097) creates irresistibly pretty slip dresses, skirts, and tops in eye-popping colors and light-as-air Indian silk in his eponymous store on Mulberry Street.

Nolita is also an accessories bonanza; stop in at Sigerson Morrison (20 Prince St.; ☎ 212/219-3893 for great shoes or Push (240 Mulberry St.; ☎ 212/965-9699) for eye-catching jewelry.

THE EAST VILLAGE

The East Village personifies bohemian hip, though many New Yorkers would argue that SoHo's gentrification has engulfed this refuge for alternative purists. The easiest subway access is the no. 6 train to Astor Place.

East 9th Street between Second Avenue and Avenue A is lined with an increasingly smart collection of boutiques, proof that the East Village isn't just for kids anymore. Designers, including Jill Anderson (331 E. 9th St.; ☎ 212/253-1747) and Huminska (315 E. 9th St.; ☎ 212/677-3458) sell excellent-quality and original fashions for women along here.

If it's strange, illegal, or funky, it's probably available on St. Marks Place, which takes over for 8th Street, running east from Third Avenue to Avenue A. This strip is a permanent street market, with countless T-shirt and boho jewelry stands. The height of the action is between Second and Third. If you're in search of the harder-edge East Village and feeling a little brave, explore the side streets closer to Avenue A and southward toward the Bowery.

GREENWICH VILLAGE

The West Village is great for shopping. Specialty bookstores and record stores, antiques and craft shops, and gourmet food markets dominate. On 8th Street—NYU territory between Broadway and Sixth Avenue—you can find trendy footwear and fashions.

Tips Additional Sources for Serious Shoppers

If you're looking for specific items, check the shopping listings at www.newyork.citysearch.com, www.timeoutny.com, and www.nymetro.com before you leave home.

For an online guide to sample sales/designer bargains, visit www.nysale.com, which will let you in on unadvertised sales taking place throughout the city.

Information about current sales, new shops, sample and close-out sales, and arts, crafts, and antiques shows is found in the "Check Out" section of Time Out New York or the "Sales & Bargains," "Best Bets," and "Smart City" sections of New York magazine. New York also runs daily updates of sales at www.nymag.com, and Time Out publishes a twice-yearly shopping guide available on newsstands for about $6.

Other Web sources include www.dailycandy.com, a daily online newsletter highlighting store openings and where to find the day's sales, and www.girlshop.com, a website dedicated to New York insider fashion news. In 2005, the flagship Girlshop Boutique opened at 819 Washington St., between Little W. 12th and Gansevoort sts.; (☎ 212/255-4985).

But the biggest shopping boom of late has happened on Bleecker Street west of Sixth Avenue. Between Carmine Street and Seventh Avenue, foodies will delight in the strip of boutique food shops, including Amy's Bread, Wild Edibles, and Murray's Cheese (in a large new space). In between are record stores, guitar shops, and a sprinkling of artsy boutiques. On Christopher Street, the center of Village gay life, you'll find wonders like Aedes De Venutas, a gorgeous boutique selling fabulous perfumes and scented candles that are difficult to find in the States, and The Porcelain Room, 13 Christopher St. (☎ 212/367-8206), which is located below street level and offers amazing antique and contemporary porcelains that have to be seen to be believed. The Oscar Wilde Bookshop, the world's first gay bookstore has been situated on the sleepy eastern end of Christopher Street since 1967. Follow Christopher Street westward where Bleecker becomes boutique alley and one jewel box of a shop follows another. Among them: Intermix, Olive & Bette, Ralph Lauren, Lulu Guinness, and Marc Jacobs.

(Tips) Sales Tax

New York City sales tax is 8.375%, but it is not added to clothing and footwear items under $110. If you're visiting from out of state, consider having your purchases shipped directly home to avoid paying sales tax. As with any shipped purchase, be sure to get documentation of the sale and keep those receipts handy until the merchandise arrives at your door.

Those who love to browse should also wander west of Seventh Avenue and along Hudson Street, where charming shops such as House of Cards and Curiosities, 23 Eighth Ave., between Jane and 12th streets (☎ 212/675-6178), the Village's own funky take on an old-fashioned nickel-and-dime, are tucked among the brownstones.

CHELSEA/MEAT-PACKING DISTRICT

Almost overnight it seems, west Chelsea has been transformed into the Chelsea Art District, where more than 200 galleries have sprouted up in a once-moribund enclave of repair shops and warehouses. The district unofficially stretches from 14th to 29th streets and the West Side Highway and Seventh Avenue, but the high-density area lies between 20th and 26th streets between Tenth and Eleventh avenues.

The Meat-Packing District has also zoomed from quaint to hot (and some say over) in no time, with such big-name designers as Stella McCartney (429 W. 14th St.; ☎ 212/255-1556), Christian Louboutin (59 Horatio St.; ☎ 212/255-1910), and Alexander McQueen (417 W. 14th St.; ☎ 212/645-1797) in residence. Jeffrey New York, an offshoot of the Atlanta department store, has pricey designer clothes, an amazing shoe collection, and the friendliest staff in New York.

UNION SQUARE/THE FLATIRON DISTRICT

The hottest shopping/eating/hanging-out neighborhood in the city may be Union Square. The south side of the square is a mega-shopping area with Whole Foods, Filene's Basement, and DSW (Designer Shoe Warehouse). Just to the right is a Virgin Megastore. On the north side, Barnes & Noble is in a beautifully restored 1880 cast-iron building. Of course, the beating heart of Union Square is the 4-days-a-week Greenmarket, the biggest farmers' market in the city.

On Broadway, a few blocks north of Union Square, is the shopping emporium ABC Carpet & Home, where the loft-size floors hold decadent displays of furniture, housewares, linens (thread counts off the charts), and tchotchkes of all sizes and shapes.

Upscale retailers who have rediscovered the architectural majesty of lower Fifth Avenue include Banana Republic, Victoria's Secret, and Kenneth Cole. You won't find much that's new along here, but it's a pleasing stretch nonetheless.

When 23rd Street was the epitome of New York uptown fashion more than 100 years ago, the major department stores stretched along Sixth Avenue for about a mile from 14th Street up. These elegant stores stood in cast-iron buildings that were long ago abandoned and left to rust. In the last several years, the area has become a discount shopping center, with superstores and off-pricers filling up the renovated spaces: Filene's Basement, TJ Maxx, and Bed Bath & Beyond are all at 620 Sixth Ave., while Old Navy is next door, and Barnes & Noble is at Sixth Avenue near 22nd Street.

HERALD SQUARE & THE GARMENT DISTRICT

Herald Square—where 34th Street, Sixth Avenue, and Broadway converge—is dominated by Macy's (☎ 212/695-4400) the self-proclaimed “world's biggest department store.” At Sixth Avenue and 33rd Street is the Manhattan Mall (☎ 212/465-0500; www.manhattanmallny.com), home to standards like LensCrafters and RadioShack.

TIMES SQUARE & THE THEATER DISTRICT

You won't find much in the heart of Times Square to entice the serious shopper, since you can find most of the goods sold here back home. Among the best are Richard Branson's rollicking Virgin Megastore, and the fabulous Toys “R” Us flagship on Broadway and 44th Street, which even has its own full-scale Ferris wheel.

West 47th Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues is the city's famous Diamond District. The street is lined shoulder-to-shoulder with showrooms; and you'll be wheeling and dealing with the largely Hasidic dealers, who offer quite a juxtaposition to the crowds.

FIFTH AVENUE & 57TH STREET

The heart of Manhattan retail is the corner of Fifth Avenue and 57th Street. Time was, only the rich could shop these sacred crossroads. Such is not the case anymore, now that Tiffany & Co. (727 Fifth Ave.; ☎ 212/755-8000; www.tiffany.com), which has long reigned supreme here, sits a stone's throw from Niketown (6 E. 57th St.; ☎ 212/891-6453; <http://niketown.nike.com>) and the NBA Store (666 Fifth Ave.; ☎ 212/515-NBA1; www.nbastore.com). In addition, a good number of mainstream retailers, like Banana Republic, have flagships along Fifth, further democratizing the avenue. Still, you will find a number of big-name, big-ticket designers and jewelers radiating from the crossroads, as well as chichi department stores such as Bergdorf Goodman (754 Fifth Ave.; ☎ 212/753-7300) Henri Bendel (712 Fifth Ave.; ☎ 212/247-1100), and Saks Fifth Avenue (611 Fifth Ave.; ☎ 212/753-4000; www.saksfifthavenue.com), all of which help the avenue maintain its classy cachet.

A few blocks east on Lexington is the world's flagship Bloomingdale's, 1000 Third Ave. (Lexington Ave. at 59th St.; ☎ 212/705-2000; www.bloomingdales.com) and a great place to shop.

MADISON AVENUE

Madison Avenue from 57th to 79th streets boasts the most expensive retail real estate in the world. Bring lots of plastic. This ultradeluxe strip—particularly in the high 60s—is home to the most luxurious designer boutiques, with Barneys New York as the anchor. Don't be intimidated by the glamour or any of the celebrities you're likely to bump into. There are affordable treasures to be had, such as the Ginger Flower room spray at Shanghai Tang (714 Madison Ave.; ☎ 212/888-0111) or a pair of crystal cufflinks at the Lalique boutique next door at 712 Madison Ave. (☎ 212/355-6550).

UPPER WEST SIDE

The Upper West Side's best shopping street is Columbus Avenue. Small shops catering to the neighborhood's white-collar mix of young hipsters and families line both sides of the pleasant avenue from 66th Street (where you'll find an excellent branch of Barnes & Noble) to about 86th Street. Highlights include Maxilla & Mandible for museum-quality natural-science-based gifts and Harry's Shoes, but you won't lack for browsing along here. The Shops at Columbus Circle offer a world of upscale choices for shopping.

New York City After Dark

For the latest, most comprehensive nightlife listings, from theater and performing-arts to live rock, jazz, and dance-club coverage, Time Out New York (www.timeoutny.com) is my favorite weekly source; a new issue hits newsstands every Thursday. The free weekly Village Voice (www.villagevoice.com), is available late Tuesday downtown and early Wednesday in the rest of the city. Just about every live-music venue advertises here. The New York Times (www.nytoday.com) features terrific entertainment coverage, particularly in the two-part Friday “Weekend” section. Other great sources are the New Yorker (www.newyorker.com), in its “Goings on About Town” section; New York magazine (www.nymag.com) features the latest happenings in its “The Week” section.

Bar-hoppers shouldn’t pass up the comprehensive Shecky’s New York Bar, Club & Lounge Guide, printed annually. The website (www.sheckys.com) is even more current and offers updated nightlife news at the click of a button.

1 The Theater Scene

Nobody does theater better than New York. No other city—not even London—has a theater scene with so much breadth and depth, with so many wide-open alternatives. Broadway, of course, gets the most ink and the most airplay, and deservedly so. It’s where you’ll find the big stage productions, from crowd-pleasing warhorses like The Lion King to more recent hits like Jersey Boys. But today’s scene is thriving beyond the bounds of just Broadway—smaller, “alternative” theater has taken hold of the popular imagination, too. With bankable stars onstage, crowds lining up for hot tickets, and hits popular enough to generate major-label cast albums, Off-Broadway isn’t just for culture vultures anymore. (And Off-Off-Broadway is the cheapest theater in town, usually under $20 a ticket.)

I can’t tell you precisely what will be on while you’re in town, so check the publications listed at the start of this chapter or the websites listed in “Online Sources for Theatergoers & Performing-Arts

Fans,” below, to get an idea of what you might like to see. Another useful source is the Broadway Line (☎ 888/BROADWAY; www.livebroadway.com), where you can get details and descriptions on current Broadway shows, hear about special offers and discounts, and choose to be transferred to Telecharge or Ticketmaster to buy tickets. The recorded service NYC/Onstage (☎ 212/768-1818; www.tdf.org) provides the same kind of service for both Broadway and Off-Broadway productions.

WHEN YOU ARRIVE

Once you arrive in the city, getting your hands on tickets can take some street smarts—and failing those, cold hard cash. Even if it seems unlikely that seats are available, always call or visit the box office before attempting any other route. Single seats are often easiest to obtain, so people willing to sit apart from each other may find themselves in luck.

You can also try the Broadway Ticket Center, run by the League of American Theatres and Producers (the same people behind Live-Broadway.com) at the Times Square Visitors Center, 1560 Broadway, between 46th and 47th streets (Mon–Sat 10am–6pm; Sun 10am–3pm; hours subject to seasonal changes). They often have tickets available for otherwise sold-out shows, both for advance and same-day purchase, and only charge about $5 extra per ticket.

Even if saving money isn’t an issue for you, check the boards at the TKTS Booth in Times Square; more on that can be found under “Reduced-Price Ticket Deals,” below.

In addition, your hotel concierge may be able to arrange tickets for you. These are usually purchased through a broker and a premium will be attached, but they’re usually good seats and you can count on them being legitimate. (A $20 tip to the concierge for this service is reasonable—perhaps even more if the tickets are for an extremely hot show. By the time you’ve paid this tip, you might come out better by contacting a broker or ticket agency yourself.) If you want to deal with a licensed broker directly, Keith Prowse & Co. has a local office that accommodates drop-ins at 234 W. 44th St., between Seventh and Eighth avenues, Suite 1000 (☎ 800/223-6108; open Mon–Sat 9am–8pm; Sun noon–7pm).

If you buy from one of the scalpers selling tickets in front of the theater doors, you’re taking a risk. They may be perfectly legitimate—a couple from the ’burbs whose companions couldn’t make it for the evening, say—but they could be swindlers passing off fakes for big money. It’s a risk that’s not worth taking.

One preferred insiders' trick is to make the rounds of Broadway theaters at about 6pm, when unclaimed house seats are made available. These tickets—reserved for VIPs, friends of the cast, the press, and so forth—offer great locations and are sold at face value.

Also, Monday is often a good day to cop big-name show tickets. Though most theaters are dark on that day, some sought-after choices aren't. Locals are at home on the first night of the work week, so all the odds are in your favor. Your chances will always be better on weeknights, or for Wednesday matinees, rather than weekends.

REDUCED-PRICE TICKET DEALS

You may be able to purchase reduced-price theater tickets in advance over the phone (or in person at the box office) by joining one or more of the online theater clubs. Membership is free and can garner you discounts of up to 50% on select Broadway and Off-Broadway shows. For further details, see "Online Resources for Theatergoers & Performing-Arts Fans," below.

Broadway shows—even blockbusters—sometimes have a limited number of cheaper tickets set aside for students and seniors, or drawn by lottery before each show; call the box office to inquire.

The best deal in town on same-day tickets for both Broadway and Off-Broadway shows is at the Times Square Theatre Centre, better known as the TKTS booth run by the nonprofit Theatre Development Fund in the heart of the Theater District. At press time its Duffy Square home was undergoing renovation, and TKTS is camping outside the New York Marriott Marquis on 47th St. between Broadway and Eighth avenues. The new booth is set to open by the end of 2007. It's open 3–8pm for evening performances, 10am–2pm for Wed and Sat matinees, from 11am–8pm on Sun for all performances.

Tickets for that day's performances are usually offered at half price, with a few reduced 25%, plus a $2.50-per-ticket service charge. Boards outside the ticket windows list available shows; you're unlikely to find the newest hit, but most other shows turn up. Only cash and traveler's checks are accepted (no credit cards). There's often a huge line, so show up early for best availability and be prepared to wait. Visit www.tdf.org or call NYC/Onstage at ☎ 212/768-1818 and press "8" for the latest TKTS information.

ONLINE RESOURCES FOR THEATERGOERS & PERFORMING ARTS FANS

Some of your best, most comprehensive, and up-to-date information sources for what's going on about town are in cyberspace.

Broadway.com (www.broadway.com), Playbill Online (www.playbill.com or www.playbillclub.com), and TheaterMania (www.theatermania.com)—offer lots of information on Broadway and Off-Broadway shows, with links to buy tickets. Each offers an online theater club that's free to join and can yield substantial discounts—as much as 50%—on advance-purchase theater tickets for some shows. You can also sign up for their regular email blasts.

For information on Broadway shows, you can't beat LiveBroadway.com (www.livebroadway.com), the official website of Broadway, sponsored by the League of American Theatres and Producers.

2 Performing Arts: Major Concert Halls & Companies

Apollo Theater ★ Moments Built in 1914, this legendary Harlem theater launched or abetted the careers of countless musical icons—including Bessie Smith, Billie Holiday, Dinah Washington, Duke Ellington, Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan, Count Basie, and Aretha Franklin. And thousands lined the streets in December of 2006 to pay their last respects to the Godfather of Soul on the Apollo stage, the place where he performed some of the greatest shows of all time. In 1992 a $65-million restoration project was inaugurated which should be completed by 2009. The first phase—refurbishing the terra-cotta facade, a new box office, and a high-tech marquee retaining the original 1940s style and features—was unveiled in 2005. The theater remains open during the renovations and is still internationally renowned for its African-American acts of all musical genres, from hip-hop to Wynton Marsalis's "Jazz for Young People" events. Wednesday's "Amateur Night at the Apollo" is a loud, fun-filled night that draws in young talent from all over the country with high hopes of making it big. (A young Lauryn Hill started out here—and didn't win!) 253 W. 125th St. (btwn Adam Clayton Powell and Frederick Douglass boulevards). ☎ 212/531-5300 or 212/531-5301. www.apollotheater.com. Subway: 1 to 125th St.

Brooklyn Academy of Music Finds BAM is the city's most renowned contemporary-arts institution, presenting cutting-edge theater, opera, dance, and music. Offerings have included historically informed presentations of baroque opera by William Christie and Les Arts Florissants; pop opera from Lou Reed; Marianne Faithfull singing the music of Kurt Weill; dance by Mark Morris and Mikhail Baryshnikov; the Royal Dramatic Theater of Sweden directed by Ingmar Bergman; and many more experimental works by both renowned and lesser-known international artists as well as visiting companies from all over the world.

Of particular note is the Next Wave Festival, September through December, this country's foremost showcase for new experimental works. The BAM Rose Cinemas show first-run independent films, and there's free live music every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday night at BAMcafé, which can range from electronica by cornetist Graham Haynes to radical jazz from the Harold Rubin Trio to the tango band Tanguardia! ($10 food minimum). 30 Lafayette Ave. (off Flatbush Ave.), Brooklyn. ☎ 718/636-4100. www.bam.org. Subway: 2, 3, 4, 5, M, N, Q, R, W to Pacific St./Atlantic Ave.

Carnegie Hall ★★ Perhaps the world's most famous performance space (How do you get there?), Carnegie Hall offers everything from grand classics to the music of Ravi Shankar. The Isaac Stern Auditorium, the 2,804-seat main hall, welcomes orchestras from across the country and the world. Many of the world's premier soloists and ensembles give recitals. The legendary hall is both visually and acoustically brilliant; don't miss an opportunity to experience it if there's something on that interests you.

There's also the intimate 268-seat Weill Recital Hall, usually used to showcase chamber music and vocal and instrumental recitals. Carnegie Hall has also, after being occupied by a movie theater for 38 years, reclaimed the ornate underground 650-seat Zankel Concert Hall. 881 Seventh Ave. (at 57th St.). ☎ 212/247-7800. www.carnegiehall.org. Subway: N, Q, R, W to 57th St.

Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts New York is the world's premier performing-arts city, and Lincoln Center is its premier institution. Whenever you're planning an evening's entertainment, check the offerings here—which can include opera, dance, symphonies, jazz, theater, film, and more, from the classics to the contemporary. Lincoln Center's many buildings serve as permanent homes to their own companies as well as major stops for world-class performance troupes from around the globe.

Resident companies include the Metropolitan Opera (☎ 212/362-6000; www.metopera.org), with its full production of the classic repertory and a schedule packed with world-class grand sopranos and tenors; the Metropolitan Opera ranks first in the world.

The opera house also hosts the American Ballet Theatre (www.abt.org) each spring as well as visiting companies such as the Kirov, Royal, and Paris Opera ballets.

The New York State Theater (☎ 212/870-5570) is the home of the New York City Opera (www.nycopera.com) a superb company, that not only attempts to reach a wider audience than the Met with its more “human” scale and significantly lower prices, but it’s also committed to adventurous premieres, newly composed operas, and the occasional avant-garde work.

Symphony-wise, you’d be hard pressed to do better than the phenomenal New York Philharmonic ★ (☎ 212/875-5656; www.newyorkphilharmonic.org) performing at Avery Fisher Hall.

Other resident companies include: the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center (☎ 212/875-5788; www.chambermusicsociety.org), which performs at Alice Tully Hall or the Daniel and Joanna S. Rose Rehearsal Studio; the Film Society of Lincoln Center (☎ 212/875-5600; www.filmlinc.com), which screens a daily schedule of movies at the Walter Reade Theater and hosts annual film and video festivals as well as the Reel to Real program for kids, pairing silent screen classics with live performance; and the Lincoln Center Theater (☎ 212/362-7600; www.lct.org), which consists of the Vivian

Jazz at Lincoln Center Is Not Actually at Lincoln Center

Jazz at Lincoln Center can be found a few blocks south at the Time Warner Center at Broadway and 60th Street on Columbus Circle (☎ 212/258-9800; www.jalc.org). Though the move was downtown, it was definitely a move up. The complex on the fourth floor of Time Warner’s northern tower features two performance spaces, a jazz club, a mini jazz Hall of Fame, and a 7,000-square-foot atrium with views of Central Park. The largest of the venues is the Rose Theater, where you might see the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, led by Wynton Marsalis, performing the swing music of Thad Jones. Acoustics are perfect and seating is spacious. The glittering jewel of the Center is the Allen Room with its 4,500-square-foot glass backdrop behind the main stage offering glittering views of Central Park and the Manhattan night sky. Hard to believe that what was once played in smoky basements is now presented in venues as spectacular and opulent as these.

Also at Jazz at Lincoln Center is Dizzy’s Club Coca-Cola (☎ 212/258-9595; p. 184), a stylish, intimate jazz club that’s open every day.

Beaumont Theater, a modern venue with great sightlines that has been home to much good Broadway drama, and the Mitzi E. Newhouse Theater, a well-respected Off-Broadway house that has also boasted numerous triumphs.

Most of the companies' major seasons run from about September or October to April, May, or June. Special series like Great Performers and the new American Songbook, showcasing classic American show tunes, help round out the calendar. Indoor and outdoor events are held in warmer months: Summer kicks off with the JVC Jazz Festival in June; July sees Midsummer Night's Swing, with partner dancing, lessons, and music on the plaza; August's Mostly Mozart attracts talents like Alicia de Larrocha and André Watts; Lincoln Center Festival celebrates the best of the performing arts; Lincoln Center Out-of-Doors is a series of free alfresco music and dance performances; there's also the New York Film Festival, and more. Check the "New York City Calendar of Events" section in chapter 1, or Lincoln Center's website to see what special events will be on while you're in town.

Lincoln Center is also home to the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts (☎ 212/870-1630; www.nypl.org), which is now reopened after a major renovation.

Offered daily, 1-hour guided tours of Lincoln Center tell the story of the great performing-arts complex, and even offer glimpses of rehearsals; call ☎ 212/875-5350. 70 Lincoln Center Plaza (at Broadway & 64th St.). ☎ 212/546-2656 or 212/875-5456. www.lincolncenter.org. Subway: 1 to 66th St.

92nd Street Y Tisch Center for the Arts (Value This generously endowed community center offers a phenomenal slate of top-rated cultural happenings, from classical to folk to jazz to world music to cabaret to lyric theater and literary readings. Just because it's the Y, don't think this place is small potatoes: Great classical performers—Isaac Stern, Janos Starker, Nadja Salerno-Sonnenberg—give recitals here. In addition, the full concert calendar often includes luminaries such as Max Roach, John Williams, and Judy Collins; Jazz at the Y from Dick Hyman and guests; the long-standing Chamber Music at the Y series; the classical Music from the Jewish Spirit series; and regular cabaret programs. The lectures-and-literary-readings calendar is unparalleled, with featured speakers ranging from James Carville to the late David Halberstam to Ralph Nader to Katie Couric to Erica Jong to Ken Burns to Elie Wiesel to Alan Dershowitz to A. S. Byatt to . . . the list goes on and on. There's a regular schedule of modern

A Midsummer's Night in Central Park

Shakespeare in the Park, a New York institution since 1957, is as much a part of a New York summer as fireworks on the Fourth of July. The outdoor free event at the open-air Delacorte Theater in Central Park was the brainchild of the late Joseph Papp, former director of the Public Theater. Each summer usually features a revival of a Shakespeare play featuring a large company, including at least one or more "names" from film or television. Depending on the star power, tickets can be quite scarce.

The Delacorte Theater itself, next to Belvedere Castle near 79th Street and West Drive, is a dream—on a starry night, there's no better stage in town. Tickets are distributed at the theater free on a first-come, first-served basis (two per person) at 1pm on the day of the performance. The Delacorte might have 1,881 seats, but each is a hot commodity; whatever the show, people line up next to the theater 2 to 3 hours in advance (earlier if a big name is involved). You can also pick up same-day tickets between 1 and 3pm at the Public Theater, at 425 Lafayette St. For more information, call the Public Theater at ☎ 212/539-8500 or the Delacorte at ☎ 212/535-4284, or visit www.publictheater.org.

Free concerts by the New York Philharmonic and the Metropolitan Opera are held under the stars on Central Park's Great Lawn and in parks throughout the five boroughs. For schedules, call the Philharmonic at ☎ 212/875-5656 or the Metropolitan Opera at ☎ 212/362-6000. The Philharmonic lists its upcoming gigs at www.newyorkphilharmonic.org, under "Attend Concerts."

dance, too, through the Harkness Dance Project. Best of all, readings and lectures are usually priced between $20 and $30 for non-members, dance is usually $20, and concert tickets generally go for $15 to $50—half or a third of what you'd pay at comparable venues. Also, a full calendar of entertainment targeted to the culturally aware in their 20s and 30s—from poetry readings to film screenings to live music, including the debut of a young Norah Jones—is offered at the Upper West Side community center Makor. 1395

Lexington Ave. (at 92nd St.). ☎ 212/415-5500. www.92ndsty.org. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 86th St.; 6 to 96th St. Makor: 35 W. 67th St. ☎ 212/601-1000. www.makor.org. Subway: 1 to 66th St.

Radio City Music Hall ★ This stunning 6,200-seat Art Deco theater, with interior design by Donald Deskey, opened in 1932, and legendary Radio City continues to be a choice venue, where the theater alone adds a dash of panache to any performance. Star of the Christmas season is the Radio City Music Hall Christmas Spectacular, starring the legendary Rockettes. Visiting pop-chart toppers, from Neil Young to the Gipsy Kings, also perform here. Thanks to perfect acoustics and uninterrupted sightlines, there's hardly a bad seat in the house. The theater also hosts dance performances; family entertainment; a number of annual awards shows, such as the Essence Awards, the GQ Man of the Year Awards, and anything MTV is holding in town. 1260 Sixth Ave. (at 50th St.). ☎ 212/247-4777, or 212/307-7171 for Ticketmaster. www.radiocity.com or www.ticketmaster.com. Subway: B, D, F, V to 49th–50th sts./Rockefeller Center.

3 Live Rock, Jazz, Blues & More

Arlene's Grocery This casual Lower East Side club boasts a friendly bar and a good sound system; unfortunately, music isn't always free anymore, but the quality of the artists is usually pretty high, and the cover usually tops out at $7. Arlene's Grocery primarily serves as a showcase for bands looking for a deal or promoting their self-pressed record. The crowd is an easygoing mix of club-hoppers, rock fans looking for a new fix, and industry scouts looking for new blood. Monday nights the club hosts the popular "Hard Rock Karaoke," which is exactly what it sounds like. 95 Stanton St. (btwn Ludlow and Orchard sts.). ☎ 212/995-1652. www.arlenesgrocery.net. Subway: F to Second Ave.

B.B. King Blues Club & Grill This 550-seat venue is one of the prime anchors of Times Square's "new" 42nd Street. Despite its name, B.B. King's seldom sticks to the blues; what you're likely to find instead is a bill of pop, funk, and rock names, mainly from the past. The big-ticket talent runs the gamut from George Clinton and the P. Funk All Stars and John Mayall and the Bluesbreakers to Tower of Power to Jimmy Cliff and Delbert McClinton. A few more (relatively) esoteric acts such as Burt Bacharach and surf guitarist Dick Dale take the stage on occasion. Tourist-targeted pricing makes for an expensive night, word is that the food isn't as good as it was in the beginning, and seating policies can be convoluted, but there's no arguing with the quality of the talent. The Sunday gospel lunch is a slice of joy. 237 W. 42nd St. (btwn Seventh and Eighth aves.). ☎ 212/997-4144, or 212/307-7171 for tickets. www.bbkingblues.com. Subway: A, C, E, Q, W, 1, 2, 3, 7, 9 to 42nd St.

Blue Note The Blue Note has attracted some of the biggest names in jazz to its intimate setting. Those who've played here include just about everyone of note: Dave Brubeck, Ray Charles, B.B. King, Manhattan Transfer, Dr. John, George Duke, Chick Corea, David Sanborn, Arturo Sandoval, Gato Barbieri, and the superb Ahmad Jamal. The sound system is excellent, and every seat in the house has a sightline to the stage. However, in recent years, the hard edge that once was the Blue Note has faded. Softer, smoother jazz is the domain now, so if that's your thing, enjoy. But be warned: Prices are astronomical. There are two shows per night, and dinner is served. 131 W. 3rd St. (at Sixth Ave.). ☎ 212/475-8592. www.bluenote.net. Subway: A, B, C, D, E, F, V to W. 4th St.

Bowery Ballroom Run by the same people behind the Mercury Lounge (see below), the Bowery space is bigger, accommodating a crowd of 500 or so. The stage is big and raised to allow good sightlines from every corner. The sound couldn't be better, and Art Deco details give the place a sophistication that doesn't come easy to general-admission halls. The balcony has its own bar and seating alcoves. This place is a favorite with alt-rockers like Travis, Steve Earle, Rinoceros, The Delgados, and Toshi Reagon, as well as more established acts (Neil Finn, Patti Smith, Joan Jett & the Blackhearts), who thrive in an intimate setting. Save on the service charge by buying advance tickets at Mercury's box office. 6 Delancey St. (at Bowery). ☎ 212/533-2111. www.boweryballroom.com. Subway: F to Delancey St.; J, M, Z to Bowery.

Dizzy's Club Coca-Cola ★ This beautiful, cozy new jazz club is part of the Jazz at Lincoln Center complex in the Time Warner Center on Columbus Circle. Acoustics and sightlines are excellent and, though not nearly as dramatic as the window in the complex's Allen Room, there is a window behind the stage with views of Central Park and the city. The club attracts an interesting mix of both up-and-coming and established bands. Every Monday the club features the Upstarts, a student showcase from local schools including Juilliard and the Manhattan School of Music. My only complaint is the high $30 cover every day of the week—even for the Upstarts. Time Warner Center, 60th St. and Broadway. ☎ 212/258-9595. www.jalc.org. Subway: A, B, C, D, 1, 9 to Columbus Circle.

The Knitting Factory New York's premier avant-garde music venue has four separate spaces, each showcasing performances ranging from experimental jazz and acoustic folk to spoken word and poetry readings to out-there multimedia works. Regulars who use the Knitting Factory as their lab of choice include former Lounge Lizard John Lurie; around-the-bend experimentalist John Zorn; guitar gods Vernon Reid, Eliot Sharp, and David Torn; innovative sideman (to Tom Waits and Elvis Costello, among others) Marc Ribot; and Television's Richard Lloyd. (If these names mean nothing to you, chances are good that The Knitting Factory is not for you.) The schedule is peppered with edgy star turns from the likes of Yoko Ono, Taj Mahal, Faith No More's Mike Patton, and Lou Reed. There are often two showtimes a night in the pleasing main performance space, so it's easy to work a show around other activities. The Old Office Lounge offers an extensive list of microbrews and free live entertainment. 74 Leonard St. (btwn Broadway & Church St.). ☎ 212/219-3132. www.knittingfactory.com. Subway: 1 to Franklin St.

Mercury Lounge The Merc is everything a top-notch live-music venue should be: unpretentious, extremely civilized, and outfitted with a killer sound system. The rooms themselves are nothing special: a front bar and an intimate back-room performance space with a low stage and a few tables along the wall. The calendar is filled with a mix of accomplished local rockers and national acts like Fat Possum, the Mekons, and Sleepy Jackson. The crowd is grown-up and easygoing. The only downside is that it's consistently packed thanks to the high quality of the entertainment and all-around pleasing nature of the experience. 217 E. Houston St. (at Essex St./Ave. A). ☎ 212/260-4700. www.mercuryloungenyc.com. Subway: F to Second Ave.

Smoke ★★ Value A superstar in the New York jazz scene and the best place to hear it on the Upper West Side, Smoke is a welcome throwback to the informal, intimate clubs of the past—the kind of place that on most nights you can just walk in and experience solid jazz. And though it seats only 65, for no more than a $30 cover, Smoke still manages to attract big names like the Steve Turre Quartet, Ron Carter, Eddie Henderson, and John Hicks. Sunday through Thursday there is no cover. On Sundays, the club features Latin jazz; every Tuesday, I get to hear my favorite Hammond organ grooves with Mike LeDonne. There are three sets nightly and a very popular happy hour. 2751 Broadway (btwn 105th and 106th sts.). ☎ 212/864-6662. www.smokejazz.com. Subway: 1 to 103rd St.

S.O.B.'s If you like your music hot, hot, hot, visit S.O.B.'s, the city's top world-music venue, specializing in Brazilian, Caribbean, and Latin sounds. The packed house dances and sings along nightly to calypso, samba, mambo, African drums, reggae, or other global grooves, united in the high-energy, feel-good vibe. Bookings include top-flight performers from around the globe; Astrud Gilberto, Mighty Sparrow, King Sunny Ade, Eddie Palmieri, Buckwheat Zydeco, Beausoleil, and Baaba Maal are only a few of the names who have graced this lively stage. The room's Tropicana Club style has island pizazz that carries through to the Caribbean-influenced cooking and extensive tropical-drinks menu. This place is so popular that it's an excellent idea to book in advance, especially if you'd like table seating. Monday is dedicated to Latin sounds, Tuesday to reggae, Friday features a late-night French Caribbean dance party, while Saturday is reserved for samba. 204 Varick St. (at Houston St.). ☎ 212/243-4940. www.sobs.com. Subway: 1 to Houston St.

Uptown Jazz Lounge at Minton's Playhouse ★ Finds The big neon sign on 118th Street remains intact and is a cultural landmark. The 1948-mural behind the stage of a woman sleeping off a drunk while four musicians jam by her side looks as fresh as it ever did even after a 30-year hiatus while Minton's Playhouse was shuttered. In 2006, the club, where Miles Davis, Charlie Christian, Dizzy Gillespie, Coleman Hawkins, and house pianist, Thelonius Monk once reigned, reopened. The look is sparse; a few photos cover the burnt orange walls; hard-backed chairs and formica-topped tables are scattered around the small room. But who cares? The music is straight-ahead jazz and the clientele is old school Harlem along with European and Japanese tourists. At press time, Patience Higgins and the Sugar Hill Quartet hold court every Wednesday, while Thursday headlines vocalist Gerald Hayes and the Qualified Gents. No cover Monday through Thursday. 208 W. 118th St (between St. Nicholas Ave. and Adam Clayton Powell Blvd.). ☎ 212/864-8346. www.uptownatmintons.com. Subway: B, C to 116th St.

The Village Vanguard ★★ What CBGB was to rock, The Village Vanguard is to jazz. One look at the photos on the walls will show you who's been through since 1935, from Coltrane, Miles, and Monk to recent appearances by Bill Charlap and Roy Hargrove. Expect a mix of established names and high-quality local talent, including the Vanguard's own jazz orchestra on Monday nights. The sound is great, but sightlines aren't, so come early for a front table. If you're looking for serious jazz, this is the place. 178 Seventh Ave. South (just below 11th St.). ☎ 212/255-4037. www.villagevanguard.net. Subway: 1, 2, 3, 9 to 14th St.

4 Cabaret

Cafe Carlyle ★ Cabaret doesn't get any better than this. This is where the late, great Bobby Short, held court for over 35 years. The club still attracts talents like Betty Buckley and Barbara Cook. The room is intimate and as swanky as they come. Expect a high tab—admission is $65 to $75 with a $30 per-person minimum; with dinner, two people could easily spend $300—but if you're looking for the best of the best, look no further. Value-minded cabaret fans can save by reserving standing room (which usually results in a spot at the bar) for just $35. On most Mondays, Woody Allen joins the Eddy Davis New Orleans Jazz Band on clarinet to swing Dixie-style ($85 cover). At the Carlyle Hotel, 35 East 76th St. (at Madison Ave.). ☎ 212/744-1600. Closed July–Aug. Subway: 6 to 77th St.

Feinstein's at The Regency Finds This intimate and elegant cabaret-style nightclub is the first from Grammy-winning song impresario Michael Feinstein. Cover charges can soar, but you can count on a memorable night of first-quality dining and song, and no other cabaret merges old-school cool and hipster appeal so well. Recent high-wattage talent has included Keely Smith, Patti LuPone, and the man himself. Call ahead to reserve; you can also buy tickets through Ticketmaster. At the Regency Hotel, 540 Park Ave. (at 61st St.). ☎ 212/339-4095, or 212/307-4100 for Ticketmaster. www.feinsteinsattheregency.com or www.ticketmaster.com. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 59th St.

The Oak Room Recently refurbished to recall its glory days, the Oak Room is one of the city's most intimate, elegant, and sophisticated spots for cabaret. Headliners include such first-rate talents as Andrea Marcovicci, Steve Ross, Dave Frishberg, the marvelous Julie Wilson, and cool-cat jazz guitarist John Pizzarelli, plus occasional lesser names that are destined for greatness. At the Algonquin Hotel, 59 W. 44th St. (btwn Fifth and Sixth aves.). ☎ 212/840-6800. Closed July–Aug. Subway: B, D, F, V to 42nd St.

5 Stand-Up Comedy

Carolines on Broadway Caroline Hirsch presents national headliners in her upscale Theater District showroom, which doesn't have a bad seat in the house. You're bound to recognize at least one or two of the established names and hot up-and-comers any given week, like Dave Chapelle, Janeane Garofalo, Colin Quinn, Bill Belamy, Kathy Griffin, Jimmie Walker ("Dyn-o-mite!"), Pauly Shore, or Jay Mohr. Monday is usually New Talent Night, while HOT97 radio hosts up-and-coming black comedians on select Tuesdays. 1626 Broadway (btwn 49th & 50th sts.). ☎ 212/757-4100. www.carolines.com. Subway: N, R to 49th St.; 1 to 50th St.

Comedy Cellar Finds This subterranean club is the venue of choice for stand-up fans in the know, thanks to the most consistently impressive lineups in the business. I'll always love the Comedy Cellar for introducing an uproariously funny unknown named Ray Romano to me some years back. 117 MacDougal St. (btwn Bleecker & W. 3rd sts.). ☎ 212/254-3480. www.comedycellar.com. Subway: A, B, C, D, E, F, V to W. 4th St. (use 3rd St. exit).

6 Bars & Cocktail Lounges

Remember: Smoking is prohibited in bars but allowed in outdoor spaces.

DOWNTOWN

Church Lounge The big, super-stylish Larry Bogdanow-designed atrium-lobby bar and restaurant at the Tribeca Grand Hotel is a great place to enjoy a top-flight cocktail and rub elbows with the neighborhood's chic locals (which include just about anybody who has business with Miramax). Dress well and call ahead to see what's on tap that evening if you want to experience the height of the action—around 11pm. 2 Sixth Ave. (at White & Church sts.). ☎ 212/519-6600. Subway: 1 to Franklin St.; A, C, E to Canal St.

Double Happiness Finds The only indicator to the subterranean entrance is a vertical WATCH YOUR STEP sign. Once through the door, you'll find a beautifully designed speak-easyish lounge with artistic nods to the neighborhood, plus a low-key vibe. The space is large, but a low ceiling and intimate nooks add a hint of romance. The fabulous food is from the upstairs restaurant, Wyanoka, so this is a great place to satisfy the munchies, too. Don't miss the green-tea martini, an inspired house creation. 173 Mott St. (btwn Grand & Broome sts.). ☎ 212/941-1282. Subway: 6 to Spring St.

Ear Inn Value There are many debates about which is the oldest bar in New York, and with its 1870s origins, Ear Inn is a serious contender for that crown. In super-chic SoHo, this pub is a welcome cranky relief. They pull an excellent pint of Guinness and make a surprisingly good margarita as well. On Saturday afternoon the poetry readings just might make you cry into your beer. In warm weather, tables are set up outside within exhaust distance of the nearby UPS depot. Note: Respect the no-cellphone policy or suffer the consequences. 326 Spring St. (btwn Greenwich & Washington sts.). ☎ 212/226-9060. Subway: C, E to Spring St.

Employees Only ★ Don't let the palm reader in the doorway of the non-descript exterior of this bar fool you; though if she reads your palm, I can guarantee she will predict that you will very soon savor a tantalizing beverage. Employees Only goes to great lengths to recreate a 1920's speakeasy with a tin ceiling and bartenders in period costume. But who needs gimmicks when the cocktails are as good as they are here? The employees have been well trained and drinks are done painstakingly and made with the freshest ingredients and top label liquors. The daiquiri I tried was so good, Hemingway would be proud. In fact, it's called the Hemingway Daiquiri. There is a full menu available, but skip the entrees and order a few of the very good appetizers to accompany your drinks, the best being the ample Serbian charcuterie platter. 510 Hudson St. (btwn Christopher and W. 10th sts.) ☎ 212/242-3021. www.employeesonlynyc.com. Subway: 1 to Christopher St.

KGB Bar This former Ukrainian social club boasts a Soviet-themed decor, but it now draws creative types who like the low-key boho vibe. There's also free entertainment almost every night, thanks to KGB's excellent, eclectic reading series, where a talented pack of up-and-coming and established writers read their prose in various genres (fiction, science fiction, poetry, and so on) to a receptive crowd starting at 7pm. Past readers have included playwright Tina Howe (Painting Churches), Janice Erlbaum (Girlbomb), and Dave King (The Ha-Ha). 85 E. 4th St. (btwn Second & Third aves.) ☎ 212/505-3360. www.kgbbar.com. Subway: 6 to Astor Place.

Pegu Club ★★ Mixologist and owner Audrey Saunders, formerly of Bemelmans Bar in the Carlyle Hotel, makes magic with cocktails. In 2005, she opened her own downtown gathering spot where she can showcase her immense talents. The cocktails here change seasonally and will astound you with their creativity. It helps that the staff uses fresh squeezed juices, homemade ginger beer and the largest assortment of bitters you will find anywhere. You know you are in serious cocktail heaven when your drinks are served with liquid condiments; your Pisco Punch needs a bit more sugar, you can squeeze a dropperful in. Or your Gin-Gin Mule just doesn't pack the citrus tang you would like, add a dash of lime. Unless it's salty peanuts or pretzels, I usually disdain bar food, but for the Pegu

Drinking with Ghosts

The ghosts are everywhere in New York. You might find them in the silent halls of some of the city's greatest structures, or maybe wandering through narrow downtown streets. But for me, the best place to find the ghosts is in a few of the city's more aged drinking establishments.

The "tavern" triumvirate is a good place to start when seeking out the ghosts. Pete's Tavern (129 E. 19th St., at Irving Place; ☎ 212/473-7676) claims to be the city's oldest continuing operating establishment. Warm up at Pete's on a winter night and after a few Guinneses, you might think you see O. Henry, a regular at Pete's over a hundred years ago, sitting alone and unkempt in a booth, sipping his beer in between creating stories like his famous 1906-written Christmas tale Gift of the Magi.

From Pete's you might want to venture to the West Village and the White Horse Tavern (567 Hudson St., at 11th St.; ☎ 212/243-9260). At this 1880s pub, through the maze of frat boys chugging pints, you might see a desolate figure, head on table from snoring, empty shot glasses in front of him. Could that be the ghost of Dylan Thomas, author of A Child's Christmas in Wales and White Horse regular who took his last sip at the legendary tavern in 1953? Or is it just another drunken yuppie?

McSorley's Old Ale House (15 E. 7th St., between Second and Third aves.; ☎ 212/473-9148) is over 140 years old and, while Pete's is the oldest tavern in New York, McSorley's Club's amazing Diver scallop mini burgers and addictive smoked trout deviled eggs, I will happily make an exception. 77 W. Houston St. 2nd Floor (at W. Broadway), ☎ 212/473-PEGU; www.peguclub.com. Subway: A, B, C, D, E, F, V to W. 4th St.

Rose Bar ★ I usually abhor bars that are "scenes;" where you need to be on a list to gain entry. But what Ian Schrager and artist Julian Schabel have created in the Gramercy Park Hotel makes going through the various humiliations it might take to get in almost worth it. The space is spectacular with rose-colored velvet chairs, original Warhols and Schnabels on the walls, a wood-burning fireplace, a red and white tile floor, and a billiards table you will claims to be the oldest “saloon.” Could someone please explain the difference? Not that it matters to a ghost. Here, if you can avoid the busloads of Greeks (not from Greece) who come to pay respects to their shrine, and visit on, say, a quiet, hot afternoon, you might think you see a tall, well-dressed man sitting at the bar taking notes, nursing an 8-ounce mug of ale. Could that be the ghost of New Yorker magazine writer Joseph Mitchell, author of Joe Gould’s Secret? And are those notes for his 1943 book, McSorley’s Wonderful Saloon? Well go up and ask him—before he disappears.

A few blocks north of Union Square, is the 1892-established Old Town Bar & Restaurant (45 E. 18th St., between Broadway and Park Ave. South; ☎ 212/529-6732). You might recognize the tin ceiling from the old Late Night with David Letterman opening; the Old Town has been the set for movies and television shows, but it’s never been gussied up for the cameras—the Old Town is the real deal. There are no celebrity ghosts to speak of at the Old Town, but whenever I come here, I see one. This ghost is familiar only to me. He is cramped into a table with a group of friends, a pint and one of the Old Town’s very good hamburgers in front of him. He is talking animatedly—a young man with big dreams. He looks confident and happy—as happy as a ghost could possibly look. But then I look in the mirror at my own reflection and the ghost disappears. He always does.

be too intimidated to approach. But sit on one of those plush chairs, sip your $20 cocktail, enjoy the flawless sound system commanded by top name DJs and for a few moments you might forget that you really don’t belong in this swanky, celebrity-laden environment. Reservations (and they are hard to get) are mandatory after 10pm and security is tight. 2 Lexington Ave (btwn 20th and 21st sts.). ☎ 212/920-3300. Subway: 6 to 23rd St.

Temple Bar One of the first comers to New York’s lounge scene, Temple Bar is still a gorgeous Deco hangout, with a long L-shaped bar leading to a seating area with velvet drapes, backlighting, and Sinatra crooning in the background. Cocktails don’t get any better than the classic martini (with just a kiss of vermouth) or the smooth-as-peignoir-silk Manhattan (Johnnie Walker Black, sweet vermouth, bitters). Bring a date—and feel free to invite me along. Look for the petroglyph-like lizards on the otherwise-unmarked facade. 332 Lafayette St. (just north of Houston St., on the west side of the street). ☎ 212/925-4242. Subway: 6 to Bleecker St.

Tips* Whiling Away the Happy Hours

Many of the city's best bars suddenly become more affordable from 4 to 8pm or thereabouts, when it's definitely a happy hour if you can snag one of those signature cocktails ($14 martinis, anyone?) at half-price or two-for-one; or maybe there's some free bar food, or another value-saving offer. Happy hour is a great time to experience those pricey places you've heard so much about. For information on happy hour at many of the city's watering holes, check www.sheckys.com or Murph's NYC Bar Guide at www.murphguide.com, updated daily.

MIDTOWN

The Ginger Man The big bait at this upscale beer bar is the 66 gleaming tap handles lining the wood-and-brass bar, dispensing everything from Sierra Nevada and Hoegaarden to cask-conditioned ales. The cavernous space has a clubby feel. The Cohiba fumes were ripe here before the smoking ban but the new nonsmoking laws have not stopped the crowds from coming to this popular Murray Hill hangout. 11 E. 36th St. (btwn Fifth & Madison aves.). ☎ 212/532-3740. Subway: 6 to 33rd St.

King Cole Bar The birthplace of the Bloody Mary, this theatrical spot may just be New York's most historic hotel bar. The Maxfield Parrish mural alone is worth the price of a classic cocktail (ask the bartender to tell you about the "hidden" meaning of the painting). The one drawback is the bar's small size; after-work hours and holiday times, the bar is jammed. At the St. Regis, 2 E. 55th St., at Fifth Ave. ☎ 212/744-4300. Subway: E, V to Fifth Ave.

Mickey Mantle's (Kids) Before Mickey Mantle's opened years ago, I was walking past the restaurant, peered into the window, and there was my boyhood idol, the Mick, sitting at the bar by himself. Through the window I waved—and he waved back. It made my day.

And though the food's not very good and the drinks are overpriced, I still have a soft spot for Mickey Mantle's and always will. With plenty of Yankee memorabilia on the walls and sports on all the televisions, it's an ideal place to watch a game, but stick with the basics: beer and burgers. 42 Central Park South (btwn Fifth & Sixth aves.). ☎ 212/688-7777. www.theswearingens.com/mick/mmrest.htm. Subway: F to 57th St.

Monkey Bar This legendary bar was recently renovated and looks better than ever. The swanky space is dolled up like a Hollywood supper club from the 1930s, the drinks are faultless, and the legendary monkey murals alone are worth a look. Skip the dining room and head to the piano bar for the ultimate Monkey Bar experience. At the Hotel Elysée, 60 E. 54th St. (btwn Madison & Park aves.). ☎ 212/838-2600. Subway: 6 to 51st St.

Russian Samovar ★ Yes it's a restaurant with Russian food, but the main attraction of this Theater District legend is the vodka. There are over 20 flavors of house-infused vodkas including dill, garlic, ginger, tarragon and, host and impresario Roman Kaplan's favorite, cranberry-lemon. Despite what it might do to you and how it will affect the plans you might have the next 24 hours, it's difficult to resist sampling many of them while listening to standards played by the house pianist. You might want to soften the bite of the vodka with a few appetizers like the Royal Fish Platter, a selection of smoked fish and a little caviar. Do not make this a pre-theater stop—you'll never make it to your show. 256 W. 52nd St. (btwn Eighth Ave. and Broadway). ☎ 212/757-0168. www.russiansamovar.com. Subway: 1 to 50th St.

Under the Volcano Finds If you've been shopping at Macy's or braving the lines at the Empire State Building and want (need?) a drink, one of the few choices in the area, but a good one, is this Mexican-themed tequila bar. The decor is Mexican folk with Frida Kahlo undertones, but the main attractions are the 16 varieties of tequila and smooth, potent margaritas. The bar features an excellent selection of aged rums. 12 E. 36th St. (btwn Fifth & Madison aves.). ☎ 212/213-0093. Subway: B, D, F, N, R to 34th St.

UPTOWN

All State Cafe Finds This subterranean pub is one of Manhattan's undiscovered treasures—the quintessential neighborhood “snugger.” It's easy to miss from the street, and the regulars like it that way. The All State attracts a grown-up neighborhood crowd drawn in by the casual ambience, the great burgers, and an outstanding jukebox. If

The New York Dive Experience

Not all of New York nightlife means bars and clubs with cover charges, expensive cocktails, beautiful people, and velvet ropes to keep you waiting in the cold. There are places that you should be rewarded for braving; old dark places where the drinks are cheap and the characters colorful. These are the dive bars and they are just as New York as their trendy counterparts. Here are some of my favorites; stop in one for a New York experience.

Jimmy's Corner, 140 W. 44th St., between Broadway and Sixth Avenue (☎ 212/221-9510). Owned by a former boxing trainer, Jimmy's is a tough-guy's joint that has been around for more than 30 years and survived the Disneyfication of Times Square. Pictures of boxers adorn the walls, and the jukebox plays lots of R&B and '70s disco. In the pre-smoking ban days, the smoke would get so thick in Jimmy's you needed night goggles to see through the haze. Beer is cheap and drinks aren't fancy. Skip the theme bars and restaurants in the area and go for an after-theater pop at Jimmy's instead.

Rudy's Bar & Grill, 627 Ninth Ave., between 44th and 45th streets (☎ 212/974-9169). This Hell's Kitchen establishment is no secret; its happy hour is legendary and the small place is usually packed with slackers sucking up cheap beer, including the house brand, Rudy's Red, a weak brew served in a huge plastic cup for $3. My advice is to get here before happy hour, grab a seat on one of the few broken banquettes, and keep your eyes open for the hot-dog guy who gives out free hot dogs. You'll need one to balance out a bucket of Rudy's Red. In the summer, Rudy's opens its cement garden for drinks "alfresco."

you're lucky, you'll get the round table by the fire. 250 W. 72nd St. (btwn Broadway & West End Ave.). ☎ 212/874-1883. Subway: 1, 2, 3 to 72nd St.

Bemelmans Bar This is my choice as New York's best hotel bar. It has everything you want from a hotel bar: white-coated service; lush seating with dark romantic corners to sink into; a nice mix of locals and guests; and incredible cocktails, like the Old Cuban, a mojito topped with champagne. The bar is named after children's book illustrator Ludwig Bemelmans, who created the Madeline Subway Inn, 143 E. 60th St., at Lexington Avenue (☎ 212/223-8929). My all-time favorite dive, the Subway has been around for over 60 years, and I believe some of the regulars have been on their stools the whole time. The red neon sign beckons from outside while inside, no matter what time of day, it's dark. The bartender is ancient and until recently served Schaeffer on tap. The demise of Schaeffer was troubling, but not much else has changed. The booths are still wobbly and the models of Godzilla and E.T. along with other dusty junk continue to decorate the shelves behind the bar. The last time I visited, I was barred from entering the men's room by police who were patting down one of the regulars during a drug bust. You might find workers from the upscale stores in the neighborhood and writers searching for "material" slumming at the Subway, but this joint remains the pinnacle of divedom.

Tap a Keg, 2731 Broadway, between 103rd and 104th streets (☎ 212/749-1734). This dog-friendly establishment earned itself Hall of Fame dive status when, on a recent visit, one of man's best friends chose the middle of the bar's floor as the perfect spot to leave a mound of affection that remained untouched by both the dog's clueless owner and the bar's unconcerned bartender. Tap a Keg claims to be a "Hell of a Joint," and there is no doubt of that. If allowing free reign to dogs doesn't bother you, then you'll certainly enjoy the 7-hour happy hour with pints for about $3 and the regular gathering of wizened, disheveled characters.

books after he painted the whimsical mural here. At the Carlyle Hotel, 35 E. 76th St. (at Madison Ave.). ☎ 212/744-1600. Subway: 6 to 77th St.

Creole Tucked away in the heart of El Barrio (also known as east Harlem) is a relatively new and welcome addition to the uptown music scene. Creole is an intimate bar/restaurant that features top-notch jazz, Latin, R&B, and on Sunday, gospel. Sit at the bar or enjoy the music while chowing down on very good Southern/Cajun specialties—the gumbo might be the best in the city. Entertainment

Cocktails Alfresco (Who's Al Fresco?)

Food and drink always do taste better alfresco. Here are some of my favorite places for cocktails out of doors.

The outdoor space at rowdy Jeremy's Ale House, 228 Front St. (☎ 212/964-3537; www.jeremysalehouse.com), near the South Street Seaport, is no fairy tale, but it does have one of the best views of the Brooklyn Bridge. Maybe that's because the bar is practically under the bridge (on the Manhattan side). Jeremy's is so close to the river you may think you smell the sea, but what you are really smelling is the calamari and clams in the deep fryers and gallons of Coors beer, which are served in 32-ounce Styrofoam cups.

Some of the best outdoor drinking can be found at a few select hotels. The best of the best, way downtown at the southern tip of Manhattan, is the Rise Bar (★) at the Ritz-Carlton New York, Battery Park, 2 West St., just north of Battery Place (☎ 212/344-0800). On the 14th floor of the hotel, the bar boasts incomparable views of Lady Liberty and New York Harbor from the massive waterfront terrace.

For the more trendy set, where the eye candy is not just the spectacular views, take the elevator up to the top of the Hotel Gansevoort, 18 Ninth Ave., at 13th Street (☎ 212/206-6700) to Plunge, where the you can gaze out at New Jersey, inhale the begins at 8:30, but you might want to venture in a little early for Creole's fun happy hour from 5 to 7pm. 2167 Third Ave. (at 118th St.). ☎ 212/876-8838. www.creolenyc.com. Subway: 6 to 116th St.

The Den (★ Finds) For not only the most creative cocktails north of 96th Street, but also the most imaginative drink names in all of Manhattan, come uptown to the fun, funky Den. Here you can sip concoctions like the "Pimp Slap," "Sex in the Inner City," "Bahama Baby Mama Drama," and the "Harlem Ice Tea," while watching a blaxploitation flick off the bar/restaurant's brick wall. Don't ask me what's in the drinks, just know that they are colorful, sweet, and very potent. On Saturday, the brick wall is the screen for kung fu movies, while on Wednesday, it's live old- and new-school R&B. To fortify yourself from those drinks, sample The Den's kitchen creations like the "Not ya mama's chicken and waffles," "Bruce LeeRoy's popcorn shrimp," "Mississippi Burnin' wings," or a "soul chlorine fumes from the hotel's pool (which only guests can use), all the while sipping pricey cocktails. A few blocks north at the Maritime Hotel, 363 W. 16th St., at Ninth Avenue, the scene on the roof at Cabanas (☎ 212/242-4300) is like something out of Hollywood. In fact, you'll probably recognize a few Hollywood denizens sunning themselves with colorful drinks, umbrella stirrers and all, balanced on their abnormally firm abs. Uptown, in the heart of Midtown, the Pen-Top Bar at the classic grande-dame Peninsula Hotel, 700 Fifth Ave., at 55th Street (☎ 212/956-2888), offers views of the glittering neighboring spires and the bustle of Fifth Avenue below that are not only calming but romantic, if that is actually possible.

One of my favorite parks is Riverside Park, and two of the reasons I love it are the 79th Street Boat Basin Café, 79th Street at the Hudson River (☎ 212/496-5542; www.boatbasincafe.com), where you can sip a drink and watch the boats bob on the river as the sun sets, and Hurley's Hudson Beach Café, Riverside Park and 103rd Street (☎ 917/370-3448), where beach volleyball games and stunning sunsets are the entertainment, marred only by the constant automobile buzz of the nearby West Side Highway.

roll," The Den's take on sushi stuffed with, not raw fish, but BBQ pulled pork. 2150 Fifth Ave. (btwn 131st & 132nd sts.). ☎ 212/234-3045. www.thedenharlem.com. Subway: 3 to 135th St.

Dublin House For years, like a welcoming beacon, the Dublin House's neon harp has blinked invitingly. This old pub is a no-frills Irish saloon and the perfect spot for a drink after visiting the Museum of Natural History or Central Park. There's a long, narrow barroom up front and a bigger room in the back that's good for groups. Original wood veneer detail remains, adding to the pub's charm. The Guinness is cheap and drawn perfectly by the able and sometimes crusty bartenders. Best enjoyed in the late afternoon or early evening when the regulars populate the bar. Stay away on weekend nights and St. Patrick's Day when the place is overrun with amateurs: frat boys and sorority girls on pub crawls. 225 W. 79th St. (btwn Broadway & Amsterdam Ave.). ☎ 212/874-9528. Subway: 1 to 79th St.

Great Hall Balcony Bar (Moments) One of Manhattan's best cocktail bars is only open on Friday and Saturday—and only from 4 to 8:30pm. The Metropolitan Museum of Art transforms the lobby's mezzanine level into a cocktail-and-classical music lounge twice weekly, offering an only-in-New York experience. The music is provided by a grand piano and string quartet. You'll have to pay the $10 "requested contribution," but the galleries are open until 9pm. At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Fifth Ave., at 82nd St. ☎ 212/535-7710. www.metmuseum.org. Subway: 4, 5, 6 to 86th St.

7 Dance Clubs & Party Scenes

New York nightlife starts late. With the exception of places that have scheduled performances, clubs stay almost empty until about 11pm. Don't depend on plastic—bring cash, and plan on dropping a wad at most places. Cover charges run anywhere from $7 to $30, and often get more expensive as the night wears on.

Black Formerly known as Exit, this space has been called the "supermall of nightclubs," and for good reason—it covers 45,000 square feet and is able to accommodate more than 5,000 partiers. Any velvet-rope scene is pure posturing. The main floor is a mammoth atrium with a DJ booth—usually housing the top talent of the moment spinning tunes—suspended above. The space was made for crazy carnival acts like Antigravity, a bizarre clubland take on the Flying Wallendas. Upstairs is a warren of VIP rooms, each with its own DJ. With a capacity this big, expect clubgoers of all stripes to show up on any given night. 610 W. 56th St. (btwn Eleventh & Twelfth aves.). ☎ 212/582-8282. www.exit2nightclub.com. Subway: A, B, C, D, 1 to 59th St./Columbus Circle.

Bungalow 8 This is the ultimate in dance-club extravagance. Here drinks might cost as much as a week at your hotel. All the cut-throat tactics learned on The Apprentice or Survivor might not help to gain entry to this palace. 515 W. 27th St. (btwn Tenth and Eleventh aves.). ☎ 212/629-3333. Subway: C, E to 23rd St.

Cafe Wha? You'll find a carefree crowd dancing in the aisles of this casual basement club just about any night of the week. From Wednesday through Sunday, the stage features the house's own Wha Band, which does an excellent job of cranking out crowd-pleasing covers of familiar rock-'n'-roll hits from the '70s, '80s, and '90s. Monday night is the popular Brazilian Dance Party, while Tuesday night is Classic Funk Night. On the weekends, expect to be surrounded by lots of Jersey kids and out-of-towners, but so what? Reservations are a good idea.

The cover runs from free to $10. 115 MacDougal St. (btwn Bleecker & W. 3rd sts.). ☎ 212/254-3706. www.cafewha.com. Subway: A, B, C, D, E, F, V to W. 4th St.

Cain At Cain the theme is Africa—South Africa to be specific. The front door, if you gain entry, has elephant-trunk handles, there are zebra hides everywhere, and the big game is celebrity-spotting. The DJ's spin energetic house music to keep the hordes moving, but you might be better off sampling one of the club's excellent cocktails in the "premium seating lounge." God knows what it takes to get a seat there. 544 W. 27th St. (btwn Tenth & Eleventh aves.). ☎ 212/947-8000. Subway: C, E to 23rd St.

Cielo At Cielo you'll find the best sound system of any small club in town. House is big here and they bring in some of the best DJs from around the globe. The renowned Louis Vega is the DJ on Wednesday. There's a sunken dance floor and an authentic, glittering disco ball rotating above. What more could you want? 18 Little W. 12th St. (btwn Ninth Ave. & Washington St.). ☎ 212/645-5700. www.cieloclub.com. Subway: A, C, E, to 14th St.; L to Eighth Ave.

Club Shelter House-heads flock to this old-school disco. The big draw is the "Saturday Night Shelter Party," when late-1980s house music takes over. The crowd is racially and sexually diverse and dress is not fancy; wear whatever is comfortable for doing some heavy sweating on the dance floor. 20 W. 39th St. (btwn Fifth & Sixth aves.). ☎ 212/719-4479. www.clubshelter.com. Subway: B, D, F, Q, V, 7 to 42nd St.

Pacha No, you are not on exotic Ibiza, but in Hell's Kitchen, New York. But enter Pacha and wade through the club's four levels, marvel at the palm trees, ogle discreetly the bikini-clad gogo girls dancing in the red-lit showers and you'll for a few hours be transported somewhere a little less hellish than Hell's Kitchen. 618 W. 46th St (btwn 11th Ave and the West Side Hwy.). ☎ 212/209-7500. www.pachany.com. Subway: A, C, E, 7 to 42nd St.

13 Value This little lounge is a great place to dance the night away. It's stylish but unpretentious, with a roster of fun weekly parties. Sunday night's Britpop fest Shout! lives on, as popular as ever—and with no cover. The rest of the week runs the gamut from '70s and '80s New Wave and glam nights to progressive house and trance to poetry slams and performance art. If there's a cover, it's usually $5, occasionally $7 or $10. Happy hour offers two-for-one drinks (no cover) from 4 to 8pm. 35 E. 13th St. (btwn Broadway and University Place), 2nd floor. ☎ 212/979-6677. www.bar13.com. Subway: 4, 5, 6, L, N, R, Q, W to 14th St./Union Sq.

A hotel can close for all kinds of reasons.

Our Guarantee ensures that if your hotel's undergoing construction, we'll let you know in advance. In fact, we cover your entire travel experience. See www.travelocity.com/guarantee for details.

There's a parking lot where my ocean view should be.

À la place de la vue sur l'océan, me voilà avec une vue sur un parking.

Anstatt Meerblick habe ich Sicht auf einen Parkplatz.

Al posto della vista sull'oceano c'è un parcheggio.

No tengo vista al mar porque hay un parque de estacionamiento.

Há um parque de estacionamento onde deveria estar a minha vista do oceano.

Ett parkeringsområde har byggts på den plats där min utsikt över oceanen borde vara.

Er ligt een parkeerterrein waar mijn zee uitzicht zou moeten zijn.

هنالك موقف للسيارات مكان ما يجب ان يكون المنظر الخلاب المطل على المحيط .

眼前に広がる紺碧の海・・・じゃない。窓の外は駐車場！

停车场的位罝应该是我的海景所在。
